

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements / iii

Dedication/ v

Contributors / vi

Introduction / 1

Kim Brooks

Tax Justice

1. The Politics of Fairness: Income Tax in Canada Before 1917 / 15
Elsbeth Heaman
2. The Politics of Carter-era Tax Reform: A Revisionist Account / 31
Shirley Tillotson
3. Drawing the Boundaries of Tax Justice / 53
Allison Christians
4. Tax Levels, Tax Mixes and Income Redistribution in Canada and Selected OECD Countries Since Carter / 81
Thaddeus Hwong

Base Reform

5. The Carter Report's Corporate Income Tax Proposals: Why They Were Rejected and an Assessment of the Current Canadian System as an Imperfect Alternative / 115
Kirk A. Collins and Tim Edgar
6. The Carter Commission and the Value-Added Tax (VAT): A Prescient Review of the VAT Before its Time had Come / 155
Kathryn James
7. Revisiting the Carter Commission's International Tax Work / 179
Arthur J. Cockfield and Catherine Brown
8. Convergence, Divergence, and the Limits of Tax Globalization: The Canadian Experience / 199
Michael A. Livingston

Human Relationships

9. “Beyond Conjuality”: Time for the Tax System to Take that Concept Seriously / 207
Claire Young
10. Views of Dependency in the Tax System: The Minimal Changes over the Past 50 Years / 221
Tamara Larre
11. As the Baby-Boomers Age, How Should They be Taxed?: The “Old” Age Tax Credit and “New” Age-Dependent Taxation / 239
Faye L. Woodman
12. Taxing Me or We: Yet Another Look at the Carter Commission’s Recommendation for Joint Returns / 265
Chris Sprysak

Administration and Enforcement

13. Settlement and Compromise in Canadian Income Tax Law Since Carter / 295
Colin Jackson
 14. Noncharitable Nonprofit Organizations in Canada / 311
Lori McMillan
 15. Assessing the Fairness of Tax Avoidance: The Need to Consider Economic Substance / 329
Carl MacArthur
- Index / 353