I. LEGAL SYSTEM

§ MY:1 In general

Malaysia is a federation which was formed in September 1963 as an amalgam of the Federation of Malaya (an independent federation of the 4 Federated and 5 Unfederated Malay States, and the former British settlements of Penang and Malacca) and the former British colonies of Singapore, Sarawak and North Borneo (Sabah). Malaysia currently consists of 13 states and the Federal Territories of Kuala Lumpur, Putrajaya and Labuan. Singapore seceded in August 1965.

Malaysia has adopted the parliamentary democracy and constitutional monarchy form of government with the King (Yang di Pertuan Agong) as the head of state and the Prime Minister as the head of government. The King is selected every 5 years from the 9 rulers of the Malay States.

Malaysia has a Federal Constitution and 13 state constitutions. At the federal level, Malaysia has a bicameral legislature (the Parliament) comprising of the Senate (Dewan Negara) as the upper house and the House of Representatives (Dewan Rakyat) as the lower house and a federal government. Elections to the House of Representatives are held every 5 years. The cabinet consists of members of the House of Representatives and is headed by a Prime Minister. At the state level, there is a unicameral legislature (the State Legislative Assembly) and a state government headed by a Chief Minister.

The Federal Constitution is contained in the Federation of Malaya

Agreement 1957 between Her Britannic Majesty and the Rulers of the Federated and Unfederated Malay States. Under this agreement, the Federation of Malaya was formed. The Federation consisted of the Federated and Unfederated Malay States, Penang and Malacca.

The Federal Constitution was given the force of law by the Federal Constitution Ordinance 1957.

Under the Federal Constitution, the Parliament may exercise legislative powers over matters listed in the Federal and Concurrent Lists while the State Legislative Assemblies have legislative powers over matters listed in the State and Concurrent Lists. The legislative powers of the State Legislative Assemblies extend mainly to cover Islamic matters and land. The Concurrent List refers to matters over which both the Parliament and the State Legislative Assembly have legislative powers. In case of an inconsistency, a federal law prevails over a state law provided that the Parliament has power to legislate on the subject matter.

Under the Federal List, trade and commerce are within the exclusive legislative powers of the Parliament. As the expression of trade and commerce is wide enough to include securities, securities regulation is governed by federal laws.

Given the historical background to the formation of Malaysia, it is not surprising that Malaysian law has adopted many English legal principles. Among these is the English doctrine of judicial precedent (stare decisis).

Under the doctrine of judicial precedent, a decision of a higher court in the hierarchy e.g. the Federal Court (formerly the Supreme Court) is binding on the lower court (e.g. the Court of Appeal). Similarly, the Court of Appeal's decision binds the High Court. The High Court, in turn, binds sessions courts and other lower courts (in particular, magistrate courts and penghulu's courts).

The Civil Law Act 1956 provides for the express reception of English common law and equity as at 7 April 1956 (except for Sabah and Sarawak where the reception is extended to statutes of general application and the cut-off dates are 1 December 1951 and 12 December 1949, respectively). The application of English common law and equity is subject to the condition that it shall be applied only insofar as the local circumstances and inhabitants permit and subject to such qualifications as local circumstances render necessary.

This enables the courts to apply various indigenous sources of law including Malay, Chinese and Hindu customary laws and Muslim law. Such indigenous sources of law apply mainly in the areas of personal law (e.g., marriage, custodian of a child and inheritance) and religious matters.

II. SECURITIES REGULATORY SCHEME

§ MY:2 In general

Section 27 of the Central Bank of Malaysia Act 2009 established the dual financial system in Malaysia which consists of the conventional and the Islamic financial systems. The conventional and Islamic capital markets run in parallel.

The Malaysian laws that regulate the securities industry have their origin in corresponding English and Australian laws. The Malaysian Companies Act 1965 (now repealed and replaced by the Companies Act 2016), for example, was based on the Companies Act 1961 of the various Australian states which, in turn, originated from the English Companies Act 1948. The Securities Industry Act 1983 (now repealed and replaced by the Capital Market and Services Act 2007) had its origins in the corresponding Australian statute. The former Malaysian Code on Take-overs and Mergers 1987 (now replaced by the Code on Take-Overs and Mergers 2016) was modeled on the London City Code on Take-overs and Mergers.

Legislation governing the securities industry in Malaysia has been extensively amended since the Asian financial crisis of 1997-98. An amendment to the securities regulatory regime in 2007 resulted in the enactment and passing of the Capital Market and Services Act 2007 (CMSA 2007), which essentially combined the relevant securities law into a single omnibus Act. Most of the CMSA 2007 came into force on 28 September 2007.[1]

The CMSA 2007 consolidated the Securities Industry Act 1983 (SIA 1983), the Futures Industry Act 1993 (FIA 1993) and Part IV of the Securities Commission Malaysia Act 1993[2] which deals with fund raising activities. The CMSA 2007 is supported by the Capital Markets and Services Regulations 2012 which replaced the Capital Markets and Services Regulations 2007. The CMSA 2007 is also supported by the Licensing Handbook and the Guidelines on Recognised Markets which came into effect on 11 December 2015. These Guidelines supersede two earlier Guidelines, viz, Guidelines on Regulations of Markets issued in 2007 and Guidelines on Regulation of Markets under section 34 of CMSA 2007 which came into force in February 2015.

In September 2015, amendments to the CMSA and the Securities Commission Act came into effect. The amendments to the securities laws were made to facilitate innovative fundraising structures, enhance investor protection, clarify the responsibilities of issuers and advisers and expand the scope of the SC's supervisory powers. The CMSA amendment introduced a new market framework to facilitate the establishment of alternative trading platforms including equity

[Section MY:2]

[1]The provisions relating to takeovers, mergers and compulsory acquisitions contained in Division 2 Part IV were not in force until 1st April 2010. Before Division 2 was brought into effect in April 2010, the then existing provisions in the Securities Commission Act 1993 regulated takeovers and mergers along with the 1998 Code on Takeovers and Mergers.

crowdfunding (ECF). On 5 February 2024, the SC released the Guidelines on Categories of Sophisticated Investors. The Guidelines are in force from the date of their publication, and replace Part I of Schedules 6 and 7 of the CMSA with new criteria in which securities law categories of Sophisticated Investors will be set out in the Guidelines. The Guidelines maintain the previous categories, i.e., Accredited Investor, High Net-Worth Individuals (HNWI), and High-Net Worth Entity (HNWE); however, it introduces additional criteria, including academic qualifications and expanded definitions for HNWI, such as considering the assets or income of a child. The initiatives would be geared toward increasing the number of sophisticated investors and enhancing investment options beyond what the Malaysian capital market can currently offer.[3]

Malaysia seeks to pre-empt an "ad hoc reactionary approach towards policy and regulatory development" by way of a ten-year strategic plan for capital market development.[4] Thus, in 2001, the Securities Commission (SC) released the Capital Market Masterplan (CMM) charting the future development of the Malaysian capital market.[5] The 152 recommendations contained in this document indicated further changes to Malaysia's securities regime. For example, as of 30 June 2003, 39 of the 152 recommendations in the CMM had been implemented. Progress reports on the implementation of the CMM can be viewed on the Securities Commission's website.[6] In 2011, the SC published the Capital Market Masterplan 2 (CMP2).

Two main themes have dominated Malaysian securities regulation in recent years. First, Malaysia has been progressively moving from a system of merit-based regulation (MBR) to one of disclosure-based regulation (DBR) for fund raising. On 31 March 2003, the then chairman of the Malaysian Securities Commission, Datuk Ali Abdul Kadir, announced that the transition to a disclosure-based framework for fund-raising was complete.[7] Second, Malaysia has sought to progressively transfer the legal regime relating to fund raising from the CA

[6]See, for example, Securities Commission, "Update on the implementation of the Capital Market Masterplan as at 30 June 2003." Available at www.sc.com.my/html/cmp/cmp_implement.html.

[7]Securities Commission Press Release of 31 March 2003. This statement requires some qualification. Under section 32 of the SCMA, all proposals in relation to securities must be submitted to the SC who may approve or reject them on such 1965 to the Securities Commission Malaysia Act (SCMA) 1993. Thus, it is the SC who must approve and register all prospectuses (although, generally speaking, these must also be lodged with the Registrar of Companies (ROC): section 43 of the SCMA 1993.).

It is important to note that Malaysian company law, like Australia, maintains a distinction between private companies, public companies and to a certain extent public listed companies. Under Division 7 of Part II of the CA 2016, a private company is a company which:

(a) is limited by shares and restricts the transfer of its shares;

(b) Limits the number of shareholders to no more than 50 shareholders, and,

(c) Prohibits any invitation to the public to subscribe for share and debentures.[8]

Prima facie, then, no private company can be incorporated without these restrictions. As to the fund-raising prohibition, however, note that debentures of a private company are not exempted under Schedule 5 of the CMSA 2007 from the prior approval requirements of section 212 of the CMSA 2007. This prohibition means that although private companies are prohibited from making any invitation to the public to subscribe for debentures (by virtue of the restriction in CA 2016), they may make a private placement of debentures (debt securities) with the prior approval of the SC.

§ MY:3 Securities laws

The term "securities laws" is defined in section 2 of the Securities Commission Malaysia Act (SCMA) 1993 (SCMA 1993). It means, the SCMA 1993, the Securities Industry (Central Depositories) Act 1991 [Act 453] and the Capital Markets and Services Act 2007. Section 2A of the SCMA 1993 states that any reference to "this Act" shall, unless otherwise expressly stated, include a reference to any regulations, rules, orders, notifications or other subsidiary legislation made under the SCMA 1993. Thus, legislation on securities law includes statutes, regulations, rules, orders, notifications and guidelines.

The CMSA 2007, has now consolidated:

(a) the Securities Industry Act 1983 (SIA 1983) which formerly provided for a scheme of licensing of securities dealers, investment advisers and fund managers and proscribed various unfair practices relating to securities dealings; and

(b) the Futures Industry Act 1993 (FIA 1993); and

terms and conditions as it deems fit. Since a proposal may include a proposed prospectus, it is at least arguable that a form of MBR remains by virtue of the SC approval process. Note that capital raising proposals formed the bulk of the approvals given by the SC in the second quarter of 2003: see SC Press Release of 17 July 2003.

In addition to the CMSA 2007, the securities industry is now primarily regulated by the following laws:

(a) the SCMA 1993 which established the Malaysian Securities Commission (SC) and regulations made under this Act;

(b) the Companies Act 2016 (CA 2016) and the Companies Regulations 2017 [P.U. (A) 37/2017] which regulates corporate matters generally together with the Companies Commission of Malaysia Act 2001;

(c) the Securities Industry (Central Depositories) Act 1991 that forms the basis for the scripless trading of shares listed on the Kuala Lumpur Stock Exchange (KLSE) and the Malaysian Exchange of Securities Dealing and Automated Quotation Bhd (MESDAQ) which now is known as the ACE market;

(d) the Securities Commission exemptions, modifications and guidelines;

(e) the Accounting Standards via the Financial Reporting Act 1997; and

(f) the Bursa Securities Listing Requirements and Rules of Bursa Securities.

These laws and rules are supplemented by a number of codes, rules and guidelines. By way of example, these include the following:

(a) the Code on Take-overs and Mergers 2016;

(b) the Rules on Take-Overs, Mergers and Compulsory Acquisitions

(c) the *Malaysian Code on Corporate Governance 20*17;

(d) the Policies and Guidelines on Issue/Offer of Securities (Revised edition: 2008); and

(e) the Prospectus Guidelines (Revised edition: 30 November 2017).

The term "sophisticated investors" has been redefined under Capital Markets and Services (Amendment of Schedules 5, 6 And 7) Order 2024 of the CMSA. The updated definition has broadened the categories to include HNWI and joint assets with spouses or children. The re-definition also allows CEOs and directors of licensed or registered persons to qualify as sophisticated investors, in line with the more dynamic capital market landscape.[1]

Moreover, the Guidelines on Digital Assets issued by the SC incorporates the aspects of digital assets, such as Initial Exchange Offerings (IEO). Such inclusion facilitates modern fundraising mechanisms via digital assets and cryptocurrencies through recognized market operators.[2]

Other amendments include providing for the cross-listing of shares of public companies on stock exchanges outside Malaysia, as part of a broader strategy to make Malaysia's capital markets more accessible and globally competitive. The Bursa Malaysia's new regulation offers possibilities for embracing digital asset offerings and cross-border securities transactions as part of a broader push to liberalize and enhance Malaysia as a financial hub on the global exchange of capital flows.

Current versions of the various guidelines, codes, rules and practice notes can be viewed on the Securities Commission's website.

Apart from securities laws administered by the SC, persons dealing with securities and derivatives are also required to comply with the Foreign Exchange Administration (FEA) Rules administered by Bank Negara Malaysia (BNM).Under section 214(2) of the Financial Services Act 2013 (FSA) and section 225(2) of the Islamic Financial Services Act 2013 (IFSA) read together with paragraph 6 of Schedule 14 of the FSA/IFSA respectively, no person may issue, transfer or substitute or do any act in relation to a security or a financial instrument including derivatives except with written approval of BNM. The prohibition however is not applicable to the issuance or transfer of any ringgit-denominated security between residents in Malaysia and the substitution of any ringgit-denominated security for other ringgit-denominated security between residents in Malaysia.

Pursuant to section 214(2) of the FSA and section 225(2) of the IFSA, BNM issued general approvals in respect of dealings with securities and derivatives in Notice 5 of the Notices on Foreign Exchange Administration Rules effective on 30 June 2013. The Notices are available at BNM's website. With the issuance of the Notices, dealings in securities and derivatives which do not fall within BNM's general approval enumerated in the Notices are prohibited unless the person who intends to undertake such dealings obtains a prior written approval on BNM.

§ MY:4 Organisations involved in securities regulation

The Securities Commission

The SC was established under the Securities Commission Malaysia Act (SCMA) 1993 to promote the development of the securities market in Malaysia. The SC is the primary regulator of the securities industry. It is responsible to the Minister of Finance. The SC's functions include regulating matters relating to securities and derivatives, protecting investors and encouraging and promoting the development of securities and derivatives markets in Malaysia. The functions of the SC are set out in section 15(1) of the SCMA 1993.

The SC speaks to the securities industry by way of a series of guidelines.

Companies Commission of Malaysia (CCM)

CCM was established by the Companies Commission of Malaysia Act 2001. CCM administers the Companies Act 2016 (CA 2016) which deals with the management and administration of companies. The Chief Executive Officer of CCM is also the Registrar of Companies under the Act.

The Companies (Amendment) Act 2024 introduced significant changes, including the establishment of a framework for reporting the beneficial ownership of companies and enhancing provisions for restructuring and corporate rescue mechanisms. These amendments aim to improve transparency and provide better support for companies in financial distress.[1]

In addition to the SC and CCM, the following regulatory authorities have various responsibilities over securities matters:

(a) Bank Negara Malaysia (the Central Bank of Malaysia);

(b) Malaysian Accounting Standards Board (MASB);

(c) the Bursa Malaysia Group (which includes the ACE Market, a self-regulatory organization with powers over securities traded on the Bursa Malaysia and the ACE Market, respectively). Bursa Malaysia has mandated the implementation of a faster transfer process for ACE Market-listed companies to transition to the Main Market effective January 2024 as one of the ongoing initiatives to enhance the market and reduce barriers for growing enterprises.[2]

(d) the Foreign Investment Committee (FIC), which is a committee in the Economic Planning Unit of the Prime Minister's Department. The FIC regulates the acquisition of Malaysian businesses and companies and the issue of certain types of debt securities (primarily those which are convertible into equity) although FIC aspects of corporate proposals are now being processed by the SC; and

(e) the Ministry of Trade and Industry (MITI), which decides the allocation of shares of public listed companies to Bumiputeras (comprising Malays and certain indigenous and ethnic groups) and, in conjunction with FIC, regulates certain acquisitions of Malaysian businesses and companies and issues of certain types of debt securities.

III. PUBLIC SECURITIES MARKET

§ MY:5 In general

Public trading of securities in Malaysia started soon after the establishment of the Malayan Stock Exchange in 1960. In June 1964, the Stock Exchange of Malaysia was formed. With the secession of Singapore, this evolved into the Stock Exchange of Malaysia and Singapore.

The stock exchanges of Malaysia and Singapore were formally split with the establishment of The Kuala Lumpur Stock Exchange Berhad in July 1973. The operations of this company were taken over by the KLSE when the Securities Industry Act 1973 (the predecessor of the Securities Industry Act 1983) came into force in 1976. In late 2002, it was announced that the KLSE would seek to demutualise. According to Bursa Malaysia, the purpose of the demutualisation exercise was to enhance Bursa's competitive position and to respond to global trends in the exchange sector by making the organization more customer-driven and market oriented. The demutualisation exercise was effected through the Demutualization (Kuala Lumpur Stock Exchange) Act 2003 and completed in 2004 with the signing of a memorandum of understanding between the KLSE and the Securities Commission. The KLSE transferred its stock exchange business to a wholly owned subsidiary known as the Malaysian Securities Exchange Berhad (MSEB). In April 2004, MSEB had a change of name and is now referred to as Bursa Malaysia Securities Berhad or Bursa Securities. On 18 March 2005, Bursa Malaysia was listed on the Main Board of Bursa Malaysia Securities Berhad.

In 2024, Bursa Malaysia transitioned into a multi-asset exchange as part of Malaysia's Madani Economic Vision. This transformation includes innovative investment platforms, such as the Bursa Gold Dinar (BGD)—a Shariah-compliant platform for digital gold trading. The new initiative aims to enhance financial inclusivity and allow diverse layers of society to participate in secure gold investments through digital channels.[1]

Additionally, dual-class share structures (DCS) were introduced in 2023 to attract high-growth technology companies to list on Bursa Malaysia. This structure allows founders and key executives to retain disproportionate voting rights, encouraging innovation while providing protections for minority shareholders. The DCS model aligns with international practices seen in other exchanges like Hong Kong and

Singapore, making Bursa Malaysia more competitive in the regional market.[2]

§ MY:6 Islamic Capital Market (ICM)

Apart from the conventional capital market, Malaysia's has a parallel capital market i.e. the Islamic Capital Market. The ICM functions as a market which provides for market transactions which are carried out in ways that do not conflict with the conscience of Muslims and the religion of Islam, i.e. where the market is free from activities prohibited by Islam such as usury (riba), gambling (maisir) and ambiguity (gharar). The CMSA 2007 provides the definition of Islamic capital market product.[1]

In October 2023, the Securities Commission Malaysia (SC) introduced the Maqasid Al-Shariah Guidance for the ICM. This new principles-based guidance complements existing regulations, promoting ethical standards like justice, transparency, and inclusivity while enhancing the market's competitive advantage.[2]

The guidance is part of Malaysia's broader strategy under Capital Market Masterplan 3 (CMP3) to position the country as a global leader in Shariah-compliant Sustainable and Responsible Investment (SRI). The issuance of SRI Sukuk grew significantly in 2023, aligning the ICM with sustainability and environmental, social, and governance activities.[3]

In its early stages of development, the SC set up a dedicated Islamic Capital Market Department (ICMD) within its Strategy and Development Business Group. This was intended to provide infrastructure support and carry out research and development activities including formulating and facilitating a long-term plan to further strengthen the ICM in Malaysia. The Shariah Advisory Council (SAC) was established in May 1996 to advise the Commission on Shariah matters pertaining to the ICM. Members of the SAC are qualified individuals who can present Shariah rulings and have vast experience in the application of Shariah, particularly in the areas of Islamic economics and finance. The current products under the ICM include the SC list of Shariah-compliant securities, sukuk, Islamic unit trusts, Shariah indices, warrants (TSR), call warrants and crude palm oil futures contract.

The ICM continues to evolve with innovative products and frameworks. As of 2023, Malaysia's Islamic Capital Market accounted for 64% of the national capital market, representing RM2.4 trillion. The number of Shariah-compliant securities listed on Bursa Malaysia increased to 811 by the end of 2023, constituting 81.5% of total listed securities.[4]

Additionally, the market saw a boost in Islamic fintech, with the FIKRA ACE initiative launched to drive innovation in Shariah-compliant financial technologies.[5]

In 2000, the Capital Market Masterplan (CMM) identified as one of six strategic objectives, the establishment of Malaysia as an international Islamic Financial hub. Specific recommendations to achieve this strategic objective are laid out in the CMM and now, the CMP2. These include the development of a wide range of products, creating a viable market for effective mobilization of Islamic funds and establishing appropriate and comprehensive regulatory and tax frameworks.

As the ICM functions as a parallel market to the conventional market, the same laws and regulations apply except where specific guidelines are provided.

§ MY:7 Listed securities

Public trading of securities in Malaysia is now primarily conducted through the Bursa Securities.

On 6 October 1997, the Minister of Finance approved MESDAQ as a stock exchange under section 8 of the Securities Industry Act (SIA) 1983. In January 2002, it was announced that KLSE and MESDAQ had completed an agreement for MESDAQ to become part of the KLSE Group. In 2004, KLSE demutualized and became a public company limited by shares and subsequently changed its name to Bursa Malaysia Berhad while the stock exchange is known as Bursa Malaysia Securities Berhad or Bursa Securities.

The types of securities that are traded on the Bursa Securities include shares, bonds, loan stocks, loan notes, property trust units, warrants, transferable subscription rights and call warrants.

As of May 2024, there are 1,009 public-listed companies (PLCs) on Bursa Malaysia, which marks an increase from the 940 companies reported in 2011. Of these, approximately 81.3% are Shariah-compliant, reflecting Malaysia's continued focus on the Islamic capital market. Additionally, the market capitalization of these listed companies surpassed RM2 trillion by mid-2024, indicating significant growth in the equities market since 2017.[1]

Public trading of securities in Malaysia remains primarily conducted through Bursa Malaysia Securities Berhad. As of 2024, Bursa Malaysia introduced an accelerated transfer process for companies listed on the ACE Market to seamlessly transition to the Main Market, encouraging growth and market efficiency. Additionally, ESG reporting frameworks for listed companies were enhanced, reflecting a stronger focus on sustainability and transparency.[2]

§ MY:8 Private debt securities

The private debt securities (PDS) market in Malaysia is relatively young. There is a good discussion of this market in Malaysia in C. K. Low, ed., Financial Markets in Malaysia (2000) at 181.

Since 1 July 2000, however, a new regulatory regime applies to the issuance of private debt securities. Division 3 of Part IV of the Securities Commission Malaysia Act (SCMA) 1993 was the main division that dealt with prospectuses and the provisions contained therein are applicable in relation to all securities including debt securities. The law is now contained in Capital Market and Services (Amendment) Act 2012. Division 4 of the CMSA (Amendment) Act 2012 deals with debentures and include requirements with regards to trust deeds, duties of trustees, borrowers, etc.

In broad overview:

(a) The approval or permission of the Central Bank of Malaysia is no longer required for the issuance of private debt securities;

(b) The Securities Commission's Guidelines on Offerings of Private Debt Securities (PDS) now set out the relevant criteria for the issuance of private debt securities;

(c) Division 4 of the CMSA 2007 (Amendment) Act 2012 deals with the regulation of trustees, trust deeds, and, borrowers and guarantors' obligations in relation to debentures of corporations;

(d) A prospectus for PDSs must be lodged with the CCM;

(e) The approval of the Securities Commission under Part VI of the Capital Market and Services (Amendment) Act 2012 is required.

The regulatory regime for private debt securities (now commonly referred to as corporate bonds) has evolved significantly. The SC revised its guidelines streamlining approval processes and enhancing disclosure requirements to facilitate efficient issuance and regulation of corporate bonds and Sukuk. These revisions are part of broader efforts to maintain Malaysia's leading role in the global Sukuk market and improve investor protection.[1]

§ MY:9 Derivatives and Futures

The regulatory structure of the Malaysian futures industry can be shortly stated. The legislative framework was provided by the Futures Industry Act (FIA) 1993 and Regulations which has now been subsumed under the Capital Market and Services Act (CMSA)2007. The CMSA 2007 contains provisions relating to the legal requirements placed on the exchanges, clearing house and broker members. The Minister of Finance approves the establishment of the exchanges (originally KLOFFE and CONMEX) and is given regulatory powers under the Act. The Securities Commission is the regulatory authority overseeing the operation of the industry including licensing of futures fund managers and futures brokers. KLOFFE has been replaced by Malaysia Derivative Exchange which has subsequently been renamed as the Bursa Malaysia Derivatives Berhad and the clearinghouse is the Bursa Malaysia Derivatives Clearing Berhad. KLOFFE was officially launched on 15 December 1995. Its first product was a futures contract on the KLSE Composite Index. In 1999, KLOFFE was taken over by KLSE. There is a good discussion of KLOFFE in Low, op. cit., Chapter 7.

The futures industry in Malaysia can be traced back to the Kuala Lumpur Commodity Exchange (KLCE) in July 1980. KLCE was the first commodity exchange in Malaysia with crude palm oil futures launched in that year. With the merger of KLCE and the Malaysia Monetary Exchange (MME), the Commodity and Monetary Exchange of Malaysia (CONMEX) was formed in 1998. Today, the main contracts offered by CONMEX are the three-month KLIBOR futures contract and the crude palm oil futures contract. The operation of CONMEX is discussed in Low, op. cit., Chapter 8.

The regulatory structure of the Malaysian futures industry has evolved, with Bursa Malaysia Derivatives continuing to offer a range of products including Crude Palm Oil Futures (FCPO) and financial derivatives. Bursa Malaysia introduced after-hours trading for key contracts such as FCPO, enhancing liquidity and global access to Malaysia's derivatives market. These updates reinforce Malaysia's position as a leader in commodities like palm oil and expand opportunities for international investors.[1]

IV. REGULATIONS REGARDING SUBSTANTIVE SECURITIES MATTERS

A. ESTABLISHMENT, REGULATION AND ORGANISATION OF SECURITIES REGULATORY ORGANISATIONS

§ MY:10 Securities Commission

The SC was established by the Securities Commission Malaysia Act (SCMA) 1993 (SCMA 1993) on 1 March 1993.[1] The SC is a body corporate with the powers conferred on it by the Act. Section 15 (1) of the SCMA 1993 sets outs the functions of the SC.

The SC's functions include:

(a) regulating all matters relating to securities and futures contracts;

(b) regulating take-overs and mergers of Malaysian companies;

(c) regulating all matters relating to unit trust schemes;

(d) supervising and monitoring the activities of any exchange, clearing house and central depository;

(e) maintaining the confidence of investors in the securities and futures markets by ensuring adequate protection for investors;

(f) suppressing illegal, dishonorable and improper practices in dealings in securities, trading in futures contracts and the provision of investment advice and other services relating to securities or futures contracts;

(g) encouraging and promoting the development of securities and futures markets in Malaysia; and

(h) licensing and supervising persons licensed for purposes of any securities law.

The SC consists of an Executive Chairman (currently Tan Sri Dato' Seri Ranjit Ajit Singh), 4 members representing the Government and 4 other persons each of whom are appointed by the Minister of Finance.

The SC was initially funded by a grant from the Government. It is now funded through fees and charges and a levy imposed on transactions on the Bursa Malaysia. The levy is currently 0.015% of the purchase price. The SC also has power to impose a levy on futures contracts effected on any futures exchange.

The SC continues to expand its regulatory oversight in response to market developments. In 2024, it introduced guidelines on digital assets, specifically regulating digital asset custody under the Capital Markets and Services Act (CMSA) 2007.[2]

Additionally, the SC's role includes setting forth comprehensive Technology Risk Management Guidelines to mitigate emerging risks in capital markets. The launch of the National Sustainability Reporting Framework (NSRF) in 2024 also underscores the SC's leadership in driving corporate governance and sustainability reporting.[3]

§ MY:11 Powers of the Securities Commission

The Securities Commission Malaysia Act (SCMA) confers on the SC all such powers as may be necessary for or in connection with, or reasonably incidental to, the performance of its functions under the securities laws.

The SC approves offers and issues of securities, the listing of securities and restructuring exercises. In addition, the SC is empowered under the SCMA to regulate take-overs and mergers.

§ MY:12 Enforcement and investigation

The SC has power to appoint investigating officers for the purposes of carrying out an investigation of any offence or inspection under the Securities Commission Act, the Capital Market and Services Act 2007 and the Securities Industry (Central Depositories) Act. An investigating officer may in the course of an investigation or inspection enter a place or building, inspect and make copies of books and documents and, where he believes an offence has been committed against a securities law, search, seize or take possession of or detain articles or documents. An investigating officer may also require the production of books and documents: section 128 of the SCMA 1993.

An investigating officer may require a person acquainted with the facts and circumstances of a particular case to appear before the investigating officer to be examined orally. A person being examined must answer all questions put to him by the investigating officer and cannot refuse to answer a question on the ground that it tends to incriminate him. The record of examination is admissible as evidence in any court proceeding: section 134 of the SCMA 1993.

The SC may supply to a police officer or any other public officer copies of any book or other document it has seized, detained or taken possession of or of any such record of examination or allow such officer to have access to and inspect any property, book, other document, article or thing produced before or seized, detained or taken possession of by an investigating officer.

The SC may also provide such assistance as the SC thinks fit to a foreign supervisory authority exercising functions which correspond to those of the SC's.

A prosecution for an offence under the SCMA 1993 may only be instituted with the written consent of the public prosecutor.

§ MY:13 Companies Commission of Malaysia (CCM)

CCM administers the Companies Act (CA) 2016, Trust Companies Act 1949, Kootu Funds (Prohibition) Act 1971, Registration of Businesses Act 1956, Limited Liability Partnerships Act 2012 and Interest Schemes Act 2016. Under section 17(a) of the Companies Commission of Malaysia Act 2001, CCM shall ensure the provisions of the said Act are administered, enforced, given effect to, carried out and complied with. In order to do so, the Commission shall, under section 18 of the same Act, have the power to do all things necessary or expedient for or in connection with the performance of its functions.

In the exercise of its powers under CA 2016, the Registrar of Companies (ROC) (who is also the Chief Executive Officer of CCM) has powers, among others, to call for information (e.g. power of Registrar to require supply a statement of valuation at current value of assets and liabilities of the company under section 256), to appoint auditors of private company (section 268) and public company (section 272) upon application by a member if the company fails to appoint auditor and to strike off company from the register (section 549).

The ROC keeps various registers in accordance with the requirements of the Companies Act. These include a register of companies (section 15(a)) and a register of charges (section 357) required to be registered under the CA 2016. Under section 601 of the CA 2016, the registers are available for inspection by any person on payment of the prescribed fee.

Subdivision 9, Division 1, Part III of the Companies Act 2016 is entitled "Prospectuses." Section 152(2) CA 2016 expressly states that Subdivision 9, Division 1, Part III of the CA 2016 shall not apply to an offer or invitation to subscribe for or purchase any securities of a corporation, including any excluded offer or excluded invitation as defined in the Capital Markets and Services Act 2007. Section 154(2) of the Companies Act 2016 then goes on to say that where a prospectus has been registered with the SC under the CMSA 2007, it must then be lodged with the Registrar before the date of issue of the prospectus.

Recent legal developments include the introduction of the Companies (Amendment) Act 2024, which enhances corporate transparency and improves corporate rescue mechanisms. One of the key updates is the introduction of enhanced Beneficial Ownership Reporting requirements under the 2024 Amendment Act, which mandates companies to maintain a separate register of beneficial owners. This register must be kept at the company's registered office, and beneficial owners are required to notify companies of any changes to their ownership information.[1]

In addition, the CCM has launched the Electronic Beneficial Ownership System (e-BOS), an online platform for the electronic submission and management of beneficial ownership data. This system ensures up-to-date reporting and enhances corporate transparency.[2]

The 2024 Amendment Act also introduces provisions for pre-pack schemes of arrangement and cram-down provisions, designed to streamline corporate rescue processes, particularly for companies in financial distress. These mechanisms allow companies to execute recovery plans without the need for creditor meetings in certain situations.[3]

§ MY:14 Bursa Securities

The Bursa Securities is the stock exchange in Malaysia. It is a stock exchange approved by the Minister of Finance under the Capital Market and Services Act (CMSA) 2007. Under the CMSA 2007, the Minister of Finance has power to grant approval to a body corporate, if recommended by the SC to establish and conduct a stock exchange if the Minister is satisfied that all requirements under section 8(2) of the CMSA 2007 are fulfilled. This includes:

(a) the body corporate will operate an orderly and fair market for securities and futures contracts that are traded via its facilities;

(b) the body corporate will prudently manage any risks associated with its business and operations;

(c) the body corporate will not act contrary to the public interest and in particular the interest of investors; and

(d) the rules of the body are satisfactory in relation to membership, listing of securities, supervision, regulating and disciplining of participants and protection of the public interest; and the interest of the public will be served by granting the approval.

A person cannot establish or maintain a stock market unless it is a stock exchange approved by the Minister of Finance under the CMSA 2007.

Section 10 of the CMSA 2007 provides that one-third of the Board is to be appointed by the Minister of Finance, in consultation with the Securities Commission is to be public interest directors. The number of the public interest directors may be reduced by the Minister upon recommendation of the Securities Commission. Section 4 of the CMSA 2007 defines "public interest directors" as directors appointed by the Minister under section 10 of the CMSA 2007. As of February 2018, the board comprises 8 members, where 6 are independent non-executive directors and 2 are non-independent non-executive directors.

The core operating divisions are the Listing Group and the Market Supervision Group and other divisions in the operation of the exchange support these groups. In addition to these divisions, Bursa Malaysia has several subsidiaries and affiliate companies. These are referred to as the Bursa Group. The more important companies in the Bursa Malaysia Group are as follows:

(a) Bursa Malaysia Securities Berhad;

(b) Bursa Malaysia Securities Clearing Sdn Bhd (S) is the Securities Clearing.[1] Securities Clearing is 100% owned by Bursa Malaysia and is the central clearinghouse;

(c) Bursa Malaysia Derivatives Clearing Berhad (D)[2] which is the Clearing House for the exchange traded derivatives market in Malaysia;

(d) Bursa Malaysia Depository Berhad[3] implements and operates the Central Depository System (CDS), which offers Bursa Securitas's scripless settlement system;

(e) Bursa Malaysia is 100% owned by Bursa Malaysia Berhad. (This was formerly known as KLSE Information Sdn Bhd, which was formerly known as KLSE-BERNAMA Real-Time Information Services Sdn Bhd (KULBER). In November 2002, KLSE bought out BERNAMA's equity in KULBER and the company was renamed KLSE IS). Its principal activities relate to providing and disseminating prices and other information relating to securities quoted within exchanges within the group;

(f) Bursa Malaysia Derivatives Berhad[4] operates the market for the trading of approved options and futures contracts; and

(g) Labuan International Financial Exchange (LFX). LFX is an offshore financial exchange based in Labuan, the international offshore financial center for Malaysia. LFX is limited by shares and is 100% owned by BURSA SECURITIES.

Other subsidiaries in the group include:

(h) Bursa Malaysia Bonds Sdn Bhd

(j) Bursa Malaysia Information Sdn Bhd

(k) Bursa Malaysia Islamic Services Sdn Bhd

Bursa Malaysia has its own rules and these govern the conduct of its members. It is also responsible for surveillance of the market and enforcement of its listing requirements. The listing requirements set out the criteria for listing, disclosure requirements and standards to be maintained by listed companies. The Bursa Securities Listing Requirements (September 2007) can be viewed on the Bursa Malaysia website (www.bursamalaysia.com). Any amendment to the rules of the Bursa Securities must be notified to the SC who may, within 6 weeks after receipt of any proposed amendment, give notice in writing whether it approves or disapproves the whole or part of the amendment. In addition, the SC may amend the rules of the Bursa Securities.

Failure to comply with the rules or listing requirements of the Bursa Securities exposes a person to sanctions by the Bursa Securities. It is also an offence for a listed company and its directors to fail to comply with the listing requirements of the Bursa Securities.

The SC has also prescribed certain minimum standards of business conduct, which are intended to provide a guide as to proper standards of conduct and sound and prudent business practices among dealers. The SC retains supervisory control over Bursa Securities' role in the securities market.

The Capital Market and Services Act 2007 requires the Bursa Securities to provide such assistance to the SC as it may reasonably require for the performance of its functions and duties. When it takes action against a member, Bursa Securities must inform the SC within 7 days.

Dealings in securities are carried out by member companies. There are various requirements for eligibility for membership. They include the issue of a dealer's license to the member company and representative's licenses to officers of the company.

Trading is carried out through a system called SCORE (System on Computerised Order Routing and Execution), which is a fully automated system. Launched in 1989 on a semi-automated basis, it was converted into automatic matching of orders in 1992. SCORE replaced the open outcry system, which had existed since 1961.

Transaction costs include brokerage (which are fully negotiable subject to a minimum brokerage and a cap of 0.70%), clearing fees (currently 0.04% of value) and stamp duty on contract notes (RM1.00 per RM1,000 value).

The Bursa Malaysia Securities Clearing Sdn Bhd (S) or the Securities Clearing), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Bursa Malaysia, provides clearing services for the members of Bursa Securities. SCA NS only clears domestic contracts of securities listed by Bursa Securities and not cross-border trade.

The Bursa Malaysia Depository Berhad runs the central depository system, which allows for dealings in securities to be effected by means of entries in securities accounts and settlement of securities transactions without the physical movement of scrip.

Bursa Malaysia has introduced the National Sustainability Reporting Framework in 2024, requiring companies to comply with enhanced ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance) disclosure standards. This aligns with global trends towards responsible investing and strengthens the exchange's focus on sustainability and corporate governance.[5]

§ MY:15 Malaysian Exchange of Securities Dealing & Automated Quotation Bhd (MESDAQ) known as the ACE market since August 3, 2009[1]

Initially, MESDAQ was established in 1997 with the following principal objectives:

(a) to provide an avenue for high growth companies to raise capital; and

(b) to promote technology intensive industries and assist in developing a science and technology base for Malaysia through indigenous research and development.

In March 2002, MESDAQ merged with the KLSE. As a result, the MESDAQ Market on the KLSE was created. The MESDAQ Market operates as a unique market with a separate identity from the KLSE Main and Second Boards catering specifically for the capital raising needs of technology and potential high-growth companies.

Rules governing the admission of corporations wishing to obtain listing of and quotation for their securities on MESDAQ and transactions by corporations whose securities are listed on MESDAQ are set out in the Bursa Securities Listing Requirements for the MESDAQ Market. On August 3, 2009 MESDAQ was renamed as the ACE market.

In 2024, there were important updates to the ACE Market of Bursa Malaysia, which was formerly known as MESDAQ. These changes aim to enhance the market's efficiency and improve access to capital for companies. Notably, the Securities Commission Malaysia (SC) introduced an accelerated transfer process for eligible ACE Market-listed companies to transition to the Main Market. This new framework, which took effect on January 1, 2024, simplifies and speeds up the process for companies that meet specific criteria, such as having a minimum market capitalization of RM1 billion for the past six months. The goal is to provide these companies with greater visibility and access to a larger pool of institutional and foreign investors.[2]

§ MY:16 Definition of securities

"Securities" is defined in section 2 of the CMSA 2007 as:

(a) debentures, stocks and bonds issued or proposed to be issued by any government;

(b) shares in, or debentures of, a body corporate or an unincorporated body; or

(c) unit trusts or prescribed investments, and includes any right, option or interest in respect thereof.

This definition means that the SC has jurisdiction in respect of debentures (sometimes referred to here as "debt securities") issued by public and private companies. The term, "debenture" is defined in section 2 of the Capital Market and Services Act 2007. Because of the definition of a "corporation" in the Securities Commission Malaysia Act (SCMA) 1993 (which extends to companies outside of Malaysia), it is clear that "securities" includes securities issued by a foreign corporation.

Recent amendments, such as the Capital Markets and Services (Amendment of Schedules 5, 6, and 7) Order 2024, have expanded the definition of securities, especially in relation to sophisticated investors. These changes allow a broader range of investors, including corporations managing significant funds and high-net-worth individuals, to participate in the market.

Additionally, digital assets, including digital tokens and digital currencies, have been incorporated into the scope of securities under the Capital Markets and Services (Prescription of Securities) (Digital Currency and Digital Token) Order 2019, with further refinements introduced in 2024. These developments align with the evolving financial landscape and recognize digital assets as part of the securities framework.

A unit trust scheme is any arrangement made for the purpose, or having the effect, of providing facilities for the participation by persons as beneficiaries under a trust in profits or income arising from the acquisition, holding, management or disposal of securities, futures contracts or any other property.

Division 1 Part III of the Companies Act 2016 sets out some of the requirements for issues of shares, debentures and certain types of interests to the public.

A share for the purposes of the Companies Act 2016 is a share in the share capital of a corporation, which is any body corporate formed or incorporated within or outside Malaysia.

As stated, the Companies Act 2016 allows for the establishment of 2 types of companies—private companies and public companies. A private company is a company having a share capital and with no more than 50 members. Under the new Companies Act 2016, a company may or may not have a constitution (except company limited by guarantee). Nevertheless, a private company must restrict the right to transfer shares, prohibit invitations to the public to subscribe for shares in or debentures of the company and prohibit invitations to the public to deposit money with the company. A public company on the other hand is a company that is not a private company.

Section 2(1) of the Companies Act 2016 defines a debenture to include debenture stock, bonds, sukuk, notes and any other securities of a corporation whether constituting a charge on the assets of the corporation or not.

The repealed Companies Act 1965 regulated the issue of certain other types of interests. These interests (section 84 interests) were defined in section 84 of the Companies Act 1965 as any right to participate or interest (whether enforceable or not and whether actual, prospective or contingent):

(a) in any profits, assets or realisation of any financial or business undertaking or scheme (whether in Malaysia or elsewhere);

(b) in any common enterprise (whether in Malaysia or elsewhere) in which the holder of the right or interest is let to expect profits, rent or interest from the efforts of the promoter of the enterprise or third party;

(c) in any time sharing scheme—these are schemes which entitle participants to use, occupy or possess for certain periods property to which the scheme relates; or

(d) in any investment contract—these are schemes which involve the investment of money in return for an interest in property which will or may be employed in common with any other interest in property acquired in like circumstances, whether or not the right or interest is evidenced by a formal document and whether or not the right or interest relates to a physical asset.

The following were excluded from the scheme of regulation that exists in respect of section 84 interests:

(a) any share in or debenture of a corporation;

(b) any interest in or arising out of a policy of life insurance;

(c) subject to certain exceptions, any interest in a partnership agreement; and

(d) any interest in a unit trust scheme.

However, the same provision is not retained in the new CA 2016. Instead, section 84 interests are now regulated under separate legislation enacted in 2016 i.e. the Interest Schemes Act 2016.

B. REGULATION OF PUBLIC OFFERINGS

§ MY:17 Public offerings and exempted offerings

A new regulatory framework for fund-raising activities in the primary market came into effect on 1 July 2000. The principal requirements were previously found in Part IV, Division 1 and Division 3 of the SCMA 1993 which are now repealed and have been consolidated into the CMSA 2007. In addition, Part III of the Companies Act 2016 must also be consulted. Part VI of the CMSA 2007 deals with "proposals" in relation to securities; the SC must approve any such "proposal." Note that the "proposal" is not confined to an offer to the public and hence covers all proposals whether or not to the public. Part VI, Div. 3 of the CMSA 2007 deals with the prospectus requirements under the SCMA 1993. The term "prospectus" is given a wide definition under section 226 of the CMSA 2007 so that it catches any document inviting applications or offers to subscribe for or purchase securities. Unless the offer, invitation or issue is excluded—see sections 228, 229 and 230 of the CMSA 2007—a prospectus must be registered with the SC prior to any invitation, offer or issue: see section 232 of the CMSA 2007. The CMSA 2007 then goes on to say—in section 234—that a copy of any prospectus "registered" under the CMSA 2007 must be "lodged" with the Registrar of Companies in relation to any securities other than a unit trust scheme or a prescribed investment scheme before the date of issue of the prospectus.

In summary:

(a) Any "proposal" to "make available", "offer for subscription or purchase" or "to issue an invitation to subscribe for or purchase securities in Malaysia" requires the approval of the SC under the Capital Market and Services Act 2007 unless excluded by section 213 of the CMSA 2007.

(b) Section 213 of the Act states that the approval requirement does not apply to the classes or categories of securities, or classes or categories of transactions, specified in Schedule 5 and 6 of the CMSA 2007. Among the classes specified are securities of a private company other than debentures.

(c) Unless exempted by the SC, a prospectus must be registered with the SC: section 232 of the CMSA 2007.

(d) Except for unit trust schemes and prescribed investment schemes, a copy of the prospectus registered with the SC must be lodged with the ROC.

In 2024, the Capital Markets and Services Act 2007 (CMSA) introduced a small offering exemption, which reduces the regulatory burden for smaller companies, including start-ups and MSMEs, in raising capital. This allows certain offerings to sophisticated investors to proceed with fewer regulatory hurdles. Instruments like Simple Agreement for Future Equity (SAFE) and convertible notes are increasingly being used within this framework. Additionally, the SC has streamlined the approval process for public offerings, promoting a more dynamic venture capital ecosystem.

§ MY:18 Approval by the Securities Commission

Section 212(4) of the CMSA 2007 states that no person shall implement or carry out a proposal unless the SC has approved the proposal. The effect of section 212(4) is that the SC must approve most proposals that involve the issue of shares by a public company.

Under section 212(2) of the CMSA 2007, the approval of the SC is required, inter alia, for the following proposals:

a) the listing and quotation of securities of a corporation on a stock market;

b) the transfer of a listing and quotation of securities of a corporation from an alternative market to the main market;

c) the listing or quotation of securities other than securities in paragraph (a) including units of a business trust or Islamic securities on a stock market;

d) an acquisition and disposal of assets which results in a significant change in the business direction or policy of a listed corporation, listed unit trust scheme or any other listed entity.

The Securities Commission Malaysia Act (SCMA) 1993 does not prescribe the documents that must be submitted to the SC. Instead, the Act requires an applicant to submit such documents and information in such form and manner and at such times as the SC requires. In assessing any proposal, the SC will have regard to the Policies and Guidelines on Issues/Offer of Securities of the SC, 1 March 2018.

In approving a proposal, the SC may impose such terms and conditions as it deems fit: section 214(1)(b)(1) of the CMSA 2007.

In 2024, the SC introduced Practice Note No. 1/2024, which designates Digital Asset Custodians (DAC) as recognized custodians under Section 121 of the CMSA. This regulation is part of the broader digital asset framework, enhancing the management of digital assets for fund management companies.

Additionally, the SC has streamlined the approval process for initial public offerings (IPOs) on both the Main and ACE Markets. New measures encourage principal advisers to engage with the SC early in the process to address compliance with the Equity Guidelines, thereby improving transparency and efficiency in IPO listings.

§ MY:19 Approval by the Central Bank (Bank Negara Malaysia) for issue of debt securities not required

The term "debenture" is defined in section 2 (1) of the CMSA 2007.

Prior to 30 June 2000, an issue of securities involving the issue of private debt securities, required the approval of the Central Bank of Malaysia. Specific approval from the Central of Malaysia is now no longer necessary for the issue of private debt securities. The issue of private debt securities now falls within the jurisdiction of the SC.

The guidelines issued by the SC entitled, "Guidelines on the Offering of Private Debt Securities" set out the criteria for the issue of private debt securities. As with share issues to the public, the SC must approve a proposal for the issue of debt securities unless an exemption applies.

In 2024, the Securities Commission Malaysia (SC) revised its guidelines on private debt securities, now commonly referred to as corporate bonds, to align with international practices. These updates streamline the approval process, enhancing operational efficiency and disclosure standards for issuers. The SC no longer requires Bank Negara Malaysia approval for private debt securities. The updated guidelines now focus on improving transparency and investor protection in Malaysia's bond and sukuk markets, which remain globally significant. This revision modernizes Malaysia's corporate bond issuance process, reflecting global trends.

§ MY:20 Approval, registration and lodgment of prospectuses

As we have seen, any proposal to issue securities must first be approved by the SC under section 232 of the CMSA 2007. After an approval has been granted, it is necessary to register a prospectus. The term "prospectus" is given a wide definition in section 226 of the CMSA 2007 to include, "a notice, circular, advertisement or document inviting applications or offers to subscribe for or purchase securities . . . .".

Section 232 (1) of the CMSA 2007 contains the general prohibition on offering securities in the absence of a prospectus registered with the SC. A prospectus may be registered after an approval by the SC: see section 232 of the CMSA 2007. The SC has the power to refuse the registration of a prospectus if it does not meet the requirements of section 233 of the CMSA 2007.

The required contents of a prospectus are set out in section 235 of the CMSA 2007. Section 236 of the CMSA 2007 contains a general duty of disclosure in relation to prospectuses. It states that, for the purposes of determining whether the prospectus contains any statement or information that is false or misleading or from which there is a material omission, "regard shall be had to whether the prospectus contains all such information that investors and their professional advisers would reasonably require, and reasonably expect to find in the prospectus for the purpose of making an informed assessment" of, inter alia, the merits of investing in the securities and the risk involved in so doing. This general disclosure test is similar to that contained in section 710 of the Australian Corporations Act 2001 (Cth.).

Once a prospectus is registered by the SC, it must be lodged with the ROC. This requirement appears in section 234 of the CMSA 2007.

Hence, except for certain limited exceptions, an offer of securities must not be made unless a prospectus relating to the offer is first approved and registered with the SC. The prospectus must then be lodged with ROC. Section 154(2) of the Companies Act 2016 states that where a prospectus has been registered under the CMSA 2007, it must be lodged with the Registrar of Companies.

In 2024, amendments to Schedules 5 and 6 of the CMSA expanded the criteria for prospectus approvals, particularly for exempted offerings. Additionally, the SC has introduced digitalization initiatives to streamline the approval and lodgment process, allowing companies to register prospectuses electronically. This supports the SC's goal of improving market efficiency and enhancing the transparency of public offerings.

§ MY:21 Exempt offerings under the CMSA 2007

Section 212(8) of the CMSA 2007 exempts certain classes of securities from the operation of section 212(4)—the requirement that the SC must approve a proposal to offer securities.

13. Any proposal, scheme, transaction, arrangement or activity, or issuance of, or offer for subscription or purchase of, or issuance of an invitation to subscribe for or purchase, units in a unit trust scheme or prescribed investment scheme in relation to an acquisition or disposal of assets which results in a significant change in the business direction or policy of a unit trust scheme or prescribed investment scheme that is listed on the main market of the stock exchange other than a business trust.

14. In respect of a unit trust scheme or prescribed investment scheme that is listed on the main market of the stock exchange, the issuance and subsequent listing and quotation of its units on the main market pursuant to a bonus issue or a rights issue.

Debentures and sukuk

15. Making available, offering for subscription or purchase of, or issuing an invitation to subscribe for or purchase, debentures or sukuk by a corporation to its related corporation where such debentures or sukuk include a term that prohibits the transfer of such debentures or sukuk, as the case may be, to any other person.

16. In the case of a public company where its debentures or sukuk have been approved by the Commission, a proposal for the listing of the debenture or sukuk on an exchange outside Malaysia.

17. Any proposal, scheme, transaction, arrangement or activity, or issuance of shares, or offer for subscription or purchase of shares, or issuance of an invitation to subscribe for or purchase shares, in relation to an acquisition or disposal of assets which results in a significant change in the business direction or policy of a corporation where only its debentures or sukuk are listed on a stock market of the stock exchange.

18. All secondary transactions of debentures or sukuk.

Under the Companies Act, a prospectus is not required in very limited circumstances.

Under section 161 CA 2016, the Registrar may, on the application in writing relieve a person from the requirements relating to the form and content of a prospectus if he is satisfied that the relief does not cause the non-disclosure to the public of information necessary for the assessment of the investment in the shares or debentures of the corporation and the compliance with the requirements, for which the relief is applied for, would impose unreasonable burden on the applicant.

Exemptions under Section 212(8) of the CMSA 2007 were updated in 2024 to clarify the thresholds and conditions for certain exempt offerings. The Technical Note No. 1/2024 specifies that for subsequent investments in a capital market product, the exemption will still apply even if the amount is less than RM250,000, provided the initial investment met the threshold and no significant redemptions occurred. These updates aim to enhance flexibility for sophisticated investors and align with global market practices.

§ MY:22 Excluded Offers and Invitations under the SCMA 1993

or purchase of, or an invitation to subscribe for or purchase, securities is an excluded offer or an excluded invitation if the offer or invitation is so specified in Schedule 6 of the CMSA 2007. If an offer or invitation is so excluded, sections 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241 and 244 of Division 3 of Part VI of the CMSA 2007 do not apply. The types of persons to whom these provisions apply include sophisticated and professional investors.

Pursuant to section 229 of the CMSA 2007, certain offers for subscription or purchase of securities are exempt if specified in Schedule 6. In 2024, amendments expanded the definition of sophisticated investors to include individuals and corporations with significant investment portfolios or assets.[1] The schedule also introduced digital assets, such as digital tokens, as part of the exempted securities, provided they meet the criteria under the Digital Currency and Token Order 2019.

§ MY:23 Excluded Issues under the CMSA 2007

Pursuant to section 230, an issue of securities is an excluded issue if it is so specified in Schedule 7 of the CMSA 2007.

In 2024, amendments were made to Schedules 5, 6, and 7 to expand the definition of sophisticated investors. These updates now include high-net-worth individuals (HNWI) and corporations with significant assets. Notably, family assets can now be considered in determining an individual's qualification as a sophisticated investor. These changes also reflect broader global market practices, making it easier for investors to participate in the private debt securities market and similar capital market products.[1]

Moreover, the SC has expanded the scope of excluded issues to include newer financial products such as digital tokens and sukuk, ensuring the Malaysian capital market remains competitive in the global financial landscape. The flexibility afforded by these amendments allows for more efficient fundraising without requiring the same level of regulatory oversight as traditional public offerings.

§ MY:24 Prospectuses under the CMSA 2007

Section 232 of the CMSA 2007 states that issues, offers and invitations in relation to securities must not be made unless a prospectus in relation to the securities has been registered by the SC and the prospectus has complied with the requirements of the CMSA 2007. However, a prospectus is not required where sections 228, 229 and 230 of the CMSA 2007 (excluded offers, invitations and issues) apply. In effect, this means that a registered prospectus under the CMSA 2007 is required for all issues other than those relating to:

(a) unlisted recreational clubs (where section 152 of the Companies Act 2016 applies);
(b) the securities of a private company;
(c) sophisticated investors;
(d) professional investors;
(e) employees of the issuer;
(f) rights issues and bonus issues for unlisted securities;
(g) takeovers; and
(h) company rescue cases

Thus, where a prospectus is required, the issuer must comply with the disclosure and content requirements of Part VI, Div. 3 of the CMSA 2007. A person who issues, offers for subscription or purchase, or makes an invitation to subscribe or purchase securities must prepare:

(a) a prospectus;
(b) a written application for the registration of the prospectus;
(c) any required consents from persons named in the prospectus;
(d) true copies of all material contracts; and
(e) any other information required by the SC.

As mentioned earlier, section 236 of the CMSA 2007 contains a general duty of disclosure of general application. Section 236(1) of the CMSA 2007 states that a prospectus must include all the information that investors and their professional advisers would reasonably require to make an informed assessment of:

(a) the rights attaching to the securities;
(b) the assets and liabilities, financial position, profits and losses and prospects of the issuer of the securities and, in the case of a unit trust or prescribed investment scheme, of that scheme; and
(c) the merits of investing in the securities and the extent of the risk involved in so doing.

Section 236(2) of the CMSA 2007 then goes on to list the information that investors and their professional advisers would reasonably require and reasonably expect to find in the prospectus under section 236(1) of the CMSA 2007. Section 236(2)(a) of the Act refers to information that is actually known to certain persons (such as a director or promoter). Section 236(2)(b) extends this requirement to information that a person (such as a director or promoter) "would have been able to obtain by making such inquiries as were reasonable in the circumstances." The requirement that the prospectus must include information that a director ought to have known imposes a due diligence obligation.

A prospectus must also contain the specific items of information required in section 235 of the CMSA 2007. Where a public offering of securities is involved, the SC has issued Prospectus Guidelines to supplement the specific items of information listed in section 44.

Section 238 and 239 of the CMSA 2007 contain provisions designed to deal with the situation where information in a prospectus becomes out of date or is discovered to be wrong. In these circumstances, the issuer must register a supplementary prospectus with the SC.

In 2024, the SC introduced digital submission mandates for prospectus filings, streamlining the process for issuers. Additionally, new guidelines clarify disclosure requirements, ensuring that all relevant information, including risks and financials, is made available to investors and their professional advisers.[1]

Exceptions to these requirements still apply for excluded offers and sophisticated investors under Schedules 6 and 7, with particular flexibility granted for digital assets and specific corporate securities offerings.

§ MY:25 Share hawking

Section 596 of the Companies Act 2016 prohibits a person from going from place to place offering shares for subscription or purchase to the public or seeking or receiving offers to subscribe for or purchase shares from the public. This provision remains intact. While there have been broader updates to the Companies Act through the Companies (Amendment) Act 2024, which focus on enhancing corporate governance, beneficial ownership, and reporting requirements, the prohibition on share hawking continues to play a critical role in maintaining market order.

§ MY:26 Advertising restrictions for offerings

Section 241 of the CMSA 2007 contains restrictions on advertising. The section operates by imposing a blanket prohibition on advertising and then goes on to list exceptions. So, for example, advertisements containing the bare details of an issue may be published in the pre-filing period with the consent of the SC: see section 241(4) of the CMSA 2007. In the post-filing period, limited advertisements are permitted under section 241(5) of the CMSA 2007. A preliminary prospectus is exempt under section 241(6). The publishing of reports (such as press reports) are permitted subject to terms and conditions: see section 241(7) of the CMSA 2007. The SC may order cessation of issuance of a notice and contravention of section 241 attracts criminal penalties. While the structure of the advertising restrictions remains largely the same as in 2024, digital platforms are being used more extensively for disseminating information in the pre- and post-filing periods, with SC approval. This move is part of the SC's broader efforts to modernize market practices and facilitate transparency while maintaining investor protection through regulated advertising channels.

§ MY:27 Special rules for offers of debentures

The Companies Act 2016 requires a trustee to be appointed for holders of debentures that are offered to the public. Section 177 of the Companies Act 2016 imposes on a trustee certain duties including the duty to:

(a) exercise reasonable diligence to ascertain whether or not the assets of the issuer are sufficient to discharge the debentures as and when they become due;

(b) satisfy itself that the prospectus does not contain any matter which is inconsistent with the debentures;

(c) exercise reasonable diligence to ascertain whether or not the borrowing corporation and any guarantor corporation that has guaranteed the obligations of the borrowing corporation has complied with the debentures;

(d) take all steps as the trustee for debenture holders is empowered to do to cause the borrowing corporation to remedy any breach of those covenants, terms and provisions;

(e) if a breach is not remedied, at the trustee's discretion place the matter before a meeting of debenture holders and submit proposals for their protection; and

(f) where the borrowing corporation proposes a compromise or arrangement, explain the effect of the compromise or arrangement to debenture holders and recommend an appropriate course of action.

Section 179 of the Companies Act 2016 also imposes certain covenants on a borrowing corporation. Among other things, the borrowing corporation must:

(a) use its best endeavors to carry on and conduct its business in a proper and efficient manner;

(b) make available for inspection by the trustee for debenture holders of the accounting or other records of the borrowing corporation;

(c) give to the trustee such information as it requires with respect to all matters relating to the accounting or other records of the borrowing corporation; and

(d) summon a meeting of debenture holders to consider the latest accounts and balance sheet and to give directions to the trustee if requested to do so by holders of at least 10 percent of the nominal value of the issued debentures.

In addition, under section 182 of the CA 2018, the borrowing corporation must lodge a report with the trustee and ROC setting out in detail any matters adversely affecting the security or interests of debenture holders. It must also provide the trustee with particulars of any charge created by it.

While there were no direct amendments to the duties of trustees for debentures, the Companies (Amendment) Act 2024 introduced significant improvements in corporate governance and beneficial ownership reporting. These broader amendments reflect Malaysia's continued efforts to strengthen corporate compliance and transparency, which indirectly supports the enforcement of obligations on borrowing corporations and trustees.

C. MANDATORY DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS OF PUBLIC COMPANIES

§ MY:28 Accounts and reports—Generally

The Companies Act 2016 requires a company to keep such accounting and other records as will sufficiently explain the transaction and financial position of the company and enable true and fair profit and loss accounts and balance sheets to be prepared from time to time: section 245 of the CA 2016. In addition, directors of every company shall prepare financial statements within six months of its financial year end (section 248 CA 2016).

Section 245 of the CA requires companies to maintain proper accounting and financial records to explain their transactions and financial position. A High Court in the recent case of Datuk Beh Kim Ling & Anor v. NEP Holdings (Malaysia) Bhd [2024] 1 CLJ 517 expanded the scope of a director's right to inspect accounting records. The court held that this right extends to the accounting records of the company's subsidiaries, if required to provide a true and fair view of the company's affairs. This decision was influenced by the Singapore Court of Appeal's ruling in Mukherjee Amitava v. Dystar Global Holdings (Singapore) Pte Ltd [2018] SGCA 26, which adopted a similar approach.

Additionally, directors must prepare financial statements within six months of the financial year-end, and these must be audited and distributed to members or presented at the annual general meeting (AGM), as required by Sections 248 and 257 of the Act. The financial statements shall be duly audited before the financial statements are sent to every member under section 257 or, in the case of a public company, sent to every member under section 257 and laid before an annual general meeting under section 340. Pursuant to section 249, the annual financial statements for a financial year shall give a true and fair view of the financial position as at the end of the financial year and the financial performance for the financial year of the company.

§ MY:29 Accounts and reports—Borrowing corporations

Under Section 179 of the CA, a borrowing corporation is required to prepare and submit quarterly and bi-annual reports to both the Registrar of Companies (ROC) and the trustee for debenture holders. These reports must detail any matters adversely affecting the security or interests of debenture holders. Directors of guarantor corporations must also ensure that bi-annual accounts are prepared and lodged. This requirement aims to safeguard the interests of debenture holders by ensuring continuous oversight of the corporation's financial health and adherence to its debt obligations.

§ MY:30 Section 84 interests

Under an approved deed regulating section 84 interests, a trustee must send a statement of accounts with the auditor's report to each holder of interest within 2 months after the end of the financial year. The Interest Schemes Act 2016 continues to regulate these schemes, ensuring stronger investor protection through clear and consistent reporting requirements, which remain in effect to date.[1]

§ MY:31 Bursa Malaysia requirements—Periodic reports

A company whose securities are listed for quotation on the Bursa Securities must comply with the listing requirements of Bursa Securities. These include the obligation to provide various reports including:

(a) Pursuant to Bursa Securities LR 9.22, a quarterly report (on a consolidated basis) immediately figures are available and, in any event, not later than 2 months after the end of each quarter of a financial year.

(b) Pursuant to Bursa Securities LRs 9.23-9.26, a listed company must submit annual audited accounts and an annual report in a consolidated form. The annual audited accounts must be prepared in accordance with approved accounting standards of the Malaysian Accounting Standards Board (MASB) and the Companies Act 2016.

A borrowing company must also provide to the Bursa Securities quarterly reports and half-yearly statements that comply with the Bursa Securities listing requirements.

In addition, the management company of a property trust must provide to the Bursa Securities and unit holders quarterly unaudited and yearly audited accounts containing comparative figures for the previous corresponding period within 2 months after the end of the relevant period.

Bursa Malaysia introduced further enhancements to its Main Market Listing Requirements concerning periodic reporting, particularly for Islamic Real Estate Investment Trusts (REITs) and Exchange-Traded Funds (ETFs) with waqf features. These amendments aim to improve transparency and accountability by requiring additional disclosures in quarterly and annual reports.[1] continuous disclosure obligations applicable to all listed companies. According to Bursa Securities LR 9.01(3), "continuing disclosure" is the "timely and accurate disclosure of all material information by a listed issuer to the public." The corporate disclosure policy of the Bursa Securities is that:

> A listed issuer must . . . disclose to the public all material information necessary for informed investing and take reasonable steps to ensure that all who invest in its securities enjoy equal access to such information: BURSA SECURITIES LR 9.02(1).

Bursa Securities has six specific policies concerning disclosure and these are contained in Chapter 9 of the Listing Requirements: see Bursa Securities LR 9.02(2). They can be summarized as follows:

(a) A listed company must make immediate public disclosure of all material information concerning its affairs. Information is considered material if it is reasonably expected to have a material effect on either:

(i) the price, value or market activity of the company's securities; or

(ii) the decision of a holder of securities of the listed issuer or an investor in determining his choice of action.

(b) A listed company must release material information to the public in a manner designed to obtain its fullest possible public dissemination—as a minimum, the company must release the announcement to the Bursa Securities or simultaneously to the press, news wire services and Bursa Securities.

(c) If the company becomes aware of a rumour or report (whether or not true or false) that contains information likely to have an effect on the trading in the company's securities, or would be likely to have a bearing on investment decisions, the company must make due enquiry and immediately publicly clarify, confirm or deny the rumour or report.

(d) If there is unusual market action in the company's securities, the company must make enquiry to determine whether rumours or other conditions requiring corrective action exists and:

(i) if necessary, take whatever action is appropriate; or

(ii) if there is no explanation for the unusual market action, and if it is appropriate, announce that there has been no material development in its business and affairs not previously disclosed or, to its knowledge, any other reason to account for the unusual market action.

(e) A company must refrain from promotional disclosure activity which exceeds that necessary to enable the public to make informed investment decisions.

(f) Insiders must not trade on the basis of material information which is not known to the investing public and, even after material information has been released, for a period sufficient to permit thorough public dissemination and evaluation of the information.

Recent amendments in April 2023 further enhanced these obligations, particularly for Islamic REITs and ETFs with waqf features, mandating more detailed quarterly and annual reporting on waqf distributions and any changes to waqf arrangements.[1]

§ MY:33 Proxy solicitation

A shareholder may appoint proxies to attend and vote at any company meeting if permitted to do so by the company's articles of association: section 294 of the Companies Act. Most (if not all) articles permit the appointment of proxies.

The Companies Act 2016 allows a prescribed number of shareholders to requisition a meeting of members. The prescribed number is shareholders representing at least one tenth of the total voting rights of all members having a right to vote at general meetings as at that date: section 311 of the Companies Act 2016.

§ MY:34 Disclosure of interest in shares

Substantial shareholder disclosure and tracing provisions are contained in Part III, Division I, Subdivision 7 of the Companies Act 2016.

In broad overview, a person (resident or otherwise) who is a substantial shareholder in a publicly listed or unlisted public company must notify the company, the SC and the Bursa Securities (if listed) of its "interest" in shares if their shareholding is 5% or more of the nominal amount of the company's voting shares. Companies are required to keep a register of substantial shareholders: section 144 of the Companies Act 2016. Failure to notify the company may result in the imposition of a penalty: sections 137 and 138 of the Companies Act 2016.

Under the Companies (Amendment) Act 2024, the definition of "beneficial owner" has been expanded to include not only those holding 20% or more of shares but also individuals who exert effective control over a company, even if they hold less than 20%. This aligns with the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) standards to enhance transparency. Furthermore, companies must maintain a Register of Beneficial Owners, as stipulated in the new Section 60B, detailing significant control over the company, which must be kept updated and filed with the Companies Commission of Malaysia (CCM).[1]

The concept of an interest in shares is given a broad meaning in section 8(4) of the Companies Act 2016 and that definition also applies for the Securities Industry (Reporting of Substantial Shareholding) Regulations 1998.

Pursuant to section 136 of the Companies Act 2016, a person has a substantial shareholding in a company if he has an interest in one or more voting shares in the company and the nominal amount of that share is not less than 5% of the total nominal amounts of all voting shares in the company or, in the case of a company having more than one class of shares, in that class of shares. It is that person's "interest" in the required number of shares that is important.

Under section 8(4) of the Act, a person is deemed to have an interest in a share in various circumstances including where a body corporate has an interest in the share and:

(a) the body corporate or its directors are accustomed or under an obligation to act in accordance with the directions of that person in relation to that share;

(b) that person has a controlling interest in the body corporate; or

(c) that person or his associates are entitled to exercise or control the exercise of at least 20 percent of the votes attaching to the voting shares in the body corporate—a person is an associate of another if he is a related corporation or he controls or is controlled by that other person.

Any company has the ability to trace persons with substantial shareholdings by virtue of section 56 of the Companies Act 2016. This section gives a listed company the power to issue notices requiring a shareholder of a listed company to inform the company as to whether the shares held by them are held as beneficial owner or trustee. This power assists the functioning of the takeover provisions. Failure to comply with a section 56 notice is a criminal offence.

The 2024 amendments also give companies greater powers to enforce these disclosures. Under the new Section 60C, companies can request beneficial ownership information from shareholders, beyond just voting shares. This complements the existing Section 56, which gives listed companies the power to trace persons with substantial shareholdings. Section 56 allows companies to issue notices requiring shareholders to inform whether the shares are held as a beneficial owner or trustee. Failure to comply with a Section 56 notice is now a criminal offense under these amendments.

D. FRAUD, MANIPULATION AND INSIDER TRADING

§ MY:35 Overview

Malaysia has a penal code that contains various offences relating to fraud generally. There are also specific statutory provisions in the securities laws that create a number of statutory offences relating to fraud, manipulation and insider trading.

In recent years, there has been increased enforcement action by the SC and Bursa Malaysia, especially targeting market manipulation schemes like "pump and dump." This illegal practice involves artificially inflating a stock's price before offloading it to unsuspecting investors at a profit, leaving them with losses. There have also been notable prosecutions for insider trading under Section 188, with cases resulting in both heavy fines and imprisonment.[1]

§ MY:36 Prohibited Conduct under the CMSA 2007

Part V, Division 1 of the Capital Market and Services Act 2007 contains prohibitions against abusive practices. The key provisions are as follows:

Section 175: False trading and market rigging transactions
Section 176: Stock market manipulations
Section 177: False or misleading statements
Section 178: Fraudulently inducing persons to deal in securities
Section 179: Use of manipulative and deceptive devices
Section 181: Dissemination of information about illegal transactions.

There has been a significant focus on enforcing penalties for false trading and market rigging. In particular, the SC has successfully pursued both criminal and civil actions against perpetrators. Civil liabilities are now widely enforced, with heavy fines and penalties imposed.[1]

§ MY:37 Insider trading

General:

The primary insider trading regime of general application is contained in Part V, Division 1, sub-division 2 of the Capital Market and Services Act 2007. For companies listed on the Bursa Securities, insider trading prohibitions are contained in Bursa Securities Listing Rules 9.14 and 9.15. Insider trading remains one of the most actively prosecuted offenses under the CMSA.[1] In one prominent case, an individual was sentenced to five years in prison and fined RM7 million for insider trading related to APL Industries Berhad shares.[2]

Part III, Division 2 of the Companies Act 2016 (entitled, "Members, Directors and Officers of Companies") contains provisions specifically directed at "officers." Note that the term, "officer' is widely defined in section 2(1) of the Companies Act 2016 to include any director, secretary or employee of the corporation. For the purpose of provisions relating to director's duties under section 213 and substantial property transaction under section 223 and 228, directors include the "chief executive officer, the chief operating officer, the chief financial controller or any other person primarily responsible for the operations or financial management of a company, by whatever name called" (section 210 CA 2016).

Companies Act 2016:

Improper Use of Information: Section 218(1)(b) of the Companies Act 2016, contains a prohibition against any director or officer of a company using information acquired by virtue of that position in order to gain directly or indirectly an advantage for himself or for any other person or to cause detriment to the company without the company's consent or ratification. Recent enforcement actions emphasize strict liability for directors who misuse information for personal advantage, with civil actions initiated for breaches of fiduciary duty leading to significant damages being awarded. Directors now face more stringent penalties if they are found guilty of failing to act in good faith or using corporate information improperly.

Capital Market and Services Act 2007:

As stated, the primary insider trading regime is contained in the Part V, Division 1 of the CMSA 2007.[3] Section 174 of the CMSA 2007 makes it plain that Div. 1 applies to:

(a) acts and omissions occurring within Malaysia in relation to securities of any body corporate which is formed or is carrying on business or is listed within or outside Malaysia; and

(b) acts or omissions occurring outside Malaysia in relation to securities of any body corporate which is formed or is carrying on business or is listed within Malaysia.

Insider: An insider is defined in section 188 of the CMSA 2007. An insider is a person who "possesses information that is not generally available which on becoming generally available a reasonable person would expect to have a material effect on the price or the value of securities and who knows or ought to know that the information is not generally available."

Information: The term "information" is defined in section 183 of the CMSA 2007. The term is given a wide definition and includes:

(a) matters of supposition and other matters that are insufficiently definite to warrant being made known to the public;

(b) matters relating to the intentions, or likely intentions, of a person;

[3]For a detailed discussion see Mushera Khan, Directors Accountability and Insider Trading (2001) Butterworths, Kuala Lumpur.

(c) matters relating to negotiations or proposals with respect to (i) commercial dealings or (ii) dealing in securities;

(d) information relating to the financial performance of a corporation;

(e) information that a person proposes to enter into, or has previously entered into one or more transactions or agreements in relation to securities or has prepared or proposes to issue a statement in relation to such securities; and

(f) matters relating to the future.

Generally available: Section 184 of the CMSA 2007 states that information is "generally available" if the information has been made known in a manner that would or would tend to "bring it to the attention of reasonable persons who invest in securities of a kind whose price or value might be affected by the information, and since it was so made known, a reasonable period for it to be disseminated among, and assimilated by, such persons has elapsed."

Material effect on price or value: Section 185 of the CMSA 2007 states that information that would have or tend to have a material effect on the price or value of securities, "refers to such information which would or would tend to, on becoming generally available, influence reasonable persons who invest in securities in deciding whether or not to acquire or dispose of such securities, or enter into an agreement with a view to acquire or dispose of such securities."

Three types of offences: There are three types of offences: the trading or dealing offence, the procuring offence, and, the tipping offence. All of these offences are contained within section 188 of the CMSA 2007.

The trading offence: Under section 188(2)(a) of the CMSA 2007 an insider commits the trading offence if he or she buys or sells or agrees to buy or sell securities. Recent examples are provided by the Axis insider trading case and the APL Industries case: see SC News and Media, "Court declares in favour of SC in Axis Insider Trading Case", November 2017 and "Ex-CEO of APL Industries and Ex-Remisier Fined and Jailed Five Years for Insider Trading", November 2017.

The procuring offence: Section 187 of the CMSA 2007 defines the word "procures" widely. If a person "incites, induces, encourages or directs an act or omission by another person" then that person is taken to have procured the act or omission of the other person. Section 188(2)(b) of the Act states that an insider commits the procuring offence if they procure someone else to buy or sell the company's securities or enter into an agreement to do one of those things.

The tipping offence: The tipping offence is contained in section 188(3) of the CMSA 2007. An insider is prohibited from communicating inside information to a third party whom the insider knows or ought reasonably to know would either trade or procure another person to trade.

Liability: First, criminal sanctions attach to insider trading by virtue of section 188(4) of the CMSA 2007. The penalty is a fine of no less than RM1 million and up to ten years imprisonment. Second, Part V Division 1, subdivision 3 deals with civil liability for insider trading. Under sections 200 and 211, the SC may institute civil proceedings against any person in respect of a contravention of sections 175-178, 179, 181 or 188. The limitation period is twelve years from the date on which the cause of action accrued or the date on which the SC discovered the contravention (whichever is later). Section 201 provides a civil remedy for any person who suffers loss or damage as a result of a contravention of section 188. Third, section 360 gives a court the power to make a range of orders including the disposal of securities.

Defences: Various defences are provided in sections 190-198. The principal defences are as follows:

(a) Under section 192, there is an exception for liability in respect of entering into an underwriting or sub-underwriting agreement and the acquisition of securities pursuant to such an agreement. Further, section 188(3)—the tipping offence—does not apply in respect of the communication of information in relation to securities to a person solely for the purpose of procuring the person to enter into an underwriting or sub-underwriting agreement.

(b) "Chinese Wall" defence: sections 190(3) and 191(3) of the CMSA 2007 provide "Chinese Wall" defences for companies and partnerships that trade in securities.

(c) Under section 197, a redemption of units of a unit trust scheme in accordance with a buy-back covenant in the scheme is also exempted from section 188.

(d) There is also a defense of 'parity of information' under section 198 of the CMSA 2007.

§ MY:38 Short selling

Short selling is a criminal offence under section 98 of the CMSA 2007. The CMSA 2007 prohibits a person from selling securities unless at the time of the sale he has, or believes on reasonable grounds that he has, a presently exercisable and unconditional right to vest the securities in the purchaser. Under the CMSA 2007, a person is deemed to sell securities if he purports or offers to sell securities, holds himself out as entitled to sell securities or instructs a dealer to sell securities.

The penalty for short selling is a fine of up to RM 5 million or imprisonment for a term of up to 10 years or both.

There are a number of exceptions to the prohibition: see section 98(4) of the CMSA 2007. These are:

(a) odd lot transactions by a licensed dealer who specialises in dealings in odd lots;

(b) a sale of securities by a person who has contracted to buy those securities and has the right to have those securities vested in him conditional only upon any of the following:

(i) payment of the consideration,
(ii) receipt of a proper instrument of transfer,
(iii) receipt of documents of title, and

(c) a sale of securities where:

(i) the securities are included in a class of securities in relation to which there is a provision in the rules of the stock exchange to the effect that the class is a class of securities to which this paragraph applies;

(ii) the sale is made as may be provided by the rules of the stock exchange; and

(iii) at the time of the sale, neither the person who sold the securities, nor any person on behalf of whom the first-mentioned person sold the securities, was an associate, in relation to the sale, of the body corporate that issued or made available the securities;

(d) a sale of securities which are permitted by Bank Negara to be transacted in the short term money market;

(e) a sale of securities—

(i) of such class or category; or

(ii) which is transacted in such manner or under such circumstances, as may be prescribed by the Minister; and

(f) the making or trading of a futures contract, or anything done in relation thereto, on the futures market of a futures exchange or on an exempt futures market.

The SC and Bursa Malaysia have clarified that investors involved in rights issues—where shares have been fully paid for but are yet to be officially listed—can engage in short selling under the assumption that they possess the exercisable right to sell the shares. This has provided much-needed guidance for investors to avoid violating Section 98 of the CMSA.

Additionally, Regulated Short Selling (RSS) has been reinforced by Bursa Malaysia, allowing approved securities to be short-sold under stringent guidelines designed to maintain market stability. This distinction between illegal short selling and RSS has been emphasized to prevent market manipulation.[1]

E. TENDER OFFERS, TAKEOVERS AND OTHER CORPORATE COMBINATIONS

§ MY:39 Tender offers

The SC administers, supervises and controls take-overs and mergers of public companies (which may or may not be listed on the Bursa Securities). In pursuit of safeguarding the interest of shareholders, Malaysia adopts the Equal Opportunity Rule as the foundation of its takeover laws. Under the rule, fairness in takeover is considered achieved through affording equal treatment to all shareholders of the target company in four aspects namely rights to disinvestment, equal premium, information and decision making.[1]

The Malaysian Code on Take-Overs and Mergers 2016 has been updated to strengthen disclosure requirements and introduce stricter timelines. Offerors and target company boards must now make an announcement within one hour of an obligation to make or receive a takeover offer. If immediate disclosure is not feasible, the company must request a temporary trading halt to avoid price manipulation.[2] The SC has also introduced provisions for pre-conditional offers, requiring prior consent from the SC for regulatory approvals before including pre-conditions in a takeover offer.[3]

Part VI, Division 2 of the CMSA 2007 contains primary rules relating to takeovers, mergers and compulsory acquisitions.[4] A "take-over offer" is defined in section 216 of the CMSA 2007 as "an offer made to acquire all or part of the voting shares, or any class or classes of voting shares" of a company and the term "control" is defined in the same section as the acquisition of more than 33 per cent of the voting shares of the company.

Section 217 of the CMSA 2007 states that the Minister of Finance may prescribe a Code on Take-Overs, Mergers and Compulsory Acquisition. Under section 217(4), the SC administers the Code. The current Code is the Malaysian Code on Take-overs and Mergers 2016 (the Code) which came into effect on 15 August 2016. The Code is supplemented by the Rules on Take-Overs, Mergers and Compulsory Acquisitions (TOM Rules) issued by the SC on 15 August 2016. Section 218 of the CMSA 2007 imposes an obligation on the relevant persons to comply with the Code and a person who contravenes section 217(1), (2) or (3) commits an offence and shall, on conviction, be liable to a fine not exceeding one million ringgit or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to both.

The SC administers the Code and may issue rulings interpreting the Code, issue rulings on the practice and conduct of persons involved in or affected by a takeover and enquire into any matter relating to any take-over. In administering the Code, the SC is required to take into account the desirability of ensuring that any acquisition takes place in an efficient, competitive and informed market.[5]

In addition to the Code, there are various disclosure requirements under the Companies Act 2016 applicable to substantial shareholders (see D4.4 above). Foreign investment restrictions must also be observed (see D8.3 below).

§ MY:40 Take-over offers

The threshold for regulation is more than 33 percent of the voting shares in a company.

Under the CMSA 2007, a person (whether alone or acting in concert with others) who acquires more than 33 percent of the voting shares in a company must make an offer to acquire the remaining voting shares in the company which is not yet his at an equal amount of premium paid by the acquirer in consideration of control. The take-over offer must be made in accordance with the Code and the SC's rulings in particular, shareholders' rights to exit, premium sharing, information and decision making.[1]

The CMSA 2007 also regulates creeping takeovers. It requires a person who has between 33-50 percent of the voting shares in a company to comply with the Code and the SC's rulings if he wishes to acquire additional voting shares of more than 2% within any period of 6 months. The SC also enhanced enforcement against attempts to bypass these rules by using indirect holdings.

If an offeror becomes entitled to at least 90% of the voting shares in the target company within 4 months after making the take-over offer, the offeror may compulsorily acquire the remaining shares in the company. The equivalent buy out right is given to minority shareholders to "force" the acquirer to purchase the remaining 10% voting shares so that they may exit from the company if the acquirer did not exercise his compulsory acquisition right.

It is interesting to note that in Malaysia in term of access to information, the TOM Rules contains a unique feature which extends the equal right to information to offerors. This unique feature is found in Rule 10.04 TOM Rules whereby an offeree or board of directors of the offeree who gives any information, including particulars of offeree shareholders to an offeror shall give the same information to another bona fide potential offeror upon request. This indirectly benefits the shareholders in creating competitive environment that helps shareholders to get the best offer for their shares.

§ MY:41 SC's powers takeovers and mergers

The SC may under section 219(1) of the CMSA 2007 exempt a person or a take-over offer from regulation. In exercising its power to do so, the SC must take into account the desirability of ensuring that acquisitions take place in an efficient, competitive and informed market and have regard to the need to ensure:

(a) that shareholders and directors of the target company and the market are aware of the identity of the acquirer, have reasonable time in which to consider the offer and are supplied with sufficient information necessary to enable them to assess the merits of the offer;

(b) that all shareholders of the target company have equal opportunities to participate in benefits accruing from the offer;

(c) that fair and equal treatment of all shareholders would be achieved; and

(d) that the directors of the target company and acquirer will act in good faith to observe the objects mentioned above and that minority shareholders are not oppressed or disadvantaged.

If a person fails to comply with the Code or any of the SC's rulings, the SC may take any one or more of the following actions under section 220(1) of the CMSA 2007:

(a) direct the person to comply;

(b) impose a penalty of up to RM1 million;

(c) reprimand the person;

(d) direct a stock exchange to deprive the person access to the facilities of the stock exchange;

(e) prohibit the person from having access to the capital market;

(f) if the person is a listed corporation, direct the stock exchange to suspend trading in the corporation's securities, suspend the listing of the corporation or remove the corporation's securities from the official list;

(g) if the person is not listed corporation, direct any stock exchange to prohibit the listing of the corporation's securities; and

(h) require the person to take such remedial or mitigation steps as the Commission may direct;

(i) if the person is an adviser, refuse to accept or consider any submission from such person relating to any matter under Division 2, Part IV of the CMSA.

It is also an offence under section 221 of the CMSA for a person to provide false or misleading information or engage in misleading or deceptive conduct in connection with any document or information required to be submitted to the SC in relation to a take-over offer. The penalty for committing this offence is a fine of up to RM3 million or imprisonment of up to 10 years or both.

§ MY:42 Arrangements and reconstructions

Part III of the Companies Act 2016 provides for a re-organisation of the share capital of a company by the consolidation of shares of different classes or by the division of shares into shares of different classes. This is known as an arrangement.

An arrangement may be part of or connected with a scheme for the reconstruction of a company or the amalgamation of 2 or more companies.

Where an arrangement is proposed between a company and its creditors or members, the court may order a meeting at which the arrangement is put to a vote. Any arrangement requires the approval of a majority in number representing at least 75% in value of the creditors or members, as the case may be, voting at the meeting. It must also be approved by the court, which may grant approval subject to such alterations or conditions as it thinks just. Schemes of arrangement, amalgamation and selective capital reduction are also regulated under the Code on takeovers and mergers.[1]

The Companies (Amendment) Bill 2023, which was passed by the Dewan Rakyat in November 2023 and the Dewan Negara in December 2023, introduces several enhancements to the existing framework for arrangements and reconstructions. A major update is the introduction of pre-packaged schemes of arrangement, allowing companies to negotiate and finalize arrangements with creditors in advance. Such schemes can then be approved by the court without the need for a formal creditors' meeting, which helps distressed companies save both time and costs.[2]

Another significant addition is the cross-class cramdown mechanism. This new provision enables the court to approve a scheme of arrangement even if some classes of creditors oppose it, provided that at least 75% in value of all creditors agree to the scheme. This ensures that a small group of dissenting creditors cannot block a restructuring effort that has the majority's support.

The Bill also introduces a requirement for companies to maintain a Register of Beneficial Owners, making it mandatory for companies to record the details of their beneficial owners. The companies are required to update the Companies Commission of Malaysia (CCM) within 14 days of any changes in ownership. This provision aims to improve corporate transparency by ensuring accurate and up-to-date information about who truly owns and controls the company.[3]

These amendments provide an enhanced framework for corporate restructuring, making it easier for companies to navigate financial difficulties while offering greater protections to creditors and improving overall transparency in corporate governance.

§ MY:43 Share buy backs

Section 127 of the Companies Act 2016 allows a public company to buy back its shares subject to certain conditions. These are:

(a) the constitution of the company authorised the share buy back;
(b) that the company is solvent—section 112(2) CA 2016 provides the solvency test for share buyback and the directors of the company must give a solvency declaration (section 113 CA 2016);
(c) the shares must be bought through the stock exchange on which they are quoted and in accordance with the rules of the stock exchange (Nevertheless, under section 127(3) CA 2016, a company may purchase its own shares otherwise than through a stock exchange if the purchase is permitted under the relevant rules of the stock exchange and made in accordance with such requirements as may be determined by the stock exchange); and
(d) the buy back must be made in good faith and in the interests of the company—the directors of the company must provide a declaration to this effect.

Shares bought back may be dealt with in the following manner:

- the company may cancel all the shares bought back;
- the company may retain all the shares as treasury shares; or
- the company may keep some of the shares as treasury shares and cancel the rest.

The shares kept as "treasury shares" may later be resold on the stock exchange according to the rules of the stock exchange or distribute these shares as dividends to shareholders. While the shares are kept as treasury shares, these shares do not carry any voting rights or right to dividend and shall not be counted for any voting, quorum, meeting or substantial shareholding purposes.

The requirement in the Companies Act 2016 that the shares must be bought through the stock exchange on which they are quoted and in accordance with the rules of the stock exchange necessitates the company to comply with Chapter 12 of the Bursa Securities Listing Requirement on Share Buy Back. Some of the rules are that the shares must be bought back at a price not exceeding 15% above the weighted average market price for the past 5 market days immediately prior to the purchase.

§ MY:44 Accounting and auditing

Section MY:28 above outlines the provisions regulating corporate accounting.

The requirements for an audit are contained in Part III, Division 3 of the Companies Act 2016. The audit must be conducted in accordance with section 266 of the Companies Act. Section 266 sets out the nature of the investigation and prescribes the content of the auditor's report.

The annual financial statements must be audited by a qualified auditor. The auditor must state in his report whether the accounts are in his opinion properly drawn up:

(a) so as to give a true and fair view of the matters required by section 248 of the Companies Act 2016 to be dealt with in the financial statement; and

(b) in accordance with the provisions of the Companies Act 2016 so as to give a true and fair view of the company's affairs.

The auditor of a borrowing corporation must, within 7 days after giving the corporation its financial statements, send a copy of those statements to the trustee for debenture holders.

There is also an obligation on such an auditor to report to the borrowing corporation any matter of which he becomes aware which is in his opinion relevant to the exercise and performance of the trustee's powers and duties. The auditor must send the trustee a copy of this report.

The Companies (Amendment) Bill 2023 has introduced stricter requirements for auditors, particularly in regard to beneficial ownership and adherence to the Malaysian Financial Reporting Standards (MFRS) or the Malaysian Private Entities Reporting Standard (MPERS). These changes ensure more detailed and transparent financial reports, contributing to improved corporate governance and compliance.[1]

Additionally, auditors must ensure that companies remain solvent before conducting certain transactions, such as share buybacks or dividend distributions, in order to protect the interests of creditors and shareholders.[2]

V. INTERNATIONAL SECURITIES TRANSACTIONS

§ MY:45 Registration requirement for foreign companies

The term "foreign company" is defined in section 2 of the Companies Act 2016 as, inter alia, a company incorporated outside Malaysia. Part v, Division 5 of the Companies Act 2016 contains provisions for foreign companies. A foreign company must be registered under the Companies Act 2016 before it can establish a place of business in Malaysia or carry on business within Malaysia: see section 561 of the Companies Act. A registered foreign company must have a registered office in Malaysia (section 566), must appoint a person resident in Malaysia (not including a foreign company) to be its agent in Malaysia to be answerable for all such acts, matters and things that are required to be done by the foreign company under CA 2016 and be personally liable to all penalties imposed on the foreign company for any contravention of CA 2016 unless the agent satisfies the court hearing the matter that the agent should not be liable (section 563) and must lodge its financial statement with the ROC: section 575 of the Companies Act 2016.

§ MY:46 Exchange control

Exchange control falls within the purview of the Controller of Foreign Exchange (who is also the Governor of the Central Bank) and is regulated under the Exchange Control Act 1953. The Controller issues Exchange Control of Malaysia Notices (ECM Notices) setting out exchange control regulations. These are primarily prudential in nature and are regularly revised to reflect Malaysia's policy of gradual and progressive liberalisation of the financial sector.

Some of the major exchange control regulations applicable to non-residents are as follows:

(a) foreign investors may freely repatriate their investments (including capital, profits, dividends and interest);

(b) non-resident portfolio investors are freely allowed to repatriate their principal sum and profits—an exit levy system introduced after the 1997-98 Asian financial crisis was abolished on 2 May 2001;

(c) non-residents may open foreign currency accounts with commercial and merchant banks—there are no restrictions on inflows and outflows of funds through such accounts;

(d) non-residents may also open ringgit accounts (known as External Accounts) with financial institutions which can be used for certain purposes such as purchase of ringgit assets and payment for goods and services and expenses incurred in Malaysia—these restrictions on use do not apply to External Accounts of non-residents working in Malaysia;

(e) there is no restriction on payments to non-residents for imports of goods and services although such payments must be made in foreign currencies; and

(f) non-resident travellers can bring in any amount of foreign currency but must declare amounts exceeding USD2,500 or equivalent.

On 1 June 2022, BNM issued updated FEP Notices, which introduced several key amendments to exchange control regulations. Non-residents are now allowed to open and maintain foreign currency accounts in Malaysia with more flexible arrangements, extending this privilege beyond immediate family members. Moreover, foreign currency transactions between residents and non-residents for miscellaneous expenses such as holiday or medical expenses abroad are now permitted. These changes reflect Malaysia's ongoing commitment to creating a conducive environment for both domestic and cross-border economic activities while maintaining necessary oversight for financial stability.[1]

§ MY:47 Investment companies and investment advisers

An "investment advice" is defined in Schedule 2 Part 2 of the CMSA 2007 as carrying on a business on a business of advising others concerning securities or issues or promulgates analysis or reports concerning securities or derivatives. The definition excludes licensed banks, insurance companies, statutory trustee companies, advocates and solicitors or accountants who give advice incidental to the practice of their profession, a person who gives advice incidental to the conduct of his business of dealing in securities and the proprietor or publisher of general newspapers.

Persons who act on behalf of investment advisers must also be licensed as representatives.

An application for an investment adviser's licence must be made to the SC. Pursuant to section 64 of the CMSA 2007, the SC may refuse an application for an investment adviser's licence if:

(a) the application does not comply with the requirements of the Securities Industry Act;

(b) it is against public interest to grant a licence to the applicant; or

(c) the minimum criteria set out in the schedule to the Act has not been met. Among other things, the schedule requires that the applicant be a fit and proper person to hold a licence. In determining this question, the SC will have regard to the applicant's probity, his competence and soundness of judgment, the diligence with which he is likely to fulfill his responsibilities and whether the interests of customers are likely to be in any way threatened by the applicant becoming an investment adviser.

The SC may grant or renew a licence subject to such conditions or restrictions as it thinks fit.

A holder of a dealer's or fund manager's license issued under the Securities Industry Act can act as an investment adviser without having to obtain an investment adviser's license.

A licensed investment adviser must maintain a register of securities in which he has an interest. The register must be produced for inspection by the SC as required by them.

Recent updates by the SC have further expanded the scope of investment advisory services, particularly by introducing digital investment advisory models. These models allow for the use of algorithm-based tools to deliver personalized investment advice to a wider audience, promoting inclusivity in the capital market.[1]

The SC has also introduced the IA Guidelines, effective as June 2023, which set high standards for investment analysts in providing well-researched and objective reports. This ensures greater protection for investors and improves the overall quality of investment advisory services in the market. In addition, recent revisions to the SC Licensing Handbook enable Dealer's Representatives (DRs) to apply for additional licenses to provide broader services, including investment advice and financial planning.[2]

VI. BROKER-DEALERS OR ENTITIES AUTHORIZED TO TRADE IN SECURITIES

§ MY:48 In general

The CMSA 2007 regulates dealings in securities. Under Schedule 2 Part 2 of the CMSA 2007, "dealing in securities" has a broad definition. It means, whether as principal or agent:

(a) acquiring, disposing of, subscribing for or underwriting securities; or

(b) making or offering to make with any person, or inducing or attempting to induce any person to enter into or to offer to enter into:

(i) any agreement for or with a view to acquiring, disposing of, subscribing for, or underwriting securities; or

(ii) any agreement (other than a futures contract) the purpose or avowed purpose of which is to secure a profit to any of the parties from the yield of securities or by reference to fluctuations in the value of securities.

A dealer is a person who carries on a business of dealing in securities. Such a dealer must have a dealer's licence: section 58 of the CMSA 2007.

§ MY:49 Licensing

Under section 2 of the CMSA 2007, the term "licence" means a Capital Markets Services Licence or a Capital Markets Services representative's Licence granted under section 61 of the CMSA 2007:

A person who holds any of the following licences immediately before the effective date of the CMSA 2007 are also deemed to hold a Capital Markets Services Licence or a Capital Markets Services representative's Licence: section 384(1)(a) of the CMSA 2007.

(a) a dealer's licence;
(b) a fund manager's licence;
(c) an investment adviser's licence;
(d) a dealer's representative's licence;
(e) a fund manager's representative's licence; or
(f) an investment representative's licence,

An application for a licence must be made to the SC under section 60 of the CMSA 2007.

An application for the grant of a licence shall be accompanied by a non-refundable prescribed fee which shall be paid in such manner as may be specified by the Commission: section 60(4) of the CMSA 2007.

A licensed person shall pay such prescribed licence fee in respect of each regulated activity on a yearly basis and on such date as the Commission may specify: section 63(1) of the CMSA 2007.

The holder of the licence must notify the SC of changes in certain particulars.

In addition, a dealer must keep a register of securities in which he has an interest. There are requirements to keep accounts specified under the CMSA 2007, to pay monies received by dealers into a trust account and to lodge annual auditors' reports.

In 2023, the Securities Commission Malaysia (SC) initiated a comprehensive review of the CMSA to modernize the legal framework and ensure that it aligns with evolving market dynamics. This review includes provisions for handling digital assets and cryptocurrency and recognizing the increasing role of digital platforms in securities trading. The updates aim to accommodate digital innovations while maintaining robust regulatory oversight to protect investors. The SC has also strengthened licensing requirements, with an emphasis on ensuring that all individuals and entities involved in dealing in securities meet rigorous fit and proper standards, enhancing market integrity and accountability.[1]

Furthermore, the SC has taken a proactive approach in engaging the public and industry stakeholders to ensure that the legal framework remains relevant and effective in the face of technological advancements and global financial shifts. This includes ongoing adjustments to the Capital Markets Services Licensing (CMSL) regime, aimed at streamlining approval processes and ensuring greater transparency in securities dealings.[2]

§ MY:50 Restrictions on dealers and advisers

The CMSA 2007 imposes a number of requirements on dealers and advisers in Part VI of the CMSA 2007. These include prohibitions on falsely representing their qualifications as approved by the SC, detailed obligations regarding the issuance of contract notes, and the requirement for dealers to disclose whether they are acting as principals in a transaction. Additionally, dealers and advisers must disclose any interest in securities when making recommendations. These requirements on dealers and advisers in Part VI of the CMSA 2007 include:

(a) a prohibition against representing that his abilities or qualifications have been approved by the SC;

(b) detailed requirements for the issue of contract notes in relation to transactions of securities;

(c) a prohibition on dealing as principal unless the dealer first informs the person with whom he is dealing that he is acting as principal; and

(d) a requirement to disclose any interest in securities the subject of a recommendation.

In addition, an adviser must not make a recommendation unless:

(a) he has taken into account the information possessed by the adviser concerning the investment objectives, financial situation and particular needs of the customer;

(b) he has given such consideration to, and conducted such investigation of, the subject matter of the recommendation; and

(c) the recommendation is based on that consideration and investigation.

Although contravention of this prohibition is not an offence, the adviser is liable to pay damages to the customer in respect of any loss or damage suffered as a result of relying on that recommendation: section 248(1)(d) of the CMSA 2007.

In 2023, the SC undertook a comprehensive review of the CMSA 2007 aimed at modernizing these provisions to reflect changes in the market. This review emphasizes enhanced transparency, especially in how dealers and advisers disclose information to clients and handle conflicts of interest. The updated regulations also address the growing role of digital platforms and automated advisory services, ensuring that such platforms adhere to the same high standards as traditional advisers. This initiative is part of the SC's broader effort to promote greater accountability and protect investors in an evolving financial landscape.[1]

§ MY:51 Revocation and suspension of licence

The circumstances in which the SC may revoke a licence under sections 72 of the CMSA 2007 include:

(a) on any ground on which the SC may refuse to grant or renew a licence under sections 64 and 65;

(b) where the licensed person ceases to carry on business for 3 consecutive months;

(c) if the SC has reason to believe that the licensed person has failed to perform his duties efficiently, honestly or fairly;

(d) if the licensed person contravenes or fails to comply with any rules of a stock exchange, clearing house or central depository which is binding upon him; or

(e) if the licensed person contravenes or fails to comply with any condition or restriction applicable in respect of the licence of the CMSA 2007.

§ MY:52 Register of interest

Dealers, investment advisers and their representatives, financial journalists and authorised depository agents appointed under the Securities Industry (Central Depositories) Act must keep a register of securities in which they have an interest: section 83 of the CMSA 2007.

§ MY:53 Accounts and audit

Part VII of the CMSA 2007 contains detailed requirements of the form and content of accounting records and financial statements for dealers. Each dealer must appoint a qualified auditor who may resign or be removed only with the consent of the SC: section 126 of the CMSA 2007. In addition to the financial statements, the auditor must prepare an auditor's report containing information on certain prescribed matters. The auditor must report on any matter, which in his opinion may adversely affect the financial position of the dealer or constitute a breach of the accounting requirements of the Act.

There are provisions allowing the SC to appoint an independent auditor in certain circumstances to investigate the affairs of a dealer: section 130 of the CMSA 2007.

§ MY:54 Court powers relating to dealer's bank accounts

Moneys held in a trust account of a dealer must not be used for payment of the debts of the dealer: section 113 of the CMSA 2007. The CMSA 2007 does not contain specific provisions allowing a court to make protective orders in relation to such accounts.

VII. OTHER SECURITIES REGULATIONS

§ MY:55 Intra-national securities regulation by States

As securities regulation is a matter that falls within the federal list of the Federal Constitution, there is no scope for state regulation. Accordingly, no separate state regulations govern the issue of securities.

§ MY:56 Civil and criminal liability

The securities laws impose criminal sanctions for the making of statements or the issue of prospectuses that are misleading. Under the Companies Act 2016, it is an offence for a person to authorise or cause the issue of a prospectus containing an untrue statement or from which there has been willful non-disclosure. The penalty for such an offence is imprisonment for 5 years, RM1 million or both (section 168 CA 2016).

Under the Securities Commission Malaysia (SCMA) 1993, it is an offence for a person (including the applicant, its financial adviser and other experts) to submit any statement or information to the SC that is false or misleading or from which there is a material omission. It is also an offence to engage in or aid or abet conduct that is misleading or deceptive or is likely to mislead or deceive the SC. These offences are punishable by imprisonment for up to 10 years, a fine not exceeding RM3 million or both.

Proceedings for any offence against the Companies Act 2016 may generally be taken by the ROC, or by any other person with the consent of the Public Prosecutor (section 589 CA 2016).

Prosecutions for offences against the CMSA 2007 or the Securities Commission Act, however, may only be instituted with the consent of the public prosecutor.

In addition to the penalties prescribed by legislation, there are a number of specific provisions that provide for civil remedies. A person who is guilty of insider dealing, for example, could be liable to a person for loss suffered by the person because the consideration in respect of the relevant securities differs from the consideration that would have been reasonable if the inside information had been generally known at the time of the dealing.

Under section 167 of the Companies Act 2016, certain persons are liable to pay compensation to investors for any loss or damage sustained by reason of any untrue statement in a prospectus, or by reason of the willful non-disclosure in the prospectus of any material information within his knowledge. Persons who may be liable are directors of the issuer, any person named as a director, promoters and any person who authorised or caused the issue of the prospectus.

§ MY:57 Central Depositories

The Securities Industry (Central Depositories) Act lays the framework for the establishment of a central depository system for securities. Malaysian Central Depository Sdn Bhd, was established in 1990 to establish and maintain a central depository. It is now known as Bursa Malaysia Depository Sdn Bhd.

The central depositories system is a book-entry system. In order to trade, an investor must open a CDS account. These accounts are maintained by stock broking companies, which act as authorised depository agents. The CDS account will show trades, deposits, transfers, withdrawals and corporate actions such as bonus and rights issues.

Certain institutional investors and financial institutions may open CDS accounts with Malaysian Central Depository Sdn Bhd. These entities are known as authorised direct members. Authorised direct members may maintain their CDS accounts by using terminals at their own offices.

Under the CDS, there is no physical delivery of share scripts. Delivery of script is replaced by a book-entry system to track movement of shares from trades on the Bursa Securities. Sellers must have adequate shares in their CDS accounts on T+2 and buyer's account will be credited on T+5.

Shares are usually traded in board lots of 100 units.

VIII. NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ MY:58 Equity Crowd Funding and Peer-to Peer Lending (P2PL) in Malaysia

Recognising the importance of crowd funding, on 21 August 2014 the Securities Commission issued Public Consultation Paper No. 2/2014, "Proposed Regulatory Framework for Equity Crowdfunding". Consequently, "Guidelines on Regulation of Markets under Section 34 of the Capital Markets and Services Act 2007" was introduced on 10 February 2015 to provide new requirements for the registration of equity crowdfunding (ECF) platforms and provide governance arrangement for the operators of such platforms. These guidelines have since been superceded by the "Guidelines on Recognized Markets" of 13 April 2016 to cover P2PL platforms as well as ECF. Malaysia was the first country in the ASEAN region to have a defined regulatory environment to facilitate investment crowdfunding.[1]

The move to facilitate investment via ECF was enabled by technological advancement. Many entrepreneurs have utilised the Internet to directly seek financial assistance from the virtual public (the "crowd" over the internet) including financial investors such as

[Section MY:58]

[1]Thailand and Singapore are considering such laws. New Zealand has an ECF regime: see (2015) 32 (1) C&SLJ 62-69. Australia has introduced legislation to enable ECF—see (2016) 34 C&SLJ 239- and that legislation is now in effect. There is a review of ECF worldwide in A. Pekmezovic and G Walker, "The Global Significance of Crowdfunding: Solving the SME Funding Problem and Democratising Access to Capital" (2016) 7 (2) William & Mary BLR 347-458.

business angels, banks, venture capital funds and retail investors from the local and global market. Due to its fast growth, many countries have made regulatory adjustments to allow and regulate ECF in order to protect investors.

The amendments made earlier to the securities laws were made to facilitate new fundraising structures, enhance investor protection, clarify responsibilities of issuers and advisers, and expand the scope of the SC's supervisory powers. The Capital Markets and Services (Amendment) Act 2015 introduced a new market framework to facilitate the establishment of alternative trading platforms, including ECF platforms. Under this framework, private companies that are hosted on a registered ECF platform are provided a safe harbor from provisions in the Companies Act 2016, which prohibit private companies from offering shares to members of the public. The introduction of ECF is in line with the Securities Commission's objective to promote capital market inclusion and widen avenues for capital-raising. To promote a more conducive environment for the issuance and subscription of corporate bonds, the Capital Market Services Act Amendment has clarified the roles and responsibilities of persons in charge of preparing disclosure documents.

The Securities Commission called for the registration of ECF operators in February 2015. Eventually, six ECF platforms were approved aimed at supporting small businesses and entrepreneurs with greater chances to access capital. The approved platforms are Alix Global, Ata Plus, Crowdonomic, Eureeca, pitchIN and Propellar Crowd+. With the registration of the six approved ECF platforms, on 11 December 2015, a new guideline was issued viz, the Guidelines on Recognised Markets which came into force on 15 December 2015 (revised 13 April 2016 to enable P2PL) and intended to provide better regulation for ECF.

In general, the Guidelines provide general provisions on the requirements of registration procedure, conduct and operation of the ECF platforms as can be seen in the 2016 Guidelines. The Guidelines recognise both equity and P2P Lending as methods of fundraising via crowdfunding. Certain limitations are imposed such as limitations on the eligible issuers (fund seekers), on fund limits and investment limits (caps) and on the type of investors for micro-funding entities. An issuer which proposes to offer shares under the ECF framework must be a locally incorporated private company. Certain companies are not allowed to raise funds through the ECF Platform. An issuer cannot be hosted on multiple ECF Platforms concurrently.

Since the provisions in the Guidelines are general, it is applicable to both conventional and Islamic ECF. An additional Shariah requirement is imposed on the Islamic ECF exercise which the appointment of a Shariah advisor: see Part E of the Guidelines. As at April 2018, however, there is no Islamic equity crowdfunding platform registered in Malaysia.

In summary, ECF and P2PL are now regarded as part of the definition of 'recognised market' which act as an alternative market facility for fundraising activities. Article 1.10 of the 2016 Guidelines define a recognised market as a market that "essentially covers an alternative trading venue, marketplace or facility that brings together purchasers and sellers of capital market products." The level of regulation is not as stringent vis-à-vis the approved markets. Due to its distinctive features as compared to the approved market, terms and conditions are imposed on the recognised market operator commensurate with the risk profile, nature and scope of the proposed recognised market operations.

Further initiatives aimed at enhancing the efficiency of the capital market and promoting Malaysia's competitiveness can be expected as part of a continual review and response to global events and changing circumstances.

In 2022, Malaysia's ECF and P2P markets raised RM1.7 billion, marking 26% growth from the previous year. The Malaysia Co-Investment Fund (MyCIF), a public-private initiative, played a significant role by co-investing RM638 million in 3,635 MSMEs, expanding its scope to include sectors like agriculture and ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance).[2]

Moreover, the 2023 Budget saw an additional RM40 million allocated to MyCIF, boosting its capacity to provide co-investment, particularly in sectors aligned with Malaysia's sustainable development goals. The SC's ongoing regulatory support ensures transparency and investor protection by setting limits on fund-seeking entities, investor caps, and requiring platforms to comply with Shariah law for Islamic crowdfunding.[3] ECF platforms like pitchIN, Alix Global, Ata Plus, and Crowdonomic continue to provide accessible capital-raising opportunities for businesses, with MyCIF being instrumental in enhancing their effectiveness. The SC's guidelines on recognized markets, particularly for P2PL, have made significant contributions to improving financial inclusion and supporting small businesses with limited access to traditional financial institutions.[4] These regulatory advancements reflect Malaysia's leadership in creating a dynamic alternative financing landscape, with the SC and MyCIF ensuring ongoing support for MSMEs while promoting investor trust and market integrity.

and emerging technologies such as distributed ledger technologies (DLT)[1] including blockchain.[2] Equity-based crowd-sourced funding (known as "ECF" in Malaysia) and Peer-to-Peer lending (P2PL) are two of the earliest examples of FinTech.

As stated, Malaysia has introduced a regulatory framework for ECF and P2PL as provided in the amended 2016 Guidelines on Recognized Markets (in effect as of 2 May 2016). Six registered operators for P2PL were approved in November 2016 to widen funding avenues for SMEs. The six registered operators are B2B FinPal, Ethis Capital, FundedByMe Malaysia, ManagePay Services, Modalku Ventures and Peoplelender.

In other developments, the SC has released, "Guidelines to Enhance Cyber Resilience of the Capital Market" (October 2016). These Guidelines require regulated entities to have in place a risk management framework to minimize cyber threats.

The SC has also produced a Digital Markets Strategy. This includes a pilot project to explore the usage of DLT in the unlisted and OTC space. At the same time, Bank Negara Malaysia now has the ability to approve regulatory sandboxes for financial institutions and fintech companies: see Baker McKenzie, A Guide to Regulatory Fintech Sandboxes across Asia Pacific (2018). The SC has also signed a series of innovation cooperation agreements ("fintech bridges") with regulators in major financial centres.

The SC's position on initial coin offerings (ICOs) appears in a Media Statement dated September 2017 available on the SC website. The Media Statement takes the form of a caution to investors. In January 2018, the SC issued a cease-and-desist order to Copycash Foundation in regard to a proposed plan to issue an ICO in Malaysia.

In 2023, BNM introduced the Licensing Framework for Digital Banks, allowing new players in the digital banking space to experiment under a simplified regulatory environment during the Foundational Phase. This framework supports new entrants while maintaining a level playing field for both incumbents and new market participants.[3]

BNM also issued updated guidelines for electronic money (e-money), effective as of 30 December 2022, aimed at enhancing governance and ensuring the safety of digital payment systems. This regulatory clarity is critical for the growing digital payments ecosystem.[4]

The SC has sustained its regulatory efforts in ECF and P2P lending by ensuring that operators comply with the Guidelines on Recognized Markets. These guidelines include transparency measures, interest rate caps, and risk assessments, enhancing both investor protection and market efficiency.[5]

Furthermore, the SC has emphasized cybersecurity resilience in FinTech, requiring regulated entities to implement robust cybersecurity frameworks to address the increasing threats posed by digital platforms.[6]

The SC's Digital Markets Strategy also continues to explore the potential of distributed ledger technology (DLT), including blockchain, particularly in unlisted markets. Meanwhile, BNM's regulatory sandbox remains a key tool for fintech companies to test new innovations in a controlled environment.[7]

(6) The court may only grant an order under subsection (5) upon being satisfied that—

(10) Where a prospectus contains a statement to the effect that the constituent documents of the issuer or the deed as defined under section 287 complies with, or has been drawn so as to comply with, the requirements of any exchange referred to in subsection (1), the prospectus shall, unless the contrary intention appears from the prospectus, be deemed for the purposes of this section to imply that application has been made, or will be made, for permission for the securities offered by the prospectus to be listed for quotation on the stock exchange.

I. LEGAL SYSTEM

§ MX:1 Generally

Mexico is a country with a vast history and a nation with strong roots. In recent years, Mexico has witnessed internal political transitions and has been transformed after years of a peaceful political life into a country of stable, but not immense growth. As Mexico transitions to a legitimate democracy and its leaders work to create stronger and better economic and political mechanisms, it is helpful to review its political history, and in particular, to study the influence of securities markets and securities regulation in Mexico's development.

The constitutional amendments of 2024 marked a significant turning point in Mexico's governance. Key among these changes is the reduction of Supreme Court Justices from 11 to 9, coupled with the introduction of popular elections for federal and state judges beginning in 2025. These reforms aim to enhance accountability and public trust in the judiciary but have raised concerns about judicial independence. Such shifts in governance could have downstream effects on the interpretation of laws affecting the securities market, as judicial decisions increasingly reflect public sentiment.

§ MX:2 Mexico, a civil law country

Mexico is a civil law country in contrast to common law countries, such as the U.S., Canada and England. Unlike common law courts, Mexican courts do not follow stare decisis doctrine, and under the Mexican legal system there are no jury trials.

The origins of Mexico's legal system are both ancient and classical, borrowing heavily from the Greek, Roman and French legal systems. Thus, the Mexican legal system is more similar to the Latin American and continental European systems than the U.S. legal system.

Mexico was originally inhabited by a number of Amerindian civilizations, including the Olmecs, Mayas, Toltecs and Aztecs. Mexico was under Spanish rule for three centuries before achieving independence (early in the 19th century) on September 27, 1821 (contrary to popular belief, the date of Mexican independence is not on "Cinco de Mayo"). Shortly after Mexico attained its independence, a plan for a constitutional monarchy failed and a republic was proclaimed in December 1822.

Mexico's first constitution was enacted in 1824, giving birth to federalism and to important legal concepts such as the establishment of a Public, Representative, and Democratic Republic.[1] After a period of rebellions, presidential destitutions, and chaos, the 1824 Constitution was abrogated by a new constitution in 1857. Although the new constitution did not deter continued political unrest and upheaval in Mexico, it was instrumental in Mexico's defense from the French invasion and throughout the empire of "Maximiliano de Habsburgo" (this version of the constitution remained in effect until 1917).

In 1910, a revolution erupted in Mexico stemming from severe social and economic issues, which lasted for ten years and gave birth to the 1917 Constitution. The 1917 constitution is still in force, although it has been amended on several occasions in order to address both social and political changes over the years.

Some of the most important amendments to the constitution are those related to the electoral process; these changes in the election laws have served to provide a better and more comprehensive exercise of democracy in Mexico.

After Mexico's Revolution in 1929, the Institutional Revolutionary Party ("PRI") was created under a different name. PRI emerged as a coalition of interests and kept the political competition peaceful. PRI controlled Mexico's national government for 71 years, winning every presidential race and most gubernatorial races until the presidential election of Vicente Fox Quesada of the National Action Party ("PAN") in 2000. President Fox, the first chief executive elected in a free and fair election, was sworn-in on December 1, 2000.[2] Following the elections in 2000, Mexico began a slow, but stable transition into a legitimate democracy.

The devaluation of the peso in late 1994 and the subsequent political transitions have thrown Mexico into its worst recession in over half a century, thereby creating an uncertain social and political state. Ongoing economic and social concerns include, among other things, low wages, under employment for a large segment of the population, inequitable income distribution, and few opportunities for the large Amerindian population in the impoverished southern states. Nevertheless, the nation continues to make an impressive recovery despite these setbacks.

President Enrique Peña Nieto implemented a national political pact that was signed on December 2, 2012, known as "Pacto por México". The pact's framework is composed of 95 public policy proposals based on three guiding principles:

- The strengthening of the Mexican State.
- The democratization of the economy and politics, as well as the expansion and effective implementation of social rights.
- The participation of citizens as key actors in the design, implementation, and evaluation of public policies.

The pact has resulted in major amendments to the telecommunications, energy, finance, and education legal frameworks among others.

Moreover, an important amendment to the Constitution on financial discipline and fiscal responsibility matters was published in the Federal Official Gazette on May 26, 2015. The purpose of this amendment is to establish a new legal framework for the sustainable management of public finances, including the responsible and moderate use of public indebtedness.

To summarize, the amendment to the Constitution includes the following:

- An amendment to article 25 that makes reference to a public finances and financial system stability principle that is to be observed in the formulation and implementation of the National Development Plan, and in the corresponding state and municipal plans.
- An amendment to article 73 that extends the authority of Congress to establish general laws on public debt and fiscal responsibility. As a result of the foregoing a General Law of Public Debt will be enacted as secondary legislation, which will set forth limits and conditions for the indebtedness of states and municipalities.
- An amendment to article 74 that sets forth the obligation of states and municipalities to publish all of their public borrowing in a single registry. Secondary legislation will establish minimum guidelines of information to be filed before such public registry, such as debtor's and creditor's data, amount, interest rate, term, guarantee, and source of payment.
- An amendment to article 79 that increases the authority of the Federal Superior Audit Office to supervise debt and guarantees granted by the Federal Government for the public borrowing of states and municipalities. Such amendment also increases the authority of state audit offices with respect to internal controls regarding actions adopted by states and municipalities in terms of funds, local resources, and public debt.
- An amendment to article 108 that provides for public officials to be accountable for the mishandling of public funds and public debt.
- An amendment to article 117 which sets forth that states and municipalities may obtain financing with the purpose of investment, restructuring or refinancing productive public investments, and prohibits them from allocating resources provided by such financing to the payment of current expenses. This amendment also sets forth that states and municipalities may obtain short-term loans, provided they do not exceed the maximum limits and conditions specified in the corresponding legislation. Such short-term loans must be paid no later than three months before the end of the corresponding administrative term, during which no new loans may be contracted.

In recent years, Mexico's legal system has undergone significant reforms to adapt to modern commercial practices, with a special focus on digital economy regulations and international trade agreements. As Mexico continues to strengthen its legal framework, the implementation of the T-MEC (USMCA) has introduced new compliance obligations for businesses operating in Mexico, particularly in the fields of intellectual property, labor rights, and environmental protections. These reforms are gradually harmonizing Mexican laws with global standards.

§ MX:3 Interrelationship between various organizations of government

The official name of the country is "United Mexican States" It is divided into 32 States. Mexico City is the capital of the Republic. Guadalajara and Monterrey are two of the major industrial hubs. Other important cities include Tijuana, Ciudad Juárez, León, Querétaro, Puebla, Veracruz, Villahermosa and Mérida.

As of 2024, the population of Mexico is over 135 million people. Mexico is the most populous Spanish speaking country in the world. People between the ages of 15 and 64 comprise 65.99% of the population, while 26.93% are 14 years of age or younger. The population of Mexico City alone is over 21 million, thereby constituting the largest concentration of people in the Western Hemisphere.

The Federal Government is divided into three branches: executive, legislative, and judicial, each with specific powers granted by the Constitution.

§ MX:4 Interrelationship between various organizations of government—Legislative Branch

The Legislative Branch resides in the bicameral Federal Congress, which is divided into the following:

1. The Senate, which is comprised of 128 seats; 96 seats are elected by popular vote to serve a six-year term, and the remaining 32 seats are allocated based on each party's popular vote.
2. The House of Representatives which is comprised of 500 seats: 300 members are elected by popular vote to serve three-year terms and the remaining 200 member seats, also serving three year terms, are allocated based on each party's popular vote.

Elections were held on June 2, 2024. These elections included the presidential race, where MORENA's candidate won decisively, along with elections for all 128 Senate seats and 500 seats in the House of Representatives.

The main structure and responsibilities of the Legislative Branch are specified in articles 50 through 79 of Mexico's Constitution. The Congress holds two ordinary sessions per year. The first session begins on November 1 and continues until December 31; the second session begins on April 15 and may continue until July 15. A Permanent Committee (Comisión Permanente), consisting of thirty-seven members (eighteen senators and nineteen representatives), undertakes the legislative responsibilities during congressional recess. The President may call the Congress for extraordinary sessions to deal with important legislation or extraordinary matters.

The powers of the Congress include the right to pass laws, impose taxes, declare war, approve the national budget, approve, or reject treaties and conventions executed with foreign countries, and ratify diplomatic appointments. The Senate addresses all matters concerning foreign policy, approves international agreements, and confirms presidential appointments. The House of Representatives, much like the United States House of Representatives, addresses all matters pertaining to the government's budget and public expenditures.

In some instances, both chambers share certain powers, such as the power to establish committees to discuss particular government issues and question government officials. The representatives have the power to appoint a provisional president. In the event of impeachment, the two chambers are convened jointly as a General Congress. Each legislative chamber has a number of committees that study and introduce bills. If there is disagreement between the chambers on a bill, a joint committee is appointed to draft a compromise version.[1]

§ MX:5 Interrelationship between Various Organizations of Government—The Executive Power

The Executive Power is headed by the President, who is elected for a period of six years without possibility of re-election. The President is assisted by 18 Secretaries of various Ministries, which include the Department of Agriculture, Livestock, Rural Development, Fishery and Food, the Department of Communications and Transport, the Department of Foreign Affairs, the Department of Labor and Social Welfare, and the Department of Tourism, among others, and by the Attorney General (whose appointment requires the consent of the Senate). The President is both the Chief of State and head of the government. There is no Vice-President.

The President guides Mexico's relations with other nations, and also executes treaties, which later must be ratified by the Senate. The President also regulates imports and exports with leave of Congress.

For at least 70 years when the PRI party candidates were in office, the president was deemed to have the power to designate his successor going into the presidential elections. Because PRI was the ruling party and controlled Mexico's electoral existence and political life, the President's announcement was understood as the proclamation of the new president, and was deemed the perfect successor "political party dictatorship."

As a result of significant electoral reforms, Mexican political parties now run internal elections to determine who will run for president. "Presidential power to appoint successor" has been abandoned.

[Section MX:4]

[1]Federal Government, www.geographic.org.

Some of the current constitutional powers of the President are:

- Supreme executive power to run and administer the country.
- The power to appoint Mexican Ambassadors.
- The power to nominate Supreme Court Justices.
- The power to veto laws.
- The power to introduce bills into Congress for their analysis.

The elected president began her term on December 1, 2024.

The year 2024 has been a pivotal year for Mexican politics due to the highly contested elections, where the ruling party secured major victories, reinforcing its legislative control. Based on that gained control of even a super-majority in both the Senate and the House of Representatives, a flurry of constitutional and statutory changes are being swiftly passed. Among those changes, judicial reform stands out as it involves the reduction of Justices in the Supreme Court from 11 to 9 members, and based on current rules in place all judges at both the federal and state level will be replaced by persons elected by popular vote scheduled to occur at the federal level in June 2025 and June 2027.

The constitutional reforms of 2024 have also expanded the powers of the Executive Branch, enabling the President to propose sweeping legislative changes more efficiently under expedited procedures. This change, while streamlining governance, has raised concerns among market participants regarding the stability of the regulatory environment, particularly in areas like financial and securities law, where sudden changes could disrupt long-term investment strategies.

§ MX:6 Interrelationship between Various Organizations of Government—Judiciary Branch

The Supreme Court of Justice is the head of the Judiciary Branch. The Supreme Court has 11 justices who are nominated by the President and appointed by the Senate; justices serve 15-year terms. The Electoral Tribunal, collegiate, unitary and district tribunals, district courts, and the Council of the Federal Judiciary sit below the SC. Based on the judicial reform, the number of justices will be reduced to nine, and their tenure to 10 years.

The Organic Law of the Judicial Power regulates the activities of the Judicial Power setting forth its authority, composition, and functions. The Federal Council of the Judiciary is empowered to administer, supervise, and discipline the Judicial Power, except for the Supreme Court. Besides the existence of federal courts, each of the thirty-one states has its own civil and criminal courts, which act and are governed by local laws.

Federal and State courts suffer a multitude of grievous problems. These problems include corruption of judges and administrative personnel; the inefficiency and incompetence of judges and other personnel; lack of sufficient and modern technical equipment as a result of very limited budgets; and inadequate facilities. Federal judges and Federal courts are the best and most efficient because they have comparatively larger budgets and more modern technical equipment, which is due in large part to the excellent work of the Council of the Federal Judiciary. Recently, Mexico has enacted a number of federal statutes dealing with organized crime, rights of handicapped persons, elderly people, children and teenagers, e-commerce; domestic violence; anti-discrimination; transparency and public access to government information, etc.

The judicial reforms enacted through the 2024 constitutional amendments have significantly reshaped the Mexican judiciary. With the Supreme Court reduced to nine members and judges at all levels now subject to popular election, the potential for shifts in judicial interpretation of financial and securities laws has increased. While intended to democratize the judiciary, these changes could introduce variability in judicial decisions, impacting the predictability of rulings in complex securities disputes.

§ MX:7 Role of courts and administrative agencies in interpretation of laws—Binding effect

Based on different political and constitutional grounds, the role of judges in interpreting law, and thereby in creating and updating the Mexican legal system, is limited compared to the role of judges in, for example, the United States or the United Kingdom.

The Supreme Court or the Circuit Courts are the only courts authorized to set binding judicial precedents in Mexico through a strict process called "jurisprudence" which is regulated under the Amparo Law (Ley de Amparo). The jurisprudence set thereby is binding for judicial and administrative courts, but not for administrative agencies.

Notwithstanding the above, there are other general binding judicial resolutions, such as cases of Constitutionality Actions (Acciones de Inconstitucionalidad), which are general challenges to the constitutionality of a law or administrative acts. The resolutions reached in these cases may also apply generally if 8 out of the 11 Justices of the Supreme Court consent (as mentioned above, the number will be dropped to six out of nine Justices based on an ongoing revamping of the entire judicial system whereby members of the judiciary will be replaced by new persons elected by popular vote in June 2025 and June 2027).

In addition, there are other constitutional actions of non-binding nature, such as competence controversies (Controversias Constitucionales). Such controversies are typically between independent constitutional organs—like, the Federation and a State or Constitutional County (Municipio), or two Counties of different States, or two or more States, or two different power branches within the same State (e.g., judiciary and administrative local powers)—and argued before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court resolutions on such cases are non-binding precedents.

All other judicial resolutions under Mexican law are non-binding; in fact, they are very rarely even quoted in claims or actions brought before Mexican courts.

§ MX:8 Role of courts and administrative agencies in interpretation of laws—Suits for Amparo

According to doctrine, the writ for Amparo (Juicio de Amparo) is an original Mexican recourse to defend particular constitutional rights against the acts of public agencies. Because in Mexico's liberal human rights system only public agencies may violate human rights (constitutional rights), therefore, the writ for Amparo is not available against acts of private entities. This is yet another difference from constitutional actions in common law countries.

Through the writ for Amparo (meaning, writ for Protection), only those claims on public agencies' violations of constitutional rights explicitly provided for in the text of the constitution may be heard, which strongly limits the extent of these actions. Usually, such rights only comprehend legality and due process matters, whereas most other constitutional rights have been just slightly broached in Mexican Jurisprudence.

The basic difference between the writ for Amparo and other common law writs, such as the writ of certiorari or the writ of habeas corpus, is that the writ for Amparo involves a series of constitutional writs in itself; that is, it is, at least theoretically, a broad defense action against all constitutional violations, and not a particular action to protect certain constitutional rights.

A general principle governing the writ for Amparo is the so-called Otero Principle, created by Mariano Otero, a widely recognized member of the 1917 Mexican constitutional convention. Mr. Otero believed that constitutional writs should only extend its protection as individual rulings; thus, the second paragraph of the Constitution of the United Mexican States in force (article 107) states as follows: when granted, the writ for Amparo may only benefit and protect particular interests, and shall not constitute general binding precedents.

To create binding precedents, the Supreme Court and Circuit Courts must follow the strict process of jurisprudence under the Amparo Law. Jurisprudence is set upon five consecutive Amparo resolutions with the same holding, with no resolution against them, and under specific voting conditions. The Supreme Court may directly overturn jurisprudence by setting new criteria in case of any discrepancy between two sets of precedent.

§ MX:9 Role of courts and administrative agencies in interpretation of laws—Administrative agencies

A few decades ago, Administrative Agencies were first introduced in Mexico under the Organic Law of the Federal Public Administration, (Ley Orgánica de la Administración Pública Federal), issued originally in December 1976. The regulation of Administrative Agencies (Organ- ismos Descentralizados) and State-Owned Companies (Paraestatales) is still extremely poor in Mexico. Administrative agencies' independence and capacity to create or interpret regulations is extremely limited. These limitations stem from the fact that Agencies depend on public appointments and funds, and also because there are severe restrictions and prohibitions to private investment or foreign equity for certain State-reserved and priority matters.

Nevertheless, certain Administrative Agencies, like the National Banking and Securities Commission (Comisión Nacional Bancaria y de Valores), the National Insurance and Bonding Commission (Comisión Nacional de Seguros y Fianzas) and the National Commission for Defending Financial Services' Customers (Comisión Nacional de Seguros y Fianzas,) are taking the lead in the Agencies' sector and currently have broad authority to regulate the financial sector and maintain jurisdiction over disputes on securities and banking matters. The resolutions of the Agencies may be appealed within the Administrative Courts.

Administrative Courts in Mexico may also create binding precedents for inferior courts. Administrative Courts may create this binding precedent by adhering to specific procedures similar to those followed by the Supreme Court or the Circuit Courts. Even so, this type of binding precedent does not oblige judicial courts and may, in any case, be challenged by writ for Amparo with federal courts, which are subject to the jurisprudence set by the Supreme Court and Circuit Courts.

II. SECURITIES REGULATORY FRAMEWORK

§ MX:10 History and Development: the New Securities Market Law

The history of Mexican securities regulation can be traced back to the last decade of the 19th century, when the first commercial regulations were introduced in the Commerce Code published on October 7, 1889, which is currently still in force. Throughout the 20th century, important commercial institutions were gradually introduced and laws regulating corporations, securities and credit operations were passed. Nevertheless, Mexican commercial institutions, including securities, always remained a step behind the latest international figures.

The first Mexican Stock Exchange began operations on October 21, 1895 (adopting its current name on May 21, 1910), but it was not until the last quarter of the 20th century (1985) when the securities markets re-emerged that a completely new Securities Market Law was passed. In 1995, the main regulatory body for securities trading in Mexico, the National Banking and Securities Commission (the "Commission"), was created as an independent and specialized public agency, which is overseen by the Ministry of Treasury and Public Credit (the "Ministry").

The 1985 Securities Market Law was an important milestone for securities trading in Mexico, but it lacked the requisite specific regulation for trading in an aggressive and advanced commercial and securities markets. The 1985 Securities Market Law was the first attempt to create a regulatory scheme for securities in Mexico. In 2005, a New Securities Market Law was passed. This time the law more closely resembled securities' regulations in America. In particular, it sought to define some of "hardest points" in Mexican commercial laws such as corporate transparency, corporate governance, fiduciary duties, minority rights; and, of course, manager and director liabilities, as well as sanctions and prevention of insider trading.

In the following pages you will find a brief introduction to the primary scheme for securities regulation in Mexico, including the structure and operation of the main regulatory bodies of the Mexican securities market.

In 2023, significant reforms were introduced to the Securities Market Law aimed at enhancing market transparency and investor protection. These reforms included the establishment of stricter disclosure norms for issuers and a more comprehensive approach to combating market manipulation. The National Banking and Securities Commission (CNBV) was also granted enhanced powers to oversee new financial instruments and innovations such as cryptocurrencies and blockchain-based securities.

§ MX:11 Regulatory scheme; identification and creation of main legal bodies

The Mexican securities regulatory scheme is divided between general commercial laws affecting the securities market and specific securities market laws. Both sets of laws are essential to understand the basic operational framework of corporations, shareholders' rights, and public and private offerings in Mexico.

There are two basic groups of the securities market regulatory bodies: i) the first includes the Securities Market Law and the Mutual Funds Law (formerly known as the Investment Companies Law and amended on June 13, 2014), which provides the general operational framework for securities commercial acts and mutual funds; and ii) the second group is comprised of several general regulations issued by the Commission.

The Commission regulates the securities market by issuing General Regulations and by authorizing public and private offerings. It also oversees the general activities of participants in the securities market.

The recent updates to the Securities Market Law also included new provisions for Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) compliance. The Ministry of Finance, in collaboration with the CNBV and Banco de México, is now tasked with issuing ESG regulations, ensuring that issuers adopt best practices in sustainable governance.

Please bear in mind that a detailed analysis of securities' market laws is included in another section of this Chapter, this section is intended only to provide an overview.

§ MX:12 Regulation under the General Law of Business Organizations (GLBO)

In Mexico, Commercial corporations are regulated under the General Law of Business Organizations (Ley General de Sociedades Mercantiles, "GLBO"). Banking institutions, insurance and cooperative companies are regulated by specific legal bodies. Public companies are regulated by the New Securities Market Law, which is intended to complement the provisions of the GLBO. Public companies must be incorporated in Mexico as capital stock companies ("SA"), which are regulated by the GLBO; once the company has been incorporated as a capital stock company, it is then amended to be incorporated into a stock market company ("SAB").

Besides capital stock companies, the GLBO regulates five other types of companies, and joint ventures. Because joint ventures do not create a different entity, they are not actually corporations; notwithstanding they are deemed as commercial entities for tax purposes.

Limited liability companies are also regulated in the GLBO; they have specific characteristics, for instance, they must not have more than 50 partners and they may not go public without first transforming into an SA.

SA companies in Mexico must have at least two shareholders. The administration of SA companies relies on a board of directors or a sole manager and has a surveillance body or a sole statutory auditor, who is in charge of auditing the administration and management of the SA.

Shareholders have a preferential right to acquire new shares issued for capital stock increases, as well as the right to oppose resolutions radically amending the corporate by-laws (or merger or spin-off resolutions) by resigning to the SA. By structure, ordinary shareholders meetings may be held with the representation by 50% of the capital stock convened at the meeting. Extraordinary shareholders' meetings must be held with the representation by 75% of the capital stock convened at the meeting.

Shareholders single partner companies were forbidden until March of 2016, when the GLBO was amended and a new regime in which one shareholder can constitute a company was created. These companies are called simplified stock companies (sociedades por acciones simplificadas). Under this regime, people can establish a micro or small business, through an online application at no cost.

The liability of the shareholders is limited up to the amount of their contributions. They must qualify as micro and small companies, so their annual income must be up to $5,000,000.00 MXN. Also, they are not subject to the requirement of formalizing their incorporation through a public deed or any other formality.

In alignment with recent amendments, the requirement for Sociedades Anónimas Promotoras de Inversión Bursátil (SAPIBs) to transform into Sociedades Anónimas Bursátiles (SABs) within 10 years was abolished. This change offers greater flexibility for companies in choosing their corporate structure while retaining market access.

§ MX:13 Regulation under the Foreign Investment Law (FIL)

The importance of foreign relations in political, economic, cultural, scientific and technological matters has become critical to effectively participate in an international economy. Considering that the value of assets depends entirely on the economic and political status of a country, the regulations by each government must provide certainty and security to investors. The Foreign Investment Law published on December 23, 1993 ("Ley de Inversión Extranjera" "FIL") is specifically designed to provide legal certainty on foreign investments and the regulation of foreign investments.

Along with the FIL, the Foreign Investment National Commission ("FINC") designs the rules necessary to promote foreign investment and creates through general resolutions guidelines for the application of legal provisions and statutes on foreign investment.

The 2023 reforms to the Foreign Investment Law reinforced Mexico's commitment to foreign investment protection by incorporating arbitration mechanisms into the regulatory framework, ensuring expedited dispute resolution.

§ MX:14 Negotiable Instruments and Credit Transactions Law (NICTL)

The foreword of the Negotiable Instruments and Credit Transactions Law ("NICTL") contains general theory, but also refers to negotiable instruments, such as compensation, protest, a third-party guarantee, bill of exchange, etc. Even though today the NICTL refers to eight negotiable instruments, initially the NICTL referred only to the bill of exchange, promissory note, check, liabilities, deposit certificates and the pledge certificate. The participation and housing certificates were added later.

Other recognized negotiable instruments contained in the preliminary Title of this Law are regulated by several laws. For instance, the share of stocks is regulated in the GLBO and the bill of lading is regulated in the Navigation Law; the certificate of capital, the bank bonds and the subordinate liabilities are all regulated in the Financial Institutions Law.

There are other types of negotiable instruments regulated by the Civil Code, such as the civil instrument at bearer or at command. These types of instruments were originally included in the NICTL.

The 2023 reforms also introduced hedge funds into the Investment Funds Law. These funds are now recognized as distinct financial instruments that can trade across diverse asset classes, catering exclusively to institutional or qualified investors. This development aims to diversify investment options in the Mexican financial market.

Recent amendments expanded the scope of negotiable instruments to include blockchain-based securities and smart contracts, provided they meet transparency and enforceability standards under Mexican law.

§ MX:15 New Securities Market Law

The new Securities Market Law was published in the Federal Official Gazette on December 30, 2005.

III. PUBLIC SECURITIES MARKET

§ MX:16 Relevant institutions and organizations

While in theory many stock exchanges could operate in Mexico, to date the only stock exchange in Mexico is the Mexican Stock Exchange (Bolsa Mexicana de Valores, "MSE"). The MSE's trading floor is located in Mexico City with an information center in the city of Monterrey, Nuevo León, Mexico. Transactions in the money and capital markets are carried out through electronic means.

Nevertheless, on 29 August 2017 the Ministry granted a concession to operate as a stock exchange under the observation of the Commission to Bolsa Institucional de Valores, S.A. de C.V. ("BIVA (Bolsa Institucional de Valores)"), becoming the only competitor to MSE in four decades. BIVA (Bolsa Institucional de Valores) started operations in the second trimester of 2018 once technical and operational adjustments were implemented and trial procedures were completed.

The MSE is currently composed of 36 members, all of whom were brokers authorized by the Commission prior to their entry into the MSE. Brokerage firms (casas de bolsa) are the entities commonly authorized by the Commission to trade securities in Mexico.

It is important to note that although almost all trading of securities registered with the MSE is conducted by brokerage firms, banks also play a role as issuers, purchasers and, sometimes, traders of securities. Under certain circumstances, operating companies of investment companies may also trade registered securities.

Insurance and bonding companies are significant institutional investors in the stock market. Auxiliary credit organizations (which comprise warehouses, leasing and factoring companies, credit unions and currency exchange houses) must perform transactions through brokerage firms.

In Mexico, the money market transactions are operated by Servicios de Integracion Financiera, S.A. de C.V. ("SIF") and its main shareholders are the members of the MSE. MexDer, Mercado Mexicano de Derivados, S.A. de C.V. is in charge of the Mexican futures and derivatives market, and its main shareholders are brokerage firms, exchange houses, banks and several financial entities.

The depository of the securities traded in Mexico is an entity named S.D. Indeval, S.A. de C.V., which operates also as a clearinghouse. A trust named "Asigna" operates as clearing and liquidation chamber of the Mexican derivatives market.

The Mexican Association of Securities Intermediaries (Asociación Mexicana de Intermediarios Bursátiles) and the Mexican Academy of Financial Law (Academia Mexicana de Derecho Financiero) are the principal associations related to the MSE.

- Equity Market: 140 issuers

The inclusion of hedge funds as a regulated investment vehicle under the 2023 amendments to the Investment Funds Law marks a pivotal change. This new category allows institutional investors to access diverse asset classes, broadening the investment landscape in Mexico while adhering to stringent regulatory oversight to ensure market stability.

