Executive and Legislative Changes (2024 Updates)

As of 2024, following the recent presidential elections, the political and legislative landscape in Mexico has undergone significant transitions. New leadership has placed an increased focus on transparency, economic growth, and post-pandemic recovery efforts. The government's strategies aim to stabilize inflation and encourage foreign investment, especially in the technology and Fintech sectors.

Securities Market Law Amendments

Recent amendments to the Securities Market Law (Ley del Mercado de Valores—LMV) were introduced to address the evolving landscape of digital assets, with new provisions focused on tokenized securities and blockchain-based assets. The law now provides clearer definitions and guidelines for the regulation of digital currencies and tokenized assets, aiming to reduce fraud and protect investors.

Updated CNBV Regulations (2023-2024)

The Comisión Nacional Bancaria y de Valores (CNBV) has issued new guidelines as part of its ongoing efforts to strengthen regulatory oversight of financial institutions, particularly in the areas of Fintech and electronic payment platforms. The regulations emphasize improved compliance mechanisms, market transparency, and stricter anti-money laundering protocols.

Recent Trends in the Stock Exchange (BMV (Bolsa Mexicana de Valores) and BIVA (Bolsa Institucional de Valores))

As of 2023, the Bolsa Mexicana de Valores (BMV (Bolsa Mexicana de Valores)) and the Bolsa Institucional de Valores (BIVA (Bolsa Institucional de Valores)) have experienced a steady increase in trading volumes. BIVA (Bolsa Institucional de Valores), in particular, continues to expand its market share since its establishment in 2018, attracting a growing number of IPOs from technology startups and mid-sized companies. Additionally, both exchanges are increasingly focusing on ESG-compliant listings.

Corporate Governance and ESG Compliance

With the growing emphasis on Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) factors, the Mexican government has introduced several regulatory updates requiring companies listed on the stock exchange to include ESG reports as part of their annual disclosures. The latest provisions demand that companies address gender diversity in board compositions and provide transparency on environmental impacts.

Fintech Developments and Digital Securities

The rise of Fintech in Mexico has seen a significant boost with the latest amendments to the Fintech Law. These include enhanced provisions for crowdfunding platforms, cryptocurrency trading, and digital wallets. The CNBV has also issued a framework for the issuance and trading of digital securities on blockchain platforms.

Final Update: Securities Market Law Amendments (2024)

The latest amendments to the Securities Market Law (LMV), effective as of 2023, further clarify the regulations around digital securities, blockchain-based assets, and tokenized securities. These amendments aim to promote transparency and investor protection, while providing issuers more clarity on disclosure obligations.

CNBV Regulatory Changes 2023

In 2023, the CNBV reinforced its regulations on Fintech operations, ensuring stronger supervision of cryptocurrency exchanges, digital wallets, and crowdfunding platforms. The new rules aim to enhance anti-money laundering measures and improve compliance for these emerging financial sectors.

New ESG Corporate Governance Regulations (2023-2024)

Mexico continues to advance its ESG regulatory framework, with stricter requirements for listed companies to disclose environmental and social impact reports. As of 2024, publicly listed companies are now obligated to adopt gender-diverse boards and report progress on sustainability metrics in line with international standards.

Securities Market Law: Digital and Tokenized Assets

As of 2024, the Securities Market Law (LMV) has been updated to provide regulatory clarity for the issuance and trading of digital securities, including tokenized assets and blockchain-based financial instruments. These amendments are critical in promoting investor protection while facilitating the adoption of blockchain technologies in financial markets. Issuers of tokenized securities are now required to adhere to stringent reporting standards and risk disclosures.

Updated CNBV Regulations: Cryptocurrency and Fintech Platforms

The CNBV has implemented new regulations for the Fintech industry in 2023, focusing particularly on cryptocurrency exchanges and electronic payment platforms. These updates include enhanced compliance measures for anti-money laundering (AML) protocols and know-your-customer (KYC) procedures. The regulations now mandate cryptocurrency exchanges to comply with stringent transparency guidelines to prevent market manipulation and fraud.

Corporate Governance: New ESG Compliance Regulations

In 2023, the ESG reporting requirements for publicly listed companies in Mexico have expanded significantly. Companies are now obligated to disclose their environmental and social impacts in annual reports, including data on carbon emissions, resource usage, and social initiatives. Additionally, new gender diversity requirements mandate that boards of directors must include at least 30% female representation, reflecting a broader push toward gender equality in corporate governance.

Recent Market Trends: BMV (Bolsa Mexicana de Valores) and BIVA (Bolsa Institucional de Valores)

The Bolsa Mexicana de Valores (BMV (Bolsa Mexicana de Valores)) and Bolsa Institucional de Valores (BIVA (Bolsa Institucional de Valores)) continue to experience growth in 2024, with BIVA (Bolsa Institucional de Valores) gaining market share due to its focus on mid-sized and tech-related companies. Both exchanges have reported increased IPOs, particularly in the technology and renewable energy sectors. In line with global trends, ESG-compliant listings are becoming more prevalent, attracting both institutional and individual investors focused on sustainability.

2024 Mexican Presidential Election

The 2024 Mexican presidential election marked a significant political shift, with a new administration coming into power on October 1, 2024. The ruling party, Movimiento Regeneración Nacional (MORENA), won a decisive victory, ensuring continuity in policy direction, particularly around economic reform, anti-corruption measures, and digital infrastructure expansion. The newly elected president's administration has pledged to prioritize economic stabilization, bolstering foreign investment, and modernizing Mexico's legal frameworks for technology and financial regulation.

Legislative Updates: Senate and House Elections

In the 2024 legislative elections, MORENA retained control of the Senate and the House of Representatives, consolidating its political influence. The elections reaffirmed the push toward legislative reforms targeting corruption, judicial reforms, and stricter environmental policies. This electoral result has provided the ruling party with the necessary majority to pass key legislative measures aimed at economic recovery and expanding Mexico's participation in international financial markets.

2024 Regulatory and Legal Framework Updates

The financial sector in Mexico has experienced several regulatory updates in 2024, with new laws implemented by the Comisión Nacional Bancaria y de Valores (CNBV) focused on improving digital securities regulation and increasing oversight for cryptocurrency platforms. These updates are aimed at fostering market confidence while enhancing anti-money laundering (AML) protocols and Know Your Customer (KYC) compliance measures. Additionally, the Fintech Law has been expanded to accommodate new technological advances in blockchain and cryptocurrency, positioning Mexico as a hub for digital financial services in Latin America.

I. OVERVIEW

§ NZ:1 Introduction

In the second decade of the 21st century, securities regulation in New Zealand underwent its most radical change since 1978. Indeed, even the term "securities regulation" is no longer apt to describe this area of law and "financial markets regulation" or "financial markets law" is now the better terminology although the terms are used interchangeably for convenience in this country commentary. This result flows from the shock of the global financial crisis (GFC) in 2007-08 and the collapse of debt issuing finance companies in New Zealand which lead to the establishment of a new market regulator in 2011—the Financial Markets Authority (FMA)—and new legislation covering the primary and secondary market enacted in September 2013—the Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013 (FMC Act). The FMC Act is in full force and, as a result, much of the case law on the former legislation is now redundant because of design and definitional changes appearing in the FMC Act—the case law on "offer to the public" and void irregular allotments provide examples. Some of the case law remains relevant—insider trading and substantial product holder disclosure are examples. However, most of the case law on the Securities Act 1978 (78 Act) has been removed. A similar point applies to the discussion of statutory interpretation in New Zealand which appeared in earlier versions of this commentary; definitional changes in the FMC Act have diminished the need for an in-depth understanding of that law and the relevant section has been heavily truncated.

§ NZ:2 Legal System

New Zealand is a sovereign independent unitary State with a constitutional monarchy, responsible government and a unicameral legislature. As with the United Kingdom, there is no one document which embodies a national constitution. The sources of the constitution include Imperial legislation (principally the Imperial Laws Application Act 1988); New Zealand legislation (principally the Constitution Act 1986); the common law (customary common law, judicial precedent and statutory interpretation); customary international law; Letters Patent; the law and custom of Parliament and convention. The Constitution Act 1986 specifies the principal entities of the New Zealand Constitution, namely: the Sovereign (represented by the Governor-General); the Executive; the Legislature and the Judiciary. In recent decades, The Treaty of Waitangi 1840 made between indigenous Maori and the Crown has assumed increased constitutional importance.[1] In November 1993, New Zealand adopted a proportional representation voting system based on the German model.[2] From November 2008 to 2017, the Centre-right National Party led by Prime Minister John Keys governed New Zealand with support from minor parties.[3] A General Election occurred in 2017 and the Centre-Left Labour Party led by Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern governed with support from the New Zealand First Party and the Greens. Subsequently, in the General Election of 18 October 2020, the Labour Party, again led by Jacinda Ardern, won an outright majority of 64 seats in Parliament. In January 2023, Jacinda Ardern resigned as Prime Minister and was replaced by Chris Hipkins. There was a General Election in late 2023. The Labour Party was ousted and a new center-right coalition government comprising the National Party, the ACT Party, and the New Zealand First Party was formed.

[3]Key data is as follows: New Zealand is a member nation of the OECD; the population in 2024 was approximately 5.3 million. Expected GDP for 2023 was approximately US $253.58 billion. The welfare budget at close to $55 billion for 2023 is about 36% of the NZ government total income. The biggest industries are agriculture and tourism. As of June 2024, there were 731, 314 companies registered in New Zealand. There were 182 companies listed on the NZX as of August 2024. Capitalization of the NZX was approximately NZD175 billion as of August 2024. About 20 percent of New Zealanders own shares in the NZ share market.

New Zealand is a common law country. The legal system derives from United Kingdom origins (like Australia, Hong Kong, Singapore and Malaysia). The court hierarchy comprises the District Court, the High Court, the Court of Appeal, and the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court Act 2003 (NZ) established the Supreme Court of New Zealand. This Act established within New Zealand a new court of final appeal comprising New Zealand judges to recognize that New Zealand is an independent nation with its own history and traditions; to enable important legal matters—including legal matters relating to the Treaty of Waitangi—to be resolved with an understanding of New Zealand conditions, history and traditions, and, to improve access to justice. The Supreme Court of New Zealand replaces the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council located in London. It came into being on 1 January 2004 and hearings commenced on 1 July 2004: see M. Russell and M. Barber, eds., The Supreme Court of New Zealand 2004-2013 (Thomson Reuters, 2015).

Securities litigation usually commences in the High Court—see s 538 of the Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013. The principal sources of New Zealand securities regulation law are statutes. Previously, the leading statutes were the Securities Act 1978 ('78 Act) and the Securities Markets Act 1988 (the SMA). These Acts were repealed by the Financial Markets (Repeals and Amendments) Act 2013 on 1 December 2014 at which time the Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013 was in force subject to transitional provisions. Regulations under the FMC Act were brought in via the Financial Markets Conduct Regulations 2014.

New Zealand Acts, regulations, and other secondary legislation can be accessed on the New Zealand government website, available at: https://www.legislation.govt.nz. Acts are updated regularly, and the date of the latest update appears on the online version.

Case law (decisions of the courts interpreting the provisions of the Act) is another source of law. Rules of precedent apply—New Zealand courts are bound by decisions of higher courts in the appellate hierarchy. Decisions of courts in other common law jurisdictions are of persuasive authority. Here, Australian case law is especially persuasive because New Zealand financial markets law is, in part, based on the cognate Australian law. United States decisions are sometimes cited. For example, the decision in SEC v. Ralston Purina Co, 346 U.S. 119 (1935) was referred to by New Zealand courts when considering the meaning of s. 3 of the '78 Act (guide to construction of the term, "offer to the public"). However, the "offer to the public" concept was abolished by the FMC Act.

II. SECURITIES REGULATORY SCHEME

§ NZ:3 History and principal legislation

There was no separate securities legislation in New Zealand until the Securities Act 1978 ('78 Act). Before that time, the subject was embedded in company legislation such as the Companies Act 1955 and the common law. The collapse of the merchant banker, Securitibank, provided the impetus for the '78 Act.[1] Securitibank attracted funds in a manner that avoided the prospectus provisions of the Companies Act 1955. The legislative response embodied in the Securities Act 1978 was designed to regulate the activity of fund raising generally thereby defeating technical avoidance of the pre-existing legislation.[2]

In the early years of the 21st century, the New Zealand government instituted a major "four-step programme" of reform of New Zealand's securities regulation regime. As of early 2008, the third step of that program was complete. The planned fourth step did not eventuate; it was overtaken by the global financial crisis (GFC) which resulted in more wide-ranging reform.

Reform of the substantive legislation occurred in 2006 pursuant to the Securities Legislation Bill 2004.

The Bill followed (in part) the Australian legislative model pursuant to the earlier Memorandum of Understanding between the Government of New Zealand and the Government of Australia on Coordination of Business Law signed in August 2000.[3] In summary, the main aspects of the 2008 reforms to securities regulation in New Zealand were:

- The introduction of a new insider trading regime following the Australian model;
- New market manipulation laws;
- Fine-tuning of the substantial shareholder disclosure requirements;
- New rules for the regulation of investment advisers and brokers;
- Changes to the takeovers regime, and
- A carve out of the application of the Fair Trading Act 1986 to conduct covered by securities and takeovers legislation.

Walker, Gen. Ed., Securities Regulation in Australia and New Zealand, 2nd ed. (Sydney: LBC Information Services, 1998), 88-126.

[3]The 2000 MOU was eventually replaced by a revised Memorandum of Understanding on Coordination of Business Law between Australia and New Zealand signed on 22 February 2006. The MOU has been updated periodically since that time.

As stated, these changes came into effect in February 2008.

In June 2008, the Securities (Mutual Recognition of Securities Offerings-Australia) Regulations 2008 came into effect. These regulations were "mirrored" by Part 8.3 of the Australian Corporations Act 2001. Both the Australian and the New Zealand arrangements flow from the treaty known as The Agreement between the Government of Australia and the Government of New Zealand in Relation to Mutual Recognition of Securities Offerings 2006. In the result, a mutual recognition regime for securities offerings operates between Australia and New Zealand such that registration of a prospectus in one jurisdiction is (subject to certain conditions) registration in the other jurisdiction.

Further change occurred in late 2008 with the passing of the Financial Advisers Act 2008 (repealed as of March 2021). It came into force in 2011 and removed regulation of investment advisers from the Securities Markets Act 1988 and established a new regime for the regulation of such persons: see Gordon Walker and Alma Pekmezovic, Financial Adviser and Broker Regulation in New Zealand (Auckland: CCH New Zealand, 2010). This regime was repealed by the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (FSLA) and now appears in new subparts of the FMC Act. The FSLA also made made extensive amendments to the Financial Services Providers (Registration and dispute Resolution) Act 2008.

In April 2011, the Securities Trustees and Statutory Supervisors Act 2011 (STSS Act) was enacted. The genesis of this legislation lies in the collapse of several finance companies in New Zealand before and during the GFC. Many of these companies were debt issuers who issued debt securities pursuant to trust deeds. Concerns were raised as to the performance of trustees and the STSS Act was passed to remedy these concerns. The regulator of this legislation is the FMA.

In May 2011, the former regulator—the Securities Commission—was replaced by the Financial Markets Authority (FMA) pursuant to the Financial Markets Authority Act 2011. The FMA was established on 1 May 2011 after the enactment of the Financial Markets Authority Act 2011. This Act replaced the former Securities Commission and Government Actuary with the FMA and consolidated into the FMA some regulatory functions previously carried out by the Companies Office, the Ministry of Economic Development and the NZX. The FMA is an independent Crown entity responsible for administering a range of financial markets legislation. It also regulates securities exchanges, financial advisers and brokers, and trustees and issuers. The FMA website, www.fma.govt.nz provides information on the role and functions of the FMA.

The Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013 (FMC Act) was assented to in September 2013. The objectives of the Act are to ensure confidence in New Zealand's capital markets and improve companies' ability to raise capital. The accompanying Financial Markets (Repeal and Amendments) Act 2013 repealed and replaced several Acts, including:

- the Securities Act 1978*;*
- the Securities Markets Act 1988*;*
- the Securities Transfer Act 1991*;*

§ NZ:4 History and principal legislation—Overview of the Co-regulatory Regime

The Ministry of Business, Innovation and Employment (MBIE) in New Zealand (the responsible Minister is the Minister of Commerce) has general oversight of financial markets legislation and the FMA performs regulatory, co-regulatory and day-to-day operational functions. The MBIE launched a review of aspects of the Companies Act 1993 in 2024; see new developments below.

New Zealand operates a co-regulatory financial markets regulation regime. The New Zealand Exchange Limited (NZX) is the front-line regulator. The NZX operates New Zealand's main securities markets such as the New Zealand Stock Exchange (NZSX). The FMA and the NZX co-operate with each other to regulate New Zealand's securities markets. The co-regulatory regime was formally established by legislation such as Part 2 of the SMA and the Memorandum of Understanding between the former Securities Commission and the former NZSE Limited (now the NZX) on Regulatory Co-operation signed on 27 February 2003. In overview, this MOU addressed operational issues relating to:

- Compulsory referrals from the NZX to the FMA;
- Discretionary referrals to the FMA arising from NZX's oversight of trading activity via NZX's SMARTS electronic surveillance system;
- Referral of matters from the FMA to NZX relating to the NZX's Conduct Rules and procedures for those referrals;
- Consultation on waivers from continuous disclosure;
- Procedures relating to the FMA's powers to give directions to the NZX; and
- Procedures to consult on new Conduct Rules and amendments to those rules.

However, the present position is that the FMC Act is the key source of the co-regulatory regime between the FMA and any licensed market operator: see further below.

§ NZ:5 History and principal legislation—Repealed Legislation and Regulations

The Securities Act 1978 comprised five parts (the mixture of roman and Arabic numbering follows the legislation).

Part I of the Act established the Securities Commission (for convenience, usually called the "NZSC" in this Booklet) and described its functions. The FMA is now the regulator. The FMA took over all the powers possessed by the former Securities Commission.

Part II entitled "Restrictions on Offer and Allotment of Securities to the Public", created the general restriction on offering securities to the public in New Zealand whether from within or from without New Zealand in the absence of a disclosure document such as a prospectus or an exemption under section 5 of the '78 Act. This law changed when the FMC Act came into full force. The new law follows the Australian model.

Part III gave the NZSC powers of investigation and enforcement. The FMA Act now contains enhanced powers of investigation and enforcement.

Part IV dealt with Regulations.

Part V, Subparts 1-4 was entitled "Recognition and Application Regimes". The purpose of Part 5 was fully stated in s 71 of the Act. For example, one purpose was to introduce recognition and application regimes that provide for exemptions from Part II of the Act and Regulations so that foreign issuers could offer securities in New Zealand in accordance with the laws of their home country. In this way, the '78 Act made provision for mutual recognition regimes.[1] Hence, on 22 February 2006, New Zealand and Australia entered into an agreement to facilitate a regime for mutual recognition of securities offerings between the two countries.[2] As stated, by mid-2008, a new Mutual Recognition of Securities Offerings (MRSO) regime was in place between Australia and New Zealand.[3]

The Securities Markets Act 1988 is the name of the former Securities Amendment Act 1988. The earlier Securities Amendment Act 1988 (SAA) came into effect because of inquiries held after the share market crash of 1987. In its original form, the SAA dealt with insider trading, substantial shareholder disclosure and authorization of dealers in futures contracts. The SAA was extensively amended by the Securities Markets Amendment Act 2002 and given the new title of the Securities Markets Act 1988 (the SMA). The SMA Act was repealed in late 2014.

What were the problems with the Securities Act 1978?

One measure of the internal coherence of legislation is the degree of "fit" between purpose (legislative or strategic intent) and practice (judicial interpretation or strategic implementation). The purpose or strategic intent of the former legislation can be discerned in the body of discourse surrounding the introduction of the 1978 Act, namely, investor protection by way of timely disclosure of information to enable investors to make informed, but not riskless, choices. The tactical means of achieving this strategy was to focus on the activity of fund raising generally—regardless of the type of entity used as a vehicle for such activity. Further, it was intended that key definitions, such as the definition of a security, were to be widely defined and so interpreted by the judiciary.

