This publication provides an in-depth look at practice and procedure at the Supreme Court of Canada. The authors include a former Executive Legal Officer to Chief Justice Lamer and a former law clerk to LaForest, and collectively as lawyers, they have worked on hundreds of Supreme Court matters as either counsel or agent. Intended to be a comprehensive research and working tool for practitioners, the book brings readers through each step of the process beginning with applying for leave to appeal. In doing so, it offers a substantive view of the law along with practical guidance on the issues that can arise in the leave to appeal and appeal process. Designed to be a primary source of the statute and case law with respect to practice at the Supreme Court, the text also includes important legislation, rules, guidelines, forms and practice directions. The book also contains a “Year in Review”: an annual survey of all the law from the Supreme Court including appeal judgments, oral judgments, significant motions and leaves to appeal granted. Subscribers will appreciate the analysis of the leading cases, their practical implications for practitioners, and the identification of emerging issues.

What’s New in this Update:

A Year in Review covering leaves to appeal and appeal judgments from 2021 has been added. A Notice to Profession titled “November 2021 — Interventions” has been added and commentary on interventions has been updated accordingly. The Court appointed a new Registrar on Dec. 17, 2021 and biographic information for her has been added.

Highlights:

- Notice to the Profession — The Court released a Notice to the Profession with respect to interveners. We expect to see a slight change in how the Court approaches interventions.
- New Registrar — On Dec. 17, 2021, Chantal Carbonneau was appointed to be the new Registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada.
- Year in Review — 2021 — The Year in Review provides summaries of every appeal judgment, oral judgment and leave to appeal granted in 2021.