§ MX:19 Basic statistical information—Banks[1]

IV. DISCUSSION OF REGULATIONS REGARDING SUBSTANTIVE SECURITIES MATTERS

§ MX:21 Creation, Regulation and Organization of Securities Regulatory Organizations

This section sets forth the main institutional framework of securities regulation with a focus on the design, as well as the powers and objectives entrusted to the organizations.

The 2024 constitutional amendments also underscore the importance of transparency and fiscal responsibility, aligning with broader efforts to strengthen institutional frameworks. The inclusion of fiscal discipline as a constitutional mandate has led to more stringent oversight of securities markets, ensuring that public debt and investment vehicles comply with enhanced accountability standards. These changes highlight a commitment to fostering a stable economic environment conducive to domestic and foreign investment.

§ MX:22 Creation, regulation and organization of securities regulatory organizations—Governmental agencies

As in other jurisdictions, securities regulation authority is divided among various institutions and organizations; there are some private entities as well as governmental agencies. The main regulator for the sector in Mexico is the Ministry that performs most duties in this sector through a semi-independent agency: the Commission. The Central Bank ("Banco de México") has specific powers regarding securities, and there are other government agencies such as the National Insurance and Bonding Commission (Comisión Nacional de Seguros y Fianzas, "CNSF") and the National Pension Fund System Commission (Comisión Nacional del Sistema de Ahorro para el Retiro, "CONSAR"), which are also of relevance.

§ MX:23 Creation, regulation and organization of securities regulatory organizations—Ministry of the Treasury and Public Credit

The Ministry is one of the most important government ministries in Mexico. It is charged with the responsibility of ensuring financial stability in the country.

The President of Mexico has sole power to designate and remove the Secretary of Treasury and Public Credit from office. The Secretary, in turn, designates and coordinates the Deputy Secretaries. Under the Deputy Secretary of the Treasury and Public Credit, a Division for Insurance and Securities is in charge of monitoring the sector.

The Ministry is the agency charged with monitoring the nation's financial system as well as interpreting the laws and regulations of the sector.

The Ministry has some influence but not absolute discretion to control the semi-independent regulatory Commission of the sector. Among its most important powers, the Ministry approves the regulatory budgets and appoints the chairmen of the Commission and CNSF, and the secretary of the Ministry sits as chairman of the CONSAR.

As part of the legislative reforms of 2023, the Ministry of the Treasury and Public Credit now plays a pivotal role in integrating Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) standards into financial regulations. This effort is expected to position Mexico as a leader in sustainable finance across Latin America.

The Commission is a semi-independent entity under the Ministry's structure, responsible for the supervision and regulation of financial entities, natural persons, and other entities when they perform specific activities regulated under the corresponding laws of the financial sector; its purpose is to protect the interests of the general public. It was created and is regulated by the National Banking and Securities Commission Law and its Regulations.

A Governing Board composed of ten voting board members and the chairman of the Commission governs the Commission. Appointments reflect influence of the different regulatory entities; five of the voting board members are designated by the Ministry, three board members are appointed by the Banco de México, one by the CNSF and one by the CONSAR. The chairman is appointed by the Ministry.

The Commission is entrusted with important powers, some of which are shared or require coordination with other agencies or departments of government. One of the most important duties includes the issuance of regulations, mainly in the form of circulars (Circulares) regulating different sectors and entities. Circulars regulate and detail general laws and regulations in various areas of financial activity.

The Commission also has monitoring and enforcement powers and the legal authority to conduct investigations, request information and issue advice and warnings. These can be directed at firms as well as individuals.

The Commission authorization of registration of securities before the National Securities and Brokers Registry is a prerequisite in the process of a public offering or the registration of brokerage firms. The Commission also participates in the approval of certain aspects regarding the internal operation of the MSE.

In light of growing concerns around cybersecurity and digital asset transactions, the CNBV has also been actively involved in issuing new guidelines for the regulation of FinTech companies. These guidelines aim to ensure that digital platforms comply with anti-money laundering (AML) and know-your-customer (KYC) regulations, safeguarding the integrity of Mexico's financial markets.

Following the 2024 amendments, the CNBV was entrusted with additional constitutional mandates to monitor the integration of ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance) principles into the financial and securities sectors. These responsibilities include enforcing compliance with new reporting standards that align corporate practices with Mexico's international commitments to sustainability and climate change mitigation.

The Banco de México is the autonomous government agency responsible for monetary policy and is defined as the central bank by a Constitutional provision. For this reason, Banco de México has specific regulatory powers regarding financial institutions and persons in the banking and securities industries. Most of this authority is exercised in conjunction with other agencies such as the Commission, CNSF, CONSAR or the Ministry.

Apart from its main monetary policy powers, Banco de México issues regulations that apply to financial institutions and has veto powers over certain regulations issued by the Commission under determined causes. Banco de México is also responsible for the placement and issuance of governmental securities.

The 2023 reforms expanded Banco de México's authority to oversee and regulate financial technology innovations, particularly regarding the use of blockchain and cryptocurrency in securities markets. This proactive approach seeks to address emerging risks while fostering innovation in digital financial services.

§ MX:26 Creation, regulation and organization of securities regulatory organizations—National Insurance and Bonding Commission (CNSF)

Like the Commission, the CNSF is a semi-independent agency under the Ministry. Its Governing Board is made up of nine voting members, six appointed by the Ministry, one by the Commission, one by the Banco de México, and one by CONSAR plus the Chairman and two vice chairmen who are appointed by the Ministry.

It regulates bonding and insurance companies and intervenes in all aspects of insurance and bonding including their issuance, maintenance and cancellation of securities.

§ MX:27 Creation, regulation and organization of securities regulatory organizations—National Pension Fund System Commission (CONSAR)

This board is composed of the Secretary of the Ministry as chairman, and another 11 members, including chairman of the CONSAR, the chairman of the Commission, the chairman of the CNSF, and officers from labor related government entities.

CONSAR is responsible for the authorization of pension funds (called SIEFORES and AFORES). It also issues regulations for their operation and permitted investments.

§ MX:28 Creation, regulation and organization of securities regulatory organizations—Mexican Stock Exchange

To this date the MSE is the only stock exchange in Mexico operating in Mexico; it is a private entity operating with a concession from the government granted by the Ministry and under observation by the Commission. Nevertheless, BIVA (Bolsa Institucional de Valores) has already obtained a concession to operate as a stock exchange under the observation of the Commission, becoming the only competitor to MSE in four decades. BIVA (Bolsa Institucional de Valores) started operations in the second trimester of 2018.

The structure of the stock exchange is governed by laws regarding its functioning as a stock corporation (sociedad anónima) whose shareholders have to be brokerage firms, each owning one share. A board of directors, controlling a large independent percentage, manages the MSE.

The MSE provides the technology and regulatory rules under which the Mexican securities market operates. The primary purpose of the exchange is the listing, trading and recording of trades in stocks, participation certificates, fixed-income instruments and warrants. Its primary functions include the following:

- To facilitate the exchange of securities, credit certificates and other documents registered at the National Securities and Brokers Registry ("NSBR"), as well as to provide the necessary services for underwriting, offering and the exchange of securities.
- To provide information to the public about the securities listed, the issuers and executed transactions.
- Administration of transactions by brokerage firms and their compliance with the applicable legislation.
- Establishing rules and standards to promote fair and equitable market practices at the securities market; monitor and impose disciplinary and corrective measures in the case of breach by brokerage firms or issuers.

The process for the offering, maintenance and delisting of securities requires the participation of the Commission and the NSBR. The MSE may suspend trading of securities under the requisite circumstances and is entitled to sanction its own members.

Subject to the approval of the Commission, the exchange issues its own internal regulations and establishes its own procedures. Its internal regulations include rules regarding the registration of securities for trading, terms and conditions for trading, rights and obligations of issuers and record-keeping duties of brokerage firms and investors.

§ MX:29 Creation, regulation and organization of securities regulatory organizations—Securities deposit institutions

The Institute of Securities Deposit (S.D. INDEVAL, S.A. de C.V., "INDEVAL") is the corporation in charge of the custody, administration, clearing, liquidation and transfer of securities as a public service under concession granted by the Ministry.

Securities deposit institutions must be established as corporations with the favorable opinion of the Commission and Banco de México.

Administration is carried out by a Board of Directors with certain legally compulsory board members coming from government institutions. INDEVAL issues its own internal regulations regulating its activities.

INDEVAL provides various services to the industry including depositing securities from financial institutions, and brokerage firms, receiving notes, managing securities under trusts, and clearing services.

§ MX:30 Creation, regulation and organization of securities regulatory organizations—Derivatives exchanges

Only MexDer acts as the derivatives exchange in Mexico; it is a private entity operating with a concession from the government (granted by the Ministry) and under the supervision of the Ministry, Banco de Mexico and the Commission. MexDer and its clearinghouse Asigna are self-regulatory entities. As with the stock exchange, the clearing and the trading members own the derivatives exchange.

The Ministry, the Commission and, to a lesser degree, Banco de Mexico, interpret the law and establish rules and regulations for the structuring and functioning of the MexDer, its clearinghouse, clearing members, and futures and options traders.

MexDer's self-regulatory powers include issuing its internal regulations, enforcing the regulations and sanctioning its members.

§ MX:31 Definition of security

The Securities Market Law (Ley del Mercado de Valores "SML") article 2 defines securities as shares or equity participations, debentures, bonds, option instruments, certificates, promissory notes, bills of exchange, and other credit instruments, whether or not they are regulated or registered with the NSBR, and which: (i) may be traded in securities markets; (ii) are issued in series or in mass; and (iii) represent (a) the capital of an entity, (b) a proportional part of an asset, (c) the participation in a collective credit, or (d) any other individual credit right, in terms of applicable national or foreign laws.

The 2023 amendments also refined the definition of securities to explicitly include digital assets and tokens issued under blockchain technology, provided they meet specific criteria for tradeability and issuance as outlined by the Securities Market Law. This change ensures regulatory clarity for novel financial instruments.

§ MX:32 Public Offerings and exempted offerings—Definitions of public offering

A public offering is defined as the offer, with or without price, made within national territory through mass communication means to an undetermined person; to subscribe, acquire, sell or transfer securities by any means.

§ MX:33 Public Offerings and exempted offerings—Regulatory scheme

Public offerings may be, as described under article 2 of the SML, (i) for the subscription or sale of securities; or (ii) for the acquisition of securities. Public offerings for the acquisition of securities may be voluntary or mandatory as explained more fully below. Public offerings are also considered as such when directed to a certain type of investor.

Public offerings for the subscription or sale of securities:

Prior registration is required to make a public offering of securities. An application to request to register securities with the NSBR shall include, among other things:[1]

(i) the deed of incorporation and bylaws of the issuer, and any amendments thereto;

(ii) a preliminary offering prospectus (to be replaced with a final offering prospectus at the time the offer is made); additionally, a document with key information regarding the investment as determined by the Commission in its regulations;

(iii) audited financial statements or, information on the financial situation of the entity. Such information must be prepared pursuant to accounting principles recognized by the Commission;

(iv) a legal opinion issued by an independent attorney, which as applicable must state the following:

a) the due incorporation and existence of the issuer;

b) compliance with the law and the issuers' by-laws;

c) the validity of the resolutions adopted by the entity approving the issuance and public offer of the securities;

d) the validity on the issuance of the securities and its enforcement against the issuer;

e) the authority of those individuals issuing the securities at the time of issuance;

f) the due creation and enforceability of guaranties being granted, and the authority of those acting on behalf of the issuer, as well as, the procedure of foreclosure for the securities that are guaranteed;

[Section MX:33]

[1]Article 85 of the SML.

g) in the case of trusts, the legal creation of the trust and, the validity of the transfer of the title of assets or rights to the trust;

h) all legal aspects of the securities that represent capital or foreign companies regarding their minority rights and a comparison to traded stock companies, as well as their organization, operation, integration and responsibility of its decision making bodies; and,

i) a description of financial entities' similarities and differences on the special regime applicable to such entities under the applicable financial system laws, and on the corporate internal bodies that shall comply with the provisions under the SML.

(v) other specific requirements depend on whether the securities represent economic rights under trust, credit instruments, etc., such as credit ratings, guarantor and guaranty information, among others.

In addition, the opinion must include the opinion of an independent third party that is authorized to issue opinions in tax matters pursuant to the applicable legal provisions, with respect to the tax regime disclosed in the prospectus is applicable to senior development, real estate or indexed bonds.

The Commission may request additional information from the issuer in order to proceed with the corresponding registration.

The issuance prospectus along with any informative supplements (whether preliminary or definitive) shall include the following information:[2]

1. The specific characteristics of the offer, the securities subject to such offer, the rights and obligations arising therefrom, and the proposed use of the proceeds arising from the issuance. A specific plan for distribution of the prospectus among the public shall be mentioned. The final prospectus shall clearly state the price of the security or the interest rate offered;

2. The financial, administrative, economic and legal status of the issuer, as well as the status of its business group;

3. A description of the activities of the issuer and its business group and a description of the commercial, industrial or service sector in which they participate;

4. Integration of issuer's business group;

5. Issuer's capital structure indicating issuances of different series or classes of shares and rights, or distribution of shares among the shareholders. The prospectus should also contain an indication of the person(s) and/or group(s) that have control or a significant influence over the company, the issuer, or makes decisions in the controlling group;

6. Compensation paid to related parties as defined under the SML;

7. Agreement or benefit programs for the members of the board of directors, relevant officers or employees of the issuer, which allow them to participate in the capital distribution mechanics and determination of prices;

[2]Article 86 of the SML.

8. Relevant operations entered with related parties within, at least, the last three annual periods;

9. Comments and analysis on the financial situation and results of the issuer, including future perspectives;

10. Legal and financial information and independent opinions;

11. With respect to securities issued by financial entities, the equivalent, similarities and differences of their applicable special regime pursuant to the legal framework for financial entities, with respect to those applicable to SABs; and

12. All issuers must include in the prospectus language expressly indicating that the registration of the securities does not imply any type of guarantee on the quality of the issuance certification with regards to the goodness of the issue of the securities, solvency of the issuer or veracity of the information contained in the prospectus.

The SML requires that specific officers, depending on the type of issuer and securities being registered, certify the veracity and integrity of the information contained in the prospectus and any informative supplements or brochures.

Along with the request for registration of the securities, the corresponding issuers should also request the listing of such securities in an authorized stock exchange.

It is important to mention that issuers may also file for a preventive registration of the securities, which must be done pursuant to specific rules issued by the Commission. The preventive registration allows such issuers to promptly initiate a public offering as long as they continue to update the information that needs to be provided to the NSBR and the Commission.

Public offerings may now be registered with a favorable opinion from the relevant stock exchange, simplifying the prior requirement for direct CNBV authorization. This change, introduced in the 2023 amendments, reduces procedural delays for issuers while maintaining regulatory oversight.

§ MX:34 Public Offerings and exempted offerings—Transactions subject to a special treatment

Acquisition public offerings are subject to special treatment. Voluntary acquisition offerings require the prior authorization from the Commission and shall be open for at least 20 business days. The determination of the amount of securities to be sold shall be made proportionally to the ownership of all those persons who agreed to sell the securities, regardless of time of acceptance, within the time frame of the offering. An offer to purchase securities and its characteristics may be amended at any time, as long as such amendment implies a more favorable treatment to the recipients of such offering. Depending on the substance of the amendments, the Commission may request to expand the term under which the offer shall continue to be open.

Public offerings for the acquisition of securities shall be mandatory in instances where a person or group intends to acquire, either directly or indirectly, 30% or more of the shares of a stock corporation (sociedad anónima) registered with the NSBR, either through the stock exchange or over the counter, in one or more simultaneous or successive events. In such case, the offer shall be extended to all the securities of the company, including those limited or restricted and even shares without voter rights.

The acquisition offering shall be on the same terms regardless of the class or type of shares acquired. In this case, the offering shall be made either by: (1) a percentage of the capital of the company equivalent to the portion of ordinary shares that will be acquired; or (2) for 10% of said capital, whichever is higher, as long as the offeror limits its final ownership to a percentage that does not imply having control over the company, or for 100% of the capital of the company when the offeror intends to secure control of the company. This percentage may be lower pursuant to prior authorization from the Commission.

Any transaction which offers compensation to any person, and which implies a premium or overprice to the offering, is strictly prohibited, except in instances where specific arrangements are made with third parties that impose obligations to act or to abstain from acting, as long as the arrangements are approved by the board or directors of the company, and are clearly disclosed in the public offering.

There are specific exceptions to this public acquisition offer, but prior confirmation is required.

Additionally, the amendments now allow greater flexibility for voluntary acquisition offerings, reducing procedural barriers for companies seeking to consolidate market positions. This includes updated thresholds for transactions involving minority shareholders, enhancing their protection during acquisition processes.

§ MX:35 Public Offerings and exempted offerings—Exempted offerings

Exempted offerings are those considered as private offerings under articles 8 of the SML, which provides that private offers of unregistered securities may be made within national territory by any person as long as one of the following requirements is met:

a) The offering is made exclusively to institutional or qualified investors;

b) The offering of securities, is made to less than 100 persons, regardless of whether the securities represent one or more classes of securities;

c) The offering is made pursuant to plans or programs applicable generally to employees or groups of employees of the issuer, or of entities controlled by the issuer; or

d) The offering is made to shareholders or partners of entities whose corporate purpose is to interact exclusively or primarily with such shareholders.

The Commission has full authority to approve private offers, which are different to those set forth above.

One of SML's primary objectives is promoting the proper and adequate disclosure of information to the investing public; for such purpose the SML, requires that all securities that are subject to a public offering are registered in advance with the NSBR. Once the corresponding securities are duly registered, issuers shall be subject to ongoing periodic reporting obligations, which include the furnishing of information to the NSBR and the MSE, which, in turn, will make this information available to the general public. Reporting obligations may vary depending on the type of securities offered and the transaction involved.

Under the amended Securities Market Law, the streamlined registration process now allows issuers to register securities upon receiving a favorable opinion from the stock exchange where the securities will be listed. This eliminates the need for direct CNBV authorization, accelerating the process and promoting market agility.

As mentioned above, according to article 70 of the SML, all securities subject to public offering or intermediation shall be registered before the NSBR, while articles 85 and 90 of the SML set forth the requirements, information and documentation that are needed for the registration.

The Regulations Applicable to Issuers (Circular Única de Emisoras "Regulations") set forth the documents that must be filed in order for registry of the securities to proceed, including the following:

(i) a preliminary offering prospectus and informative supplement;

(ii) certified annual financial statements prepared in accordance with the accounting principles recognized by the Commission, as well as a corresponding opinion and certification from an independent accountant;

(iii) a legal opinion issued by an independent consultant on the requirements of the SML;

(iv) a credit risk rating issued by a securities rating institution;

(v) any information regarding a guarantor or guaranty in the event of an offering of guaranteed securities; and

(vi) the information that is provided to the NSBR shall be simultaneously provided to the investing public, upon issuance of the public offering.

Also, issuers may register securities that are not yet subject to a public offering or request a preventive registration of securities to be offered to the public later on, but within the corresponding term set forth in such case by the Commission.

The objectives pursued by the SML with the registration of securities for the protection of the investing public and the equilibrium of the exchange market and financial system, are:

(i) to demonstrate the financial reliability of the issuer;

(ii) to prove that the issuer has adequate corporate and financial policies and practices consistent with the interest of the investing public;

(iii) to disclose proper compliance with all the applicable rulings;

(iv) to avoid manipulation by the issuer regarding the yield of corresponding securities; and

(v) to prevent possible conflicts of interest.

The updated registration requirements now include ESG compliance statements, risk assessments for digital assets, and enhanced financial disclosures aimed at ensuring transparency and protecting stakeholder interests.

In addition to the mandatory disclosures, issuers with registered securities are required to disclose certain information periodically upon the occurrence of relevant events.

Article 104 of the SML sets forth the reports and information that must be filed by the issuers with the Commission and the MSE. The Regulations further details the reports and information. Such reports include:

(i) continuous reports on corporate acts and resolutions of the issuer allowed under its by-laws or other legal provisions;

(ii) quarterly reports containing issuers' financial statements and the board of directors comments on its financial status;

(iii) annual reports including certified financial statements and the independent accountant's report and comments;

(iv) reports on corporate restructures, mergers, acquisitions and sale and purchase of assets;

(v) reports of relevant events;

(vi) reports of the issuers' policies and operations; and

(vii) reports on the positions kept by the issuers in derivative financial instruments.

Government entities, trusts or any foreign entities that issue securities are also subject to reporting obligations and disclosure requirements, although these may change in accordance to the type of issuer.

As for relevant events, article 105 of the SML provides that relevant events must be disclosed immediately upon the issuer's acknowledgement of them to the general public through the MSE and such disclosure may only be delayed if the events are not yet consummated; there is no information of the events in mass media, and there are no unusual variations on the securities' price or volume.

The Commission and the MSE may also require the issuer to immediately inform the investing public and give details with respect to any unusual variation on the securities' price or volume, and about any changes in the supply, demand or price of the securities inconsistent with their historical behavior or which may not be understood in the context of the information available to the general public.

As mentioned above, SML sets forth scenarios in which issuers may register securities that are not yet the subject of a public offering, or issuers may file for preventive registration of securities with the NSBR for future offerings and placements. In both cases and for purposes of such registration, the relevant securities are subject to the exemption only if they meet certain requirements.

Preventive registration procedures have also been updated to align with the new simplified registration regime. These changes are expected to facilitate faster access to capital markets while maintaining transparency and investor protection.

Issuers must report ESG-related developments and material impacts of digital assets or blockchain-based securities on their financial position, in addition to timely disclosure of relevant events as mandated by Article 104.

All issuers that wish to register securities which shall not be publicly offered may do so with the NSBR by fulfilling all the requirements applicable to securities in a public offering. However, such issuers shall file an informative brochure instead of an offering prospectus; said brochure must comply with all information requirements applicable to securities registered for public offering. Also, such securities must comply with the applicable listing requirements of the MSE.[1]

Issuers may request from the Commission a preventive registration of shares of their capital stock in order for the issuer to perform a public offering of such securities later within the term set forth by the Commission. Upon performance of the relevant public offering, issuers shall comply with all disclosure requirements of information and documentation, and the issuer must ensure that all other legal provisions for a public offering are fulfilled at that moment.

[Section MX:40]

As set forth by Article 92 of the SML, preventive registration allows the successive issuance and placement of one or more series of securities during a given term and for a maximum circulation amount, but with the understanding that the issuer shall be in compliance with all information disclosure obligations and legal provisions. Preventive placement may be terminated in the event the issuer does not carry out the first placement in accordance with the terms set forth in the placement program authorized by the Commission.

Generic preventive registration of securities is also allowed, as provided by Article 93 of the SML. Such registration may include securities that are part of a placement program and allow the issuer to carry out an unlimited number of issuances of the securities registered.

However, generic preventive registration may only be approved by the Commission for securities issued by the following entities:

(i) the Federal Government;

(ii) the Bank of Mexico;

(iii) the Institute for the Protection of Bank Savings (Instituto para la Protección al Ahorro Bancario);

(iv) multilateral financial entities to which Mexico is party;

(v) credit institutions (only in the case of debt for terms of one year or less); and

(vi) variable income, debt instrument, capital or limited purpose investment mutual funds, as well as investment companies specialized in retirement funds, for shares representative of their capital stock.

It is important to note that issuers who obtain the generic preventive registration of securities are exempt from fulfilling the following requirements set forth by the SML:

(i) previous authorization by the Commission of any advertising for such securities;

(ii) information and documentation requirements applicable to regular public offerings;

(iii) disclosure of reporting obligations applicable to regular issuers.

Also, the issuers of securities registered under this modality are not obliged to list them with the MSE, with the exception of investment companies specialized in retirement funds.

The special treatment of these securities under the SML may be questionable considering that they attract a large amount of public investment, but such treatment is understandable when it is considered that the Mexican Federal Government, generally, guarantees these securities. However, this special treatment is suspicious in the case of credit institutions and mutual funds. However, it can be explained by the fact that these entities are subject to approval and surveillance by the banking section of the Commission. Such surveillance focuses on assuring compliance with the legal provisions that regulate the financial sector and not on specific aspects of the exchange markets, which may result in an inadequate regulation of the investors' interest and the exchange market.

Other entities, such as certain government bodies, foreign governments and international multilateral financial organizations may also request generic preventive registration to issue debt under the SML.

§ MX:42 Registration and continuing disclosure requirements of public companies—Suspension of trading or delisting

In accordance with articles 107 and 108 of the SML, the Commission may sanction an issuer with suspension or deregistration of a security or may cancel the registration of securities before the NSBR upon request of the corresponding issuer. Issuers that have listed securities cancelled are no longer considered securities issuers and lose the status, thereby nullifying the special regime previously granted by the SML.

The Commission may suspend the registration of a security to an issuer as a preemptive measure for up to 60 business days to avoid disordered market conditions or operations. Specific actions for which an issuer may be sanctioned with suspension of registration are:

(i) default of disclosure obligations;

(ii) default of policies governing participation in the exchange market and failure to keep their shareholders' interests;

(iii) actions or operations against the SML or practices not sanctioned by the stock market; or

(iv) issuer's request of cancellation of securities.

The suspension measure has the effect of suspending the stock quote of the securities before the securities exchange, and shall not exempt the issuer from complying with all other obligations under the SML. A suspension of the registration and listing may not exceed the 60-day term without prior notification of the affected issuer granting such issuer the right to dispute any such findings.

Cancellation of registry or delisting may be applied in the event the Commission deems it necessary to protect the interest of the investing public. Pursuant to article108 of the SML, cancellation of securities shall apply when the issuers breach the law severely or repeatedly, or when the securities do not fulfill the listing requirements of the securities exchange. In such cases the Commission shall require the issuer to make a public offering of the securities involved. Said public offering shall be subject to certain rules and shall be offered first to the stockholders of the company that do not have control of the securities, and specific rules governing the price at which the securities shall be offered. Also, for at least six months after cancellation, the issuer shall place in a trust all resources required to purchase (at the same price) the securities of investors that have not attended the offering.

The public offering must be performed within the six months following the Commission's order for the sale of the securities, and the relevant issuer shall be unauthorized to offer securities to the investing public within the year following cancellation of registry. The terms and percentages required by the SML for public acquisition offerings shall also be observed.

In order for an issuer to request voluntary delisting of its registered securities, it must have approval from the stockholders holding at least 95% of the shares representing the capital stock of the issuer. Once the resolution is adopted, a public offering of the relevant securities shall follow, in accordance with the applicable regulation and requirements. The Commission shall review the terms and characteristics of the offering in order to determine, in certain circumstances, if the number and value of the securities in the hands of the investing public justify exempting the issuer from engaging in the public offering.

Once the Commission has been provided with evidence that there are no outstanding payments, cancellation of registered debt instruments may be completed.

Proxy solicitation was not regulated by the first SML. The first SML did not include any specific provisions regarding the powers of attorney for representation of the shareholders at meetings. However, the new SML includes a provision that suggests the beginning of specific regulation of proxy solicitation.

Because Mexican public companies listed at the securities exchange are traditionally family-owned or owned by a group of close friends and business partners, participation of independent stockholders in the decisions and management of such companies has been limited and reserved to the controlling groups. This explains the limited development of proxy solicitation regulation for public companies in Mexico.

Proxies in the Mexican legal system are used primarily to avoid travel to the place where a particular shareholders' meeting is held, and are granted routinely to reliable persons so that they may vote at meetings where common decisions are made. In the absence of specific regulation, general commercial rules regulate proxies in the same manner that rules govern powers of attorney. Therefore, pursuant to commercial rules, granting proxies did not require complex formalities.

However, article 49 of the new SML states that individuals appointed in proxies may represent shareholders of public companies at shareholders' meetings. Proxy letters shall be granted in a specific format prepared by the issuer containing certain requirements set forth by the SML and shall be made available to shareholders by the intermediary or by the issuer.

The political reforms following the 2024 constitutional amendments emphasize greater public engagement in governance, which may influence corporate governance practices. For instance, the broader democratic reforms could lead to stricter requirements for shareholder disclosures and proxy solicitations, aligning with increased demand for transparency and accountability at all levels of governance and commerce.

§ MX:44 Fraud, manipulation and insider trading—Legal provisions

Fraud, manipulation and insider trading in the Mexican stock market were not subject to regulation until 1983, whereupon the SML was amended in order to introduce article 16 Bis. Article 16 Bis of the repealed SML contained legal provisions regulating securities transactions by persons with privileged or insider information such as: "those persons who have privileged information shall refrain from entering into transactions, whether for their own benefit or that of third parties, for any kind of securities, the price of which may be influenced by such dispersing information."

Since the enactment of the new SML in 2005, the regulation of fraud, manipulation and insider trading practices in Mexico has been modified and improved. Among other things are expanding the scope of when persons are deemed to have access to privileged information, the restrictions imposed on such persons, and the sanctions for violation of restrictions.

Article 363 of the SML lists those persons who are deemed to have access to privileged information and are, thus subject to restrictions when performing transactions involving securities. Among the persons considered to have access to privileged information are the following:

(i) board members, statutory auditors, general managers, principal officers and external auditors of the issuer or its comptrollers;

(ii) holders of 10% or higher interest in an issuer;

(iii) board members, statutory auditors, general managers and principal officers that hold 10% or higher interest in an issuer;

(iv) board members, statutory auditors, general managers and principal officers of independent service providers of the issuer during a relevant event, as well as entities that have any financial, administrative, operational, economic or legal relation or connection with the issuer and to whom the relevant event or participation in the relevant event is attributed to;

(v) issuers holding 5% or higher interest in issuer financial entities;

(vi) holding companies that control 5% or higher interest in financial entities or persons who hold 10% or more of any financial entities when at least one of them is an issuer of securities;

(vii) board members, general managers and principal officers of financial entities or controlling companies of financial entities;

(viii) persons that have a significant influence on the issuer or its economic group; and

In addition, persons involved in unusual transactions (transactions that do not correspond to such persons' historical investment behavior), who presumably had access to privileged information through the persons listed in article 363, are also subject to insider restrictions information. SML considers that spouses, close relatives and partners or business associates of persons with access to privileged information fall within this category.

All holders of privileged information have a confidentiality obligation with respect to the privileged information and shall refrain from disclosing it to third parties unless they are obliged to do so as a consequence of their employment or appointment. Also, they may not perform any transactions or instruct any transactions based on privileged information that may affect the price of the securities, and they cannot provide such privileged information to third parties (except as a consequence of their employment or appointment) nor issue any recommendations or give advice regarding securities whose characteristics may be influenced by such information. However, stock market intermediaries (brokers) that execute transactions related to privileged information may be excused from liability if they are following client instructions (with the understanding that the clients may not advise them before of such effect). However, clients will not be excused from liability under the SML.

An injured party may claim before the court, damages suffered as a result of the actions of a person trading with insider information. The statute of limitations for such claims is 5 years after the execution of the transaction. The SML does not limit its application to Mexican territory; it also provides that any violation to its provisions outside Mexico, which have effect within Mexico, may also be subject to sanctions under this Law.

Other provisions to safeguard the Mexican stock market include articles 368–370 of the SML, including, among others, the following prohibitions:

(i) disclosure of false or misleading information by any means, including a prospectus or mass media of a given security or the financial, administrative, operational, economic or legal situation of a given issuer;

(ii) manipulation of the market (interference with supply and demand of a security that affects its volume or price to obtain a benefit);

(iii) execution of simulated transactions;

(iv) interference with the computer systems used by the securities exchanges or its system suppliers;

(v) participation in transactions in which there is a conflict of interest;

(vi) any infraction to correct usage and practice of the market; and

(vii) ordering or interfering in the execution of transactions with securities for self-benefit or that of third parties, with the knowledge of the existence of instructions issued by other clients of an intermediary for the same security.

Disclosure of false or misleading information includes the total or partial omission of relevant information in the prospectus, informative brochure or supplements by an issuer, intermediary, external auditors and consultants, independent experts, attorneys, price providers or security rating institutions, or if erroneous information is included in such documents.

In recent years, the Mexican government has taken a more aggressive stance in prosecuting insider trading and market manipulation. This has been supported by increased cooperation with international regulatory bodies such as the SEC and IOSCO. Mexican law enforcement agencies are now better equipped with digital forensics tools to track illicit market activities, reflecting the broader global trend of digitizing financial surveillance.

Article 362 of the SML sets forth that the "knowledge of relevant events that have not been disclosed to the public by the issuer, through the exchange in which its securities are listed, shall be considered privileged information for the purposes of this Law". Also, "it shall not be required that the person is familiar with all the characteristics of the relevant event in order to have privileged information if such person with access to information is able to affect the price of the securities of a given issuer."

The definition of privileged information under Mexican law has evolved with the digitalization of financial markets. Information relating to financial technologies, algorithms, and big data analytics can now be classified as privileged if it has the potential to impact securities prices. This reflects the growing intersection of technology and finance, prompting Mexican regulators to adapt to the complexities of modern trading environments.

§ MX:46 Fraud, manipulation and insider trading—Definition of privileged information—First Element: Knowledge of Relevant Events

The definition of privileged information contained in article 16 of the former SML referred to the knowledge of actions, facts or events capable of influencing the prices of securities, thereby including all kinds of information. However, the current definition refers to the knowledge of "relevant events" which is closely related to the concept of relevant information, which according to article 2 of the SML, is "all the information of an issuer, required to be acquainted with its actual and current financial, administrative, operational, economic and legal situation and risks, as well as the information of the group it belongs to, if applicable, regardless of its position within the group, in the understanding that it affects such situation, and is information which is necessary in order to make reasonable investment decisions and to calculate the price of the securities issued by such issuer, pursuant to analysis usages and practices of the Mexican stock market."

There is no doubt that the phrase knowledge of relevant events has evolved to address the formerly vague definition (i.e., "knowledge of actions, facts or events"), and now provides a more explicit and precise guideline closely linked to relevant information, including the type of information of an issuer that can affect the stock quote and price of a security.

The condition in the SML which requires that privileged information be kept from the investing public, is meant to encourage regulated disclosure of information by the issuers, thereby giving equal investing opportunities to all investors without exception. To avoid unfair practices in the market, the SML prohibits the disclosure of information that may benefit only a few privileged persons while harming the general investing public.

As mentioned before, the Law and the Commission's Regulations require that issuers disclose periodic information, as well as relevant information upon the occurrence of certain events so that such data will be available to the public when making investing decisions. The information shall also be given to the securities exchange for its disclosure.

Relevant information may also be disclosed to the public through other means, including mass media. This usually occurs when the source of the information is not the issuer, but other events or agents that affect the issuer's environment.

The SML provides that information shall be considered privileged if it is capable of influencing the stock quote and prices of the corresponding securities.

The securities exchange is authorized to certify the stock quote and prices of securities listed with it. The MSE does the listing on a daily basis, taking into account the prices of the securities traded that day; the securities exchange then discloses an official price quote for the securities traded in Mexico. In addition, it is possible to carry out over-the-counter, secondary market or face-to-face transactions that may be closed at prices not necessarily listed by the securities exchange.

The SML does not set forth how important the price variation arising from the disclosure of privileged information must be in order for it to be considered illegal, but the SML does limit the scope of the provision to the mere act of disclosing such privileged information to the general public. The importance of price variation still remains a matter for the courts to answer.

§ MX:49 Fraud, manipulation and insider trading—Definition of privileged information—Special restrictions—Increase in participation

Any person acquiring, through a single or several transactions, successively or simultaneously more than 10% but less than 30% of the outstanding stock of an issuer, shall be required to disclose such acquisition(s) to the general public through the Mexican Stock Exchange the next business day following the transaction.

Similarly, any Related Person increasing or decreasing the amount of stock they own in a registered issuer by 5%, in a single or several transactions, successively or simultaneously, shall inform the public of any such situation within the following day on which such circumstance occurs.

Any person or group of persons holding 10% or more of the capital stock of the issuer, or any Relevant Managers or members of the Board of Directors, undertaking any transactions underlying issuer's securities shall inform the Commission of such transactions.

In accordance with the SML an "insider" as defined in the SML, except for those who may have had access to privileged information due to their relationship to the insider, is subject to a three months blackout period where no sale or purchase transactions can be undertaken of securities issued by the issuer to whom they are connected; further, insiders may only perform transactions underlying issuer's securities through public offers.

The amended Securities Market Law also shortened the blackout period for certain insider transactions from three months to two months, provided these transactions are disclosed to the market in real time and meet enhanced reporting standards for transparency.

§ MX:51 Fraud, manipulation and insider trading—Exemptions

Article 367 of the SML provides that certain insiders will not be subject to black out periods if the transaction involves transfers of shares to irrevocable trusts for employee options and retirement programs, public offerings in connection thereto, or the exercise of any options or agreements in connection with such stock option plans.

§ MX:52 Fraud, manipulation and insider trading—Enforcement

Undertaking any practices specifically prohibited or restricted by SML will result in economic sanctions for amounts ranging from the equivalent of 10.000 to 100.000 minimum wagers effective in Mexico City, and can also result in criminal prosecution with penalties ranging from 2 to 15 years in prison, in accordance to the actual benefit obtained in the unlawful transaction. The Ministry has the authority to begin criminal prosecution provided, however, the Ministry obtains an opinion from the Commission prior to pressing charges.

§ MX:53 Tender offers and compulsory offers—Jurisdictional basis for regulation of tender offers by the Commission

Although tender offerings are now specifically regulated under the SML, any tender offer that fulfills the requirements mentioned above shall be deemed as a public offering and therefore subject to the authorization and requirements of the Commission. Additionally, article 97 of the SML regulates tender and requires the following:

(i) The minimum term of the offer shall be 20 business days.

(ii) The assignation of the offer shall be made on a pro-rata basis, regardless of the moment of acceptance within the term of the offer.

(iii) The offer and its characteristics can be modified at any time prior to expiration of its term as long as such modifications imply more favorable conditions to tenders; if modifications are substantial, sufficient publicity shall be made. Any person or group who accepted the tender will be able to revoke it without any penalty whatsoever.

§ MX:54 Tender offers and compulsory offers—Compulsory offers

Under the SML, any entity or individual who wants to acquire 30% or more of the stock of an issuer in one or a series of transactions shall have to issue an offer either for: i) at least the same percentage of the capital stock intended to be acquired or an additional 10% of the totality of the stock of the issuer if obtaining control of the issuer is not intended; or, ii) for the totality of the stock of the issuer if the goal is to acquire corporate control of the issuer. In both cases, the offer will be based on the percentage of shares intended to be acquired and not their class or series. The Commission can relieve entities or individuals from such obligations in cases of restructures, capital reductions, foreclosure on guaranties, issuers unfitness for business, donations or estate inheritances, or other transactions where the interests of minorities are protected as determined by the Commission.

§ MX:55 Accounting and auditing

In this section we will discuss the relevant references to accounting and auditing guidelines and principles to which issuers and brokers are subject. The purpose is not to analyze these principles in detail, but rather to highlight their origin. The source of the principles is not the Commission, rather they are the result of the efforts of several professional organizations and government entities, including but not limited to the Mexican Institute of Public Accountants ("MIPA"), which have organized themselves since 2002, into the Mexican Council for the Research and Development of Financial Information Standards, A.C. ("CINIF") which developed the Mexican Financial Information Standards, ("Normas de Información Financiera" "MFIS"), and the implementation of the International Financial Reporting Standards established by the International Accounting Standards Board.

At the beginning of 2009, the financial statements of issuers were prepared pursuant to the MFIS and were subject to auditing and reporting by the standards issued by the MIPA. Participants in the market acknowledged the importance of having one set of standards of the highest quality in accounting that may be applied anywhere in the world and allow the comparison of financial entity information from one country to another one over the same preparation bases, increasing investor confidence.

Thus, the CNBV issued principles for the adoption in Mexico of the International Financial Reporting Standards putting issuers that trade in Mexico at the same level of disclosure and transparency international requirements of financial information. The establishment of one sole, complete, consistent and comparable set of standards of the highest quality and of international acceptance brings benefits to the market and the public with respect to the preparation of financial statements of issuers with presence in several countries and those issued in the Mexican market by foreign issuers.

All issuers are bound to comply with the specific accounting and auditing provisions set forth in the SML and must submit all accounting and business performance obligations following these standards in addition to any other data that they are subject to provide pursuant to the Commerce Code and the GLBO. According to the SML, the information must be submitted quarterly with a full report at the end of each calendar year.

Pursuant to article 33 of the Regulations, issuers with registered securities shall provide their annual financial statements prepared by the accounting standards that apply to the nature of the issuer, accompanied by an external auditor report.

In general, the financial statements must be prepared in accordance with the International Financial Reporting Standards issued by the International Accounting Standards Board, except as provided in articles 78 Bis, 78 Bis 1 and 79.[1] These financial statements must also comply with the content obligations set forth by the article 172 of the GLBO and be submitted for approval to the general annual shareholders' meeting of the company. The financial statements will include a profit and loss statement, a balance sheet, a statement of changes in the financial condition, and a report from the statutory auditor for the shareholders' meeting to review.[2]

Auditing and reviewing by the external auditor as well as opinions or reports must be prepared based on the International Quality Control, Auditing, Review, Other Assurance, and Related Services Pronouncements issued by the International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board of the International Federation of Accountants.

The financial statements presented by the financial institutions must be prepared in accordance with accounting standards issued by the competent Mexican authorities. The above, also applies to the financial statements of issuers that through their subsidiaries predominantly engage in financial activities.

With respect to financial statements of issuers whose main activity is credit granting, financial lease or financial factoring, must be prepared and audited in accordance with the accounting standards applicable to multiple purpose financial institutions, regulated referred in article 87-D, section V of the General Law of Auxiliary Credit Organizations and Activities.

The financial statements of foreign issuers must be prepared according to any of the following options: (i) International Financial Reporting Standards issued by the International Accounting Standards Board, (ii) accounting principles generally accepted by the Unites States commonly known as US GAAP, or (iii) accounting principles applicable in the country of origin of the issuer.[3]

With respect to financial statements of foreign issuers that are financial institutions, those should be prepared in accordance with any of the options provided in sections (i) through (iii) of article 79 of the Regulations, or in accordance with accounting standards issued by the competent Mexican authorities, depending on the type of financial institution in question.

In the event issuers with registered securities perform corporate restructuring they shall provide the Commission with financial statements with proforma figures on the financial position and the results of the issuer as of the respective restructuring had taken effect in the same quarter from the previous fiscal year. The proforma financial information must be prepared in accordance with article 81 Bis of the Regulations.

Brokerage firms also must apply the MFIS and other rules as listed in the SML and the Regulations. However, brokerage firms are also subject to additional rules, given their role as the principal intermediaries in the local securities market. In this particular area, the SML has created a brand new body of rules that the brokerage firms must follow:

- The brokerage firms must keep their accounting records in accordance with the accounting concepts and operational rules that the SML indicates. Approval of these accounts is required for the brokerage firms to be able to complete their annual reporting and possible distribution of dividends.[1]
- The brokerage firms are subject to specific monthly and quarterly reporting obligations based on unaudited financial statements, in addition to the full year audited financial statements that they must submit at the end of each calendar year.

A brief comment with respect to the accounting of mutual funds:

Similarly, mutual funds are subject to essentially the same bookkeeping and reporting obligations as brokerage firms. These requirements are in addition to the specific operating rules imposed on these entities by the Mutual Funds Law (Ley de Fondos de Inversión "MFL").[2] Some of the most relevant issues reflected in the MFL are the following:

- The Commission will confirm the accounting criteria that mutual funds must apply in their financial reporting, in addition to the basic accounting requirements set forth by the Commerce Code;
- The accounting records and books must be kept at the offices of the company, where any possible review and auditing activities will be performed, including those that the Commission is able to review under its jurisdiction;
- The Commission will set the rules for the approval of financial statements by the management company of each mutual fund, including their regularity and content; annual financial statements must include a report by the external independent auditors appointed by the board of directors of the management company;

- Mutual funds must publish and distribute their financial statements, subject to the Commission's regulations, in printed or electronic means of wide circulation or publication of the management company, distribution company and appraisal company of the mutual fund, and through the web page of the mutual fund's management company, under the responsibility of the management that approved such statements; and
- Mutual funds must provide the Commission, its investors and the public in general with information related to any relevant event, through the means of communication dictated by the Commission.

Based on its review authority, the Commission is empowered to control the activities of mutual funds and sanction them in case of breach. Commission review and sanctioning authority may include the following:

- Confirm the accounting rules and principles to which mutual funds, management companies, distribution companies and appraisal companies must comply
- Review the financial statements and order their publication;
- Review the performance and order the possible suspension of directors, auditors, officers and employees and suspend them for a period of three months to five years if they are proven to fail in their obligations, particularly their technical capabilities, honorability and credit history for the performance of their functions, or repeatedly or grossly incur in breaching the provisions of the SML or its related regulations (including the removal of external independent auditors);
- Perform regular inspection visits to ensure proper compliance of obligations imposed by the MFL in terms of management, organization, functioning, processes, internal control systems, risk management and asset management, and special visits outside of the annual plan to address a specific situation such as correcting an operation issue, changes in accounting, legal, economic, financial or management, among others;
- Intervene with the intention of suspending, regularizing or resolving operations that put the solvency, stability or liquidity of mutual funds, management companies, distribution companies and appraisal companies at risk, or order the partial suspension of activities.
- Review the operations and regulate the advertisement rules and other similar rules requiring mutual funds to disclose their operations with the general public, with the intention that the advertised information is expressed clearly and precisely in order not to induce the public to error or confusion;
- Determine the dates for suspension of operations;
- Impose sanctions for violations to the SML or its related regulations;
- Review the operations and regulate the advertisement rules and other similar rules requiring mutual funds to disclose their operations with the public at large;

- Authorize the investment prospectuses mutual funds want to publish for distribution to the general public;
- Order the temporary suspension of the placement of mutual fund shares upon disordered market conditions, or the definitive suspension due to transactions not in accordance with healthy market uses or practices; and
- Formulate observations or objections to the appraisal of a mutual fund's shares, and suspend the appraisal service of a mutual fund when the Commission determines there is a conflict of interest between the fund and the appraisal company.

§ MX:58 International securities transactions

There are two possible forms in which transactions with securities involve cross border operations, either those performed by foreign investors with respect to Mexican issuers quoted in the Mexican markets, or those where Mexicans may invest in foreign securities. Because the SML is the primary statute covering transactions performed in Mexico and regulating Mexican issuers, these types of operations are intended to be covered only in a territorial approach. Accordingly, because the transactions involving Mexicans acting in other jurisdictions are covered by the laws and regulations of those respective countries, we will not endeavor to cover those transactions here, but will consider only those activities taking place within the Mexican securities market.

In essence, the general rule is that there are no restrictions for foreigners to acquire Mexican securities, including the shares of newly created or existing companies, or for that matter their assets. A significant effort of deregulation and the activation of several investment and foreign trade treaties have resulted in the elimination of most limitations on the areas or percentages in which foreign investors could freely participate. The FIL as amended to date has only kept a rather small list of activities where there are still some activities and industries where foreigners find some limitations to the otherwise general investment freedom that exists.[1]

The basic categories of restrictions imposed by the FIL are as follows:

- Areas reserved to the Mexican State: In the case of these activities no private investment of any kind is allowed to be performed, regardless of whether the investors are Mexican or foreign. The activities in this case are those specifically reserved for the Mexican State to perform as indicated in article 28 of the Mexican Constitution, including but not limited to exploration and production of oil and hydrocarbons (which as a result of the energy reform, oil may be exploited through state-owned companies or through certain types of service contracts with private companies; the private sector may also participate in storage, transportation and distribution activities for natural gas), nuclear energy generation, transmission and distribution of electricity, postal services, telegraph services and issuance of currency.

- Areas reserved to Mexican Investment: In this second category we find activities where private investment is allowed, but only when performed by Mexican investors wherein foreign investment is altogether banned. In this category, we find activities such as national land freight transportation services, development financial institutions and certain technical and professional services as provided by the specific regulations.
- Activities where foreign investment is restricted to a minority position: This category encompasses activities where although foreign investment is allowed, the equity participation is limited to minority positions not to exceed 49%, thereby ensuring that Mexican investors hold the majority and control the relevant companies. In this category, we find activities such as producing and commercializing explosives and firearms, newspaper publishing and circulation, shares in companies that own farming, livestock or forest lands, fishing along the coast and in the restricted area, management of ports, companies that commercially exploit vessels and radio (depending on the reciprocity on this matter of the country that is the origin of the foreign investment).
- Activities requiring a special clearance for foreigners to hold a majority position: This list covers activities where foreign investment is allowed, but where in order for foreign investors to hold equity participation in excess of 49% a specific approval from the Foreign Investments National Commission is required. In these cases, the Foreign Investments National Commission is expected to consider the particular circumstances of the proposed investment and analyze whether there are reasons to prevent the increase or allow the majority participation by the foreign investors. In this category, we find activities such as companies that commercially exploit vessels in high traffic, operation of public service airports, private schooling, legal services, and construction, operation and exploitation of railroads.
- A final category applies regardless of the activities performed by an existing company. If a transaction exceeds the value threshold set annually by the Mexican Congress, a ruling from the Foreign Investments National Commission is required for the divestiture to be allowed. As of November 2024, the applicable purchase price threshold is approximately US $1,200,000,000.00 (subject to annual updates in local currency based on inflation and market conditions).

This category and its associated rules aim to ensure that significant, established industries with strategic value or relevance to the national interest are not transferred to foreign investors without a thorough analysis. The Mexican state retains the right to block such changes of control if it identifies risks to sovereignty, economic stability, or national security. The review process now incorporates considerations for sustainability, technological innovation, and alignment with Mexico's international trade agreements, reflecting a modernized approach to foreign investment policies.

In addition to observing the limitations that may apply depending on the specific activity that a foreign investor wishes to engage in, the FIL created the Foreign Investments National Registry as a depository of information that must be completed by all Mexican companies in which there is foreign investment. While the information in the Foreign Investments National Registry is not public, it does provide statistical data that the Mexican State uses to gauge the origin, size, and overall details of investments made in Mexico.

We note that in the case of public companies, the rules imposed by the FIL equally apply in spite of their stock being quoted in the securities market. The only potential difference is that where foreign investment is channeled through institutional investors, mutual funds or other global investment tools, then only the first tier of investors will formally appear in the Foreign Investments National Registry.

There are two important caveats to the general rules listed in the previous section that the reader must be acquainted with. These have to do with free trade agreement benefits and the notion of neutral investment as set forth by the FIL.

Since 1993, Mexico has gradually but consistently entered into a full network of international agreements for trade and investments designed to avoid double taxation, thereby creating the largest number of these agreements of almost any country in the world. For the purposes of this Section, it is relevant to note that there are some significant exceptions to the limitations set forth by the FIL allowing investors from the treaty countries to enjoy benefits not otherwise available to companies/persons of other nations. For example, under the North American Free Trade Agreement it is possible for companies located in the U.S. or Canada to establish affiliates in Mexico that can operate as national investors in the areas of banks, insurance, bonding, currency exchange, warehouse deposits, leasing, invoicing, and non-bank financial institutions, among others. Based on the availability of these benefits, it is necessary for the relevant investors to perform the required research to analyze whether they are eligible for any specific benefits under applicable treaties.

Likewise, since 1993 and the establishment of the FIL, the notion of "neutral investment" was introduced into the foreign investment legal framework. Pursuant to article18 of the FIL, the Foreign Investment National Commission may authorize the issuance of a special series of shares with limited corporate rights that will, in turn, enable foreign investors to participate in the equity of a Mexican company without the special series of shares being taken into account to determine the existence of foreign investment in that entity. Hence once authorized for companies where foreign investment is either restricted or capped, the special series generates an investment opportunity not otherwise available through normal series of shares. The special shares may be authorized in all sorts of companies, except for state-owned companies performing the state restricted activities. Such shares may represent up to the percentage that the Foreign Investment National Commission authorizes and will also only give its holders limited voting rights in the few specific items that the corresponding clearance indicates.

The idea behind the neutral investment shares is for Mexican companies to be able to host additional funding through foreign investors who find it possible to participate in these entities directly through standard securities and who may find it attractive to invest in these companies even where specific control is held by Mexican shareholders.

Article 27 of the Mexican Constitution indicates that foreigners may not acquire the direct ownership of real estate located in a zone that forms a belt around the country. This zone is defined as an area that is 100 kilometers wide in the border areas and 50 kilometers wide in the coastal zones and is commonly referred to as the "restricted zone"

Foreign investors that wish to acquire real properties in the restricted zone must abide by the following rules:

- If they wish to operate an industrial or commercial establishment they may set up a Mexican company that will act as the owner of record. The critical issue is that this entity will be entirely subject to Mexican laws and must include in its by-laws the "Calvo Clause" a provision banning foreign jurisdiction or the application of foreign laws to resolve any dispute concerning its assets or activities in Mexico. The acquisition of real estate pursuant to this alternative must be recorded with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.[1]
- If they wish to own a piece of property destined for housing and/or tourist purposes, then they will need to set up a trust agreement with a Mexican bank acting as the trustee. For the duration of the trust, the bank will hold the nominal title to the land and constructions, and the foreign investor, as the beneficiary under the trust, will hold all other rights, including the use and enjoyment, and the possible sale, lease or other arrangement concerning that property. These trusts are set up after approval is issued by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Calvo Clause is incorporated therein. The trust may be valid for a term of up to 50 years and renewed for additional terms of the same duration.[2]

Because of the territorial nature of the SML, there are virtually no provisions dealing with transactions involving the purchase by Mexican investors of securities overseas. The rationale is that it should be up to the statutes in those other countries to regulate those activities in their own jurisdictions.

In spite of the foregoing, it is worth recognizing that the previous trend by which Mexican issuers quoted and interacted with foreign securities markets has changed. The following summarizes commentary about these changes:

- A good number of Mexican companies have created opportunities for accessing foreign investors by creating securities that are deposited into a trust. The certificates evidencing those deposits, in the case of the U.S., take the form of American Depository Receipts (ADR's) that are then quoted in stock markets in that country.
- Other Mexican companies have removed their securities from the Mexican securities market for the simple reason that they have been bought out by a foreign holding company whose shares are traded in an international securities market. In this scenario, the new parent company finds it unnecessary or inconvenient for the subsidiary to be trading independently in the Mexican securities market and may thus elect to cancel its registration pursuant to the SML.
- On the other hand, there are some international securities that may wish to participate in the Mexican securities market. In these instances, the SML sets within the local market an international quotation system that results in stock quotes in local currency for those international securities. Foreign securities may participate in such international quotation system provided: (a) they are not registered before the NSBR; (b) the issuers, their home market or the security itself has characteristics recognized by the Commission issued through applicable regulations, and (c) the foreign issuer complies with the requirements of the internal regulations of the local security exchange.[1] a foreign market may be considered a "recognized market" if the following conditions are met:

- The issuers are under a legal framework that protects the investors interests, bans insider trading and has rules against agents with conflicts of interest;
- The foreign market has specific rules concerning the disclosure of relevant data and information, including an annual audit at the least by an external independent auditor, and that such information is disclosed to the public in an accessible and continuous manner;
- The issuers are required to publish their financial information prepared consistently with the standards published by the International Accounting Standards Board, US GAAP or their local accounting principles (as complementary notes to the financial statements are disclosed);
- They are supervised and regulated by an authority with similar functions to those of the Commission, and are a member of any of the International Organization of Securities Commissions, the European Union, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, or the Integrated Latin American Market; and
- There are institutions for the deposit custody, management and transfer of securities with automated systems for their handling.[2]
- Securities exchanges may enter into agreements with foreign securities exchanges to facilitate access to their negotiation systems, with the previous authorization from the Commission. The Commission analyzes the impact it will have on the Mexican stock market and the particularities of the foreign securities exchange and its regulatory principles.
- When the entire foreign securities market has not been recognized, it is then possible to recognize a foreign company as a "recognized issuer" if the securities are registered or regulated before their Securities Commission or equivalent authority in a State that is a member of the International Organization of Securities Commissions, and are distributed in the member countries of such organization. Securities that comply with the preceding conditions may be listed in the international quotation system.

As in other countries, the MFL is designed to foster the operation of mutual funds that allow investors to diversify the securities and markets in which they invest by having the operating companies adopt the decisions through sophisticated research of where and when to buy and sell specific securities or debt instruments in various markets.

With Mexico's further integration into the global markets, the number of mutual funds operating in Mexico has grown in size and importance. While foreign mutual funds are not authorized to operate in Mexico, the local mutual funds have an institutional relationship with many foreign mutual funds to share information and agree on shared investment opportunities for the benefit of their mutual clients.

§ MX:64 Mutual funds and mutual fund operating companies—General provisions applicable to mutual funds

The organization and operation of mutual funds requires prior approval issued by the Commission and submitted by an operating company. The application to operate a mutual fund must comply with the following requirements:[1]

- Submit the format by-laws of the mutual fund;
- Provide information on the founding partner regarding its authorization to act as a mutual fund operating company;
- Submit a draft of the information prospectus to be presented to the public indicating all relevant data regarding all policies for the purchase and sale of their securities, the timing for all investment decisions, the commitments on disclosure of information and performance, risks for the investor, and, in general, the operational guidelines that the mutual fund will follow; and
- The entities or individuals that will provide management, distribution, appraisal, rating, deposit and custody, provision of prices, accounting and other services as determined by the Commission.

The purpose of a mutual fund is for the investment of funds generated by the sale of the shares of their capital stock among the public at large through financial intermediary services, the investments being allocated to the specific assets that their investment committees designate and as allowed by the MFL.[2] In particular, the investment assets that are eligible for operation by a mutual fund are those listed below:[3]

- Securities, titles, and documents officially recorded to be traded pursuant to the SML or the international quotation system; and
- Other cash instruments, goods, rights or loans documented in contracts or instruments, including derivative instruments, are covered and authorized by the Commission in general rules, as well as goods that are subject to commerce that can form part of a mutual fund pursuant to the investment regime for each type of mutual fund provided in the MFL and other regulations issued by the Commission.

Mutual funds must adopt one of two formats (i.e., either open or closed mutual funds).[4] Open-ended funds are those that must purchase their own shares, whereas closed-end funds are banned from purchasing their own shares. Furthermore, as specified by the Commission, the mutual funds may be distinguished by criteria of diversification, specialization of the investment regime, investment objective and prospect, among others.[5] In any event, mutual funds are required to be rated by a recognized rating agency to assess the risk of its assets and the transactions it performs, and the quality of its management, all in accordance with the general rules issued by the Commission to this end.[6]

The authorization to create and operate a mutual fund cannot be assigned and must refer to one of four different types of mutual funds:[7]

- Variable rent investments mutual fund;
- Debt instrument investments mutual fund;
- Capital investments mutual fund; or
- Limited purpose investments mutual fund.

Precisely because their securities are traded in the public, the mutual funds must be recorded with the NSBR.[8]

Mutual funds are usually organized as part of the operation of a financial group. Hence many mutual funds are created to allocate resources to specific areas of industry, geographical strategies or other specific investments. By having numerous mutual funds, the financial groups can cater to the needs and requirements of their clients who may want to diversify their risks and create a specific portfolio investment by buying stock in different mutual funds. The entity that heads the financial group (usually a bank or brokerage firm) or a specific managing company will be the one controlling the activities of the mutual funds. In this format, the financial groups compete against each other by disclosing and advertising the results and yields that their mutual funds are generating.

Mutual funds do not have a shareholders meeting, board of director or statutory examiner. Instead, the functions of the shareholders meeting are performed by the founding partner, and the functions of the board of directors are performed by the operating company. Surveillance is assigned to the examiner of the management company.[9]

Operating companies perform a critical role in the management of a mutual fund. They submit the authorization to the Commission to incorporate a mutual fund, and are responsible for approving the individuals that render services to the mutual fund, establish and review the fund's investment policies, dictate measures for compliance with the prospectus, analyze and evaluate the fund's management, among others.[10]

In addition to the requirement that mutual funds be organized as variable capital stock corporations pursuant to the general rules of the GLBO, they also must comply with the following rules:[11]

- They may have an indefinite duration;
- Their domicile must be within the Mexican territory;
- Their minimum capital must be consistent with the benchmark set forth by the Commission in general rules;
- Their capital must be variable, with the fixed capital shares represented by a single series and class of shares subscribed by the founding partner and not being subject to withdrawal. Fixed capital shares cannot be transferred or affected without the Commission's clearance.
- Variable capital-shares can be of different series with different rights as indicated in its by-laws; they grant their holders the right to participate in the fund's utilities, request the acquisition or repurchase of shares, request reimbursement in the event of the fund's dissolution and winding up; and as long as they represent at least 0.5% of the fund's capital or maintain an investment in the fund equivalent to 100,000 investment units, exercise responsibility actions against the operating company or the members of the board of directors of the operating company;
- They may hold treasury shares to be sold as indicated by the board of directors of the operating company;
- There are no preemptive rights unless it is provided in the prospectus; and
- The original by-laws as well as any amendments thereto must be authorized by the Commission before being recorded in the Public Registry of Commerce.

The board of directors of a mutual fund's operating company of mutual funds must comply with the obligations set forth in the by-laws and those applicable to directors set forth in the GLBO. They must perform their duties in attention the duties of care and loyalty established in the SML. The board of directors of the operating company is responsible for setting forth the maximum limits of ownership per investor, provide adjustment mechanisms for those exceeding those levels for any reason and determine the policies for investors to comply with such limits in the prospectus.[12]

It is possible for foreign financial institutions to participate in the capital stock of an operating company, a share distribution company or controlling affiliate (as defined by the Regulation of Financial Groups Law), through their incorporation in Mexico as an affiliate of such foreign financial institution. The affiliates are governed by applicable international treaties and their incorporation must be authorized by the Commission. The foreign financial institution must hold directly or indirectly, at all times, at least 51% of the capital stock of the affiliate operating company or share distribution company.[13] These foreign affiliates once authorized to operate in Mexico cannot, however, then subsequently establish other affiliates outside of Mexico.[14]

Mutual funds are limited to the performance of the following activities:[15]

- Buy, sell or invest in assets that are consistent with their corporate purpose;
- Enter into short-term loans or repurchase agreements on securities, or with derivative financial instruments;
- Buy their own shares, except for closed-end mutual funds or capital investment mutual funds which shares are not quoted in the securities market;
- Buy or sell shares of other mutual funds that are quoted in the securities market;
- Obtain loans from domestic or international financial or non-financial institutions;
- Issue debentures needed to comply with their obligations; and
- Any other activities expressly authorized by the Commission in general rules.

In order to comply with their corporate purposes and the activities authorized by the statute, mutual funds must retain third parties qualified to perform specific services, including but not limited to the following:[16]

- Management of assets;
- Distribution of shares of the mutual fund;
- Appraisal of shares of the mutual fund (to be performed by specialized appraisal companies which base their price determination on updated securities, documents or financial instruments that make up the assets of the fund, provided by the price provider or through the prices obtained using the valuation methods authorized by the Commission);[17]
- Rating of the mutual fund;
- Delivery of prices of investment assets;
- Deposit and custody of investment assets;
- Accounting services for mutual funds;
- Administration services for the mutual fund; and
- Other activities expressly authorized by the Commission in the general rules.

Capital mutual funds, however, are not required to hire the distribution of shares, rating, delivery of prices of investment assets or management services.

Mutual funds are restricted from performing the following activities:

- Receiving cash deposits;
- Granting security interests over their properties, goods, securities or other assets (except as strictly required to perform their corporate goals in limited circumstances);[18]
- Securing the obligations of third parties;
- Repurchasing or selling shares issued at a price other than the one set forth by the appraisal company retained taking into consideration the commissions that correspond to each share series (mutual funds that are quoted in the stock market shall comply with the repurchasing provisions set forth by the SML for issuers);
- Performing active lending activities, except for short-term loans on securities; and
- Any other restrictions set forth by statute.

§ MX:65 Particular types of mutual funds

As mentioned above, the MFL contemplates four different types of mutual funds:[1]

- Variable rent investments mutual funds;
- Debt instrument investments mutual funds;
- Capital investments mutual funds; or
- Limited purpose investment mutual funds.

§ MX:66 Particular types of mutual funds—Variable income mutual funds

These mutual funds invest in shares, debentures and other securities that represent debt instruments and that the MFL collectively defines as "securities" for these types of mutual funds (including, as authorized by the Commission, other securities, rights, documents, agreements cash deposits and other commercial goods). The Commission will determine the limits that exist in the maximum percentages that may be invested for a single issuer in variable income instruments and the maximum amount of the securities of an issuer that may be held by a single mutual fund, and the minimum percentages to be held in securities whose liquidity allows it to acquire shares of its capital stock, and the minimum percentages to be held in other variable income shares, instruments or documents that have a maturity of no more than 3 months and in other specific types of variable income instruments. The Commission may consider variations based on the diversification of assets and the promotion of other types of investments.[1]

§ MX:67 Particular types of mutual funds—Debt instrument mutual funds

As its name would suggest, this type of mutual fund invests exclusively in debt related instruments that the MFL collectively defines as "securities" for this type of mutual fund. The Commission will determine the limits that exist in the maximum percentages that may be invested for a single issuer in debt instruments and the maximum amount of the securities of an issuer that may be held by a single mutual fund, and the minimum percentages to be held in securities whose liquidity allows it to acquire shares of its capital stock. The Commission may consider variations based on the diversification of assets and the promotion of other types of investments.[1]

§ MX:68 Particular types of mutual funds—Capital mutual funds

As its name would suggest, this type of mutual fund invests exclusively in shares, equity participation, debentures or other instruments of companies that the mutual fund is promoting ("target companies"). The Commission will determine the generic characteristics of the target companies that can be invested in, the maximum percentages that may be invested in shares or equity participation of a single target company, the maximum amount that may be invested in debentures and bonds issued by a target company, and the maximum percentages of the total assets of a mutual fund that may be invested in shares or equity participation issued by target companies; any transitory funds not allocated to target companies must be invested in cash instruments or with other mutual funds. The Commission may consider variations based on the diversification of assets and the promotion of other types of investments. Capital mutual funds must enter into a promotion agreement with each target company that will set forth the conditions to which the investment shall be subject to.[1]

§ MX:69 Particular types of mutual funds—Limited purpose mutual funds

This type of mutual fund invests exclusively in the assets that are specifically determined in its by-laws and investment prospectus. The investments in this type of mutual fund will be subject to the general rules issued by the Commission. It must indicate the percentage of its assets that may be held in the specific type of investments that it was designed to perform; any transitory funds not allocated to target companies must be invested in cash instruments or with other mutual funds.[1]

§ MX:70 Particular types of mutual funds—Pension funds

At a ground-breaking event in the early 1990's, the Mexican Congress enacted legislation that led to the creation of the mandatory savings pension funds. All employers must make contributions that their employees will be entitled to receive when they retire. The individual employees are holders of an "Afore" account where those retirement funds are deposited. The funds that are deposited and that have had very significant growth are held by mutual funds called "Afores" which, in turn, assign the investments of those funds to management companies called "Siefores".

The entire structure of the Afore accounts, Afores operation and Siefores' decisions, has been closely monitored to prevent any abuses or excesses by the companies administering those funds. The strict nature of those rules initially led to restrictions on those funds by making them only eligible for investment in government rated debt instruments. While those rules proved a safe ground for the funds being accumulated, they also created an artificial barrier to greater growth and yield for the employees' assets. Hence the National Pension Funds System Commission has been slowly authorizing a greater amount of flexibility in the percentages and amounts that Siefores may allocate to other types of securities and not only government-rated debt instruments. Based on the amounts that are involved, any decision concerning how these funds are invested has a significant impact on the economy in instances where a source of resources for growth in some industries may be important for the country's overall growth. The operation of this Afore system is a significant market that must be carefully analyzed based on the most relevant impact it has and will continue to have, especially in a country with some of the lowest savings patterns as compared to other OECD members.[1]

§ MX:71 Entities authorized to trade in securities

One of the purposes of the SML is to regulate the offering and intermediation of securities (1 section II).

[Section MX:69]

[1]Articles 30 and 31 of the MFL.

[Section MX:70]

[1]The OECD has performed several studies to compare their members in several economic data, including the amount of savings per citizen. For more information, see www.oecd.org.

In this section, we will first define the concept of "intermediation" under the SML in order to have a clear picture of the activities regulated in the trading of securities.

Secondly, we will classify, taking into account the SML's four types of intermediation activities, each of which is subject to certain specific terms and conditions.

Finally, we will address the financial entities authorized to trade securities, considering the type of intermediation activities performed.

§ MX:72 Definition of Intermediation under the SML

Article 2 section XV of the SML defines the concept of "securities intermediation" (intermediación con valores) as follows: The regular and professional performance of any of the following activities:

a) Acts performed in order to bring together the offer and the demand of securities.

b) The execution of transactions with securities on behalf of third parties, acting as an agent, representative or otherwise, and executing the corresponding legal acts either in its own name or in representation of the third party.

c) The negotiation of securities in its own capacity with the general public or with other intermediaries acting in their own capacity or on behalf of third parties.

In order for any of the previous activities to be considered, under the SML, as securities intermediation, they must be performed: (i) by entities that usually or repeatedly carry out such activities, and (ii) on a professional basis. If any of the previous requirements are not met, then the activities shall not be deemed securities intermediation.

Although there is no description in the SML as to what shall be understood of the terms "regular" or "professional" they should be considered in connection with the entities authorized to trade securities. For example: (i) entities whose main purpose or one of its purposes is to trade securities; (ii) entities authorized by the authority to do so; (iii) entities that trade securities on an ongoing and regular basis; and (iv) entities that have the professional experience and skills to perform any such activities.

The activity mentioned in section a) above, refers to the typical brokerage transaction in which an entity acts just as an intermediary between the seller of the security and the buyer. In this sense, both seller and buyer perform by themselves all the acts regarding the trading of the security.

Section b) above refers to the activity in which an entity (intermediary) executes securities transactions acting as an agent of a third party (principal). The entity, as an agent, shall execute all legal acts on behalf of the principal. Depending on the relationship established between principal and agent, the latter (intermediary) may act either (i) in its own name, or (ii) in the name of the principal.

Finally, the activity referred in section c) above entails the negotiation of securities by an entity (intermediary) acting by itself and in its own capacity in transactions with the general public or other intermediaries acting: (i) in its own capacity (i.e., as in this case c)); or (ii) on behalf of third parties (i.e., as in case b)).

§ MX:73 Types of Intermediation Activities

According to Article 9 of the SML, we could divide the intermediation activities as follows: (i) intermediation of registered securities; (ii) intermediation of unregistered securities; and (iii) intermediation with securities issued abroad. This classification is based on the kind of securities to be traded. Depending on the activity or security, the intermediation may be performed by different entities.

§ MX:74 Types of Intermediation Activities—Intermediation of registered securities

The intermediation of securities registered with NSBR can only be performed by financial entities duly authorized to act as a intermediary of the securities market" The authorization of financial entities is analyzed in the following section.

On the other hand, the SML provides the regulation of certain companies authorized to manage negotiation systems to facilitate securities transactions. Under articles 232, the performance of activities aiming to provide access to negotiation systems that allow the contact between offer and demand of securities by centralizing positions to execute transactions may be developed by stock exchanges, companies that manage systems to facilitate securities transactions, and entities or individuals that develop over-the-counter negotiation systems with regards to registered securities different than those reserved to the stock exchanges, or unregistered securities for over-the-market systems in which institutional and qualified investors participate.

An "intermediary of the securities market" may be able to provide brokerage services of unlisted securities (i.e., private placement of securities), only referred to shares representing capital stock of legal entities, as provided in the SML. However, in no event may the "intermediary of the securities market" participate on behalf of third parties in the execution of the transactions.

Other unlisted securities different than shares of the capital stock of legal entities, cannot be traded by "intermediaries of the securities market".

On the other hand, the private offer, promotion, commercialization and negotiation of shares representing the capital stock of legal entities not listed in the NSBR can be carried out: (i) through centralized information systems (called off-stock exchange systems) that facilitate the performance of such activities; (ii) by any individual or legal entity,[1] without the need of any kind of authorization from the government;[2] and (iii) as long as only "qualified investors" and "institutional investors" participate and negotiate in such systems. In this case, such activities may be performed without the participation of an "intermediary of the securities market". Also, brokerage firms and credit organizations may offer mediation (mediación), deposit and administration services regarding such shares, but they cannot, in any case, act on behalf of third parties in the execution of the transactions.[3] The foregoing is provided in Articles 232 and 260 of the SML.

§ MX:76 Types of Intermediation Activities—Other unregistered securities

The SML does not expressly state the persons authorized to act as intermediary of unregistered securities, but it does state that intermediaries may provide the service of intermediation of unregistered securities only with respect to shares representing capital stock of legal entities. Thus, it shall be understood that any person may perform the trading and intermediary activities of unlisted securities other than unlisted shares representing capital stock of legal entities.

§ MX:77 Types of Intermediation Activities—Intermediation with securities issued abroad

The intermediation activities concerning securities operating abroad or issued in accordance with foreign legal provisions, which are subject to being listed under the international quotation system of a stock exchange, shall only be provided through such system. That is, the SML does not regulate the intermediation activities concerning offshore securities, but the entity performing such activities shall be subject and comply within the applicable regulatory framework.

§ MX:78 Types of Intermediation Activities—Other Intermediation Activities

Unless otherwise provided above, any person may perform the purchase and sale of securities as long as the SML does not provide to the contrary. In other words, any person may trade securities not regulated under the SML.

[Section MX:75]

[1]The persons that develop systems for the private offer and negotiation of shares as provided in Article 260 of the SML, shall not be subject to the overview of the Commission, unless in the case of financial entities.

[2]However, certain information shall be provided to the Commission for statistical purposes.

[3]Articles 232 and 260–261 of the SML.

§ MX:79 Intermediaries of the securities market

According to Article113 of the SML, the "intermediaries of the securities market" shall be the following: (i) brokerage firms; (ii) credit organizations (i.e., banks); (iii) mutual funds operating companies; (iv) pension funds managing companies ("Afores"); (v) distribution companies of shares of mutual funds; and (vi) other financial entities authorized to act as distribution companies of shares of mutual funds.

The organization and operation of (i) the brokerage firms is regulated under the SML, and (ii) the entities referred in (ii) through (vi) above shall be subject to the provisions contained under the financial system laws that regulate each one of them and the regulations derived thereto.

On the other hand, Banco de México, as the central bank, is authorized to trade with securities. However, pursuant to the SML, it is not considered an intermediary because its activities refer to its position of being the Mexican central bank.

§ MX:80 Authorized from the Commission to trade securities; brokerage firms

In order to operate as a brokerage firm, it is necessary to obtain an authorization granted by the Commission; these are published in the Federal Official Gazette (as well as its amendments) and cannot be transferred in any manner whatsoever. Brokerage firms shall be incorporated as stock corporations (sociedades anónimas) considering the special provisions contained in the SML.[1]

The applications for the authorization of brokerage firms shall comply with certain requirements and attach different documents regarding the legal, financial, business or other aspects of the corporation and its shareholders.[2]

Brokerage firms may perform activities in foreign markets where they have obtained prior authorization by the Commission and subject to the applicable provisions.

§ MX:81 Authorized from the Commission to trade securities; brokerage firms—Branch offices

On the other hand, the Commission may authorize the opening in Mexico of a branch office of a foreign brokerage firm; however, it cannot perform intermediation activities.[1]

Series "L" shares shall have limited voting rights and may have preferred dividends rights.

The acquisition of Series "O" shares, through one or more successive or simultaneous transactions, by one person or group of persons, shall be: (i) notified in the case of the acquisition of 2% of the capital stock of the brokerage firm; (ii) previously approved by the Commission in the case of an acquisition of 5% through 29% of the capital stock of the brokerage firm; and (iii) previously approved by the Commission in the case of an acquisition of 30% of the capital stock or the control of the brokerage firm. The capital stock of affiliates shall be integrated by Series "F" shares that shall represent at least 51% of the capital stock. The Commission may order, under certain cases, the partial suspension of the performance of one or more activities of a brokerage firm.[2]

Moreover, the Commission may order the intervention over the administration of a brokerage firm in circumstances when the authority considers there could be damage to the clients or creditors of the corporation.[3] The general counsel appointed shall be subject to certain requirements, registries and procedures.

Also, the Commission has the authority to revoke the authorization granted to a brokerage firm under certain cases listed in a limited manner.[4] regulates the banking and credit services and the organization and operation of credit institutions. The CIL provides that the banking and credit services can only be provided through multiple banking institutions (i.e., commercial banks) and development banking institutions, (i.e., federal government development banks).[1] Multiple banking institutions and development banks, together with public trusts incorporated by the Federal Government for economic development; and regulatory banking organizations make up the Mexican Banking System.[2]

Banks are authorized to provide typical banking and credit services such as: (i) receipt of deposits, (ii) receipt of loans and credits, (iii) granting of loans and credits, (iv) issuing banking bonds; (v) issuing subordinated debentures, (vi) issuing credit cards, (vii) assuming third party obligations and the issuance of letters of credit, and (viii) acting as trustee, among others.[3]

However, banks are also authorized to trade securities under the terms provided in the CIL and the SML, multiple banking institutions may perform the activities provided in article 46 of the CIL only if authorized by their corporate purpose and previous authorization from the Commission.

Article 53 of the CIL provides that a securities transaction performed by the banks on their own behalf shall be carried out under the terms provided in the CIL, the SML and shall be subject to the inspection and overview of the Commission.

When the transactions refer to securities listed in the NSBR, the transaction shall be carried out through the intermediation of brokerage firms except in the following cases: (i) securities issues, accepted or guaranteed by credit institutions, (ii) transactions exempted by Banco de México through general rules considering reasons of credit or exchange rate policy, and (iii) transactions exempted by the Ministry (with the previous the opinion of Banco de México and the Commission) under the following criteria: (a) finance new companies or new activities, (b) transfer important quantities of the capital stock of companies, and (c) other purposes not adjusted to the normal mechanisms of the market.[4]

The repurchase agreements of securities executed by banks shall be performed subject to the applicable rules and to some specific terms and conditions listed in Article 54 of the CIL.

§ MX:90 Oversight and regulation by Commission—Operating companies of mutual funds and of pension funds

The SML provides that operating companies of mutual funds and of pension funds could act as "intermediaries of the securities market". Mutual funds are regulated under the MFL and the pension funds under the Pension Funds System Law (Ley de los Sistemas de Ahorro para el Retiro, "PFSL").

§ MX:91 Oversight and regulation by the Commission—Operating companies of mutual funds and of pension funds—Authorized services

The organization and general operation of mutual funds has been broadly described above.

The purpose of the mutual fund operating companies is to render certain administrative services to the mutual funds when they are hired to perform such services. Mutual fund operating companies are stock corporations duly authorized by the Commission. It is important to mention that mutual fund operating companies may be independent of any financial institution.

Mutual fund operating companies may be authorized to provide the following services to mutual funds, in addition to managing the fund's assets: (i) distribution of shares of mutual funds (see below in connection with operation of distribution companies, which terms and conditions are also applicable to mutual fund operating companies); (iii) valuation of shares of mutual funds (an express authorization to perform this activity is needed); (iv) deposit and custody of assets; (v) accounting services for mutual funds; (vi) portfolio management for third parties; (vii) acting as trustee; and (viii) other similar services authorized by the Commission.[1] Mutual fund operating companies may jointly render the services previously set forth, provided they comply with the applicable provisions of each service contained in the MFL to mutual funds.

The administration of assets of mutual fund services are performed through the following activities: (a) the execution of the different transactions entitled to the mutual funds (i.e., buy, sell or invest in assets that are consistent with their corporate purpose; enter into short-term loans or repurchase agreements on securities, or with derivative financial instruments; buy or sell shares of other mutual funds that are quoted in the securities market; obtain loans from domestic or international financial or non-financial institutions), in the name and on behalf of the mutual fund receiving the services; (b) managing the placing of securities representing a debt of a mutual fund in order to comply with its purpose; and (c) managing securities portfolios of mutual funds and third parties, in accordance with the SML.[2]

§ MX:92 Oversight and regulation by Commission—Afores; operating company of pension funds

An Afore is an operating company (stock corporation) of pension funds duly authorized by the National Pension Funds System Commission. In particular, the main purpose of an Afore is to manage individual accounts of employees and their investments, as well as operate mutual funds specialized in pension funds ("Siefores").[1] In this sense, an Afore is authorized to provide the following services to a Siefore (similar to the services provided by a mutual fund operating company to a mutual fund, but specialized to pension funds): (i) administration services, and (ii) distribution and repurchase of shares of the capital stock of the Siefores they represent.

§ MX:93 Distribution companies

The SML provides that distribution companies of shares of mutual funds and financial entities having said character could act as "intermediaries of the securities market". Such companies are regulated under the MFL.

The purpose of the distribution companies is to render to mutual funds the service of distribution of shares of mutual funds. Such service shall be referred by mutual funds either to distribution companies or mutual fund operating companies. Distribution companies are stock corporations duly authorized by the Commission.[1] Distribution companies may be independent to any financial institution.[2]

The service of distribution of shares of mutual funds consists of the following activities: promotion and advice to third parties, and issuing instructions to buy or sell mutual fund shares issued by the mutual fund that hired such services or by order of the client that intends to acquire or convey them. In no instance may a distribution company act in its own name with the general public regarding shares of mutual funds, and must comply with valuation prices for the shares.[3]

provided by financial entities such as credit institutions, brokerage firms, insurance companies, credit unions, among others, under the supervision of the Commission.[4]

Mutual fund operating companies, distribution companies and financial entities authorized to act as distribution companies, must use the services of individuals authorized (who shall comply with certain requirements) by the Commission to execute with the general public activities such as consulting services, promotion, buying and selling of mutual fund shares, provided they comply with the requirements of technical quality, honorability and satisfactory credit history.[5]

V. RECENT TRENDS AND DEVELOPMENTS

§ MX:94 Generally

The SML now allows for the securitization of credit and collectable rights by non-financial institutions. This secondary market is expected to experience a consistent growth in the coming years. Further implementation will require precise legal and financial engineering considering the almost non-existent precedents in Mexico on these issues.

Also, the SML allows for an easier pathway for companies to become public, clearer corporate governance regulations, more specific definitions on conduct considered to be unlawful, specific sanctions for negligent or careless officers and directors and an overall need for issuers to be more transparent in their day to day transactions. This is certainly expected to increase overall investments and general activity in the securities sector.

Finally, the enactment in January 2014 of a financial reform established the bases for a new era in the Mexican financial sector, with the amendment to a total of 34 statutes, with the purposes of: (i) encouraging healthy competition; (ii) promoting lending activities by development banks and commercial banks; (iii) maintaining a solid and prudent financial sector; and (iv) promote increased efficiency for financial institutions an related entities. Particularly in terms of the securities market, the reform's purpose includes making the operations of the securities market more efficient and improving the performance of its players, in a framework that provides clarity for investors, authorities, intermediaries and other participants. Part of its objective is to get a larger number of investors to participate in the debt and capital markets, and establish a solid sale practices by credit institutions and brokerage firms in securities transactions, and applying such provisions to mutual funds operating companies. The Commission also plays an important role with increased authority to provide discipline in the markets that it regulates, supervises and penalizes, with specific authorities regarding control and regulation, and publicity of information. With respect to mutual funds, the reform provided important changes to update the corporate regime that governs mutual funds and its operating companies, simplifying some of the formalities, costs and timeframes applicable to their incorporation and operations. Thus, the reform provides increased legal certainty to the financial sector, which is expected to grow and show benefits both for users and for the financial institutions with the offer of better financial products, access to credit lines and competitive rates, and create a an improved and more sophisticated financial culture in Mexico.