The 1978 Act was the legal expression of an ascertainable policy (strategy) and purpose (strategic goal).[4] When encountering the Act in practice, the judiciary possessed a set of legal tools by which they might unlock meaning to achieve the desired fit between purpose and practice (making the Act work as intended). These tools comprised doctrines of statutory interpretation expressed in common law, the 1978 Act itself, and the Acts Interpretation Act. An application of these tools to the definition of a security in the Act could provide clear guidance as to the interpretation of the term. It is striking to note that the old "problem" cases under the '78 Act (Smith and Marac) were both cases where the Court made no reference to the purpose of the legislation. However, a strict application of the doctrine of precedent eventually meant that courts in New Zealand had to consider the purpose of the legislation following the decision of the full Court of Appeal in Kiwi Dairies and an advice of the Privy Council in Culverden to that effect. Viewed this way, Smith and Marac were cases of under reach cured by decisions of courts higher in the appellate chain. In the result, there existed a coherent fit between the purpose of the legislation and the practice of the courts on the interpretation of a security. This was achieved by reading the definition widely, as parliament intended, and by a ruling (specifically in Kiwi Dairies) that the purposes of the legislation must be considered by a court. The definition of a security problem thus became an example of the evolving application of judicial discretion and the doctrine of precedent culminating in a definitive ruling by a court high in the appellate chain. Here, application of traditional doctrines enabled the discovery of the correct interpretation largely because the statutory definition itself was highly transitive. By contrast, the wording of former s 3 was, in part at least, intransitive. This implies (but does not prove) that the exercise of judicial discretion was less likely to produce a coherent reading of the section. But the real problem with section 3 consisted of a built-in design flaw, the nebulous concept of "the public".

Section 3 of the Securities Act 1978 was an evolutionary maladaptation. The evidence shows that the courts had great difficulty with the concept of "the public" prior to the 1978 Act. The next logical step was to dispense with the concept and replace it with a general prohibition and clearly defined exemptions (precisely the solution adopted by the Australian legislation). Instead, the 1978 Act attempted to define the term in section 3. The attempt was doomed to fail as the early case law on section 3 illustrates. Further, while the decision in Kiwi Dairies clarified some of the problems in section 3, it also serves to confirm its design flaws. One reiterated example will suffice: an offer was caught by section 3 (1) unless all the persons to whom the offer was made came within section 3 (2). Thus, one misjudgment in the offering process would avoid the entire issue. This was objectionable on several counts. First, a law concerned with capital formation should be easy to understand, efficient and certain. Such a proposition applies, a fortiori, to a small capital importing country such as New Zealand given well-known domestic constraints on capital formation and intense international competition for capital. Second, uncertainty causes inefficiency. Generally, if legislation lacks clarity then costs will result. Ian Ramsay[5] has listed some of these costs as follows: increased legal research costs;[6] litigation costs;[7] judicial system costs;[8] increased unlawful activity;[9] decreased lawful activity,[10] and discrimination.[11]

In terms of securities legislation, the uncertainty surrounding the concept of offer to "the public" created difficulties for practitioners advising on compliance with securities law. In the result, those seeking to raise capital were faced with the costly option of erring on the side of caution and registering a prospectus when it might not be necessary,[12] or carrying out extensive investigations into potential of-

[6]Much legislation, particularly in corporate law, requires expenditure on legal research costs, such as legal opinions for lawyers, in order to obtain clarification.

[9]Legislative ambiguity may result in persons or companies unwittingly breaching the law because the ambit of the law is not clearly marked.

[10]Legislative ambiguity may chill lawful and productive activity by reason of the fact that persons or companies may not enter transactions because the precise ambit of the law cannot be determined.

[11]A lack of clarity may mean that legislative implementation by a regulator is undertaken on an arbitrary or discriminatory basis.

[12]G. Walker and M. Fox, "Costs Associated with Initial Public Offerings on the New Zealand Stock Exchange", 3 ICCLR 106 [1995]. The authors concluded (after a study of 20 companies making IPOs) that average fund-raising compliance costs were 4.29 percent of total funds raised. Interestingly, costs did not vary much between large issues and smaller issues. Hence, the proportion of compliance costs to funds raised was higher for smaller issuers. See also Morel and Co., Securities Act Study – A Report prepared for the Ministry of Commerce (1994). This inquiry into fund-raising ferees to ensure they came within the exemptions.[13] Although it was possible to rely on a narrow band of people under the section 3(2)(a)(i) and (ii) exemptions, this was unlikely to provide a sufficiently large pool of potential investors.[14] Further, in the case of small companies, large institutions and habitual investors might decline to infuse equity unless they gained control. This has chilling effect business start-ups.[15]

Rather than risk incurring prospectus costs or penalties for non-compliance, many companies (especially small ones who are less able to sustain such costs), would opt to raise debt capital through finance companies (even if this was inappropriate to the stage of growth of the company and lead to cash flow difficulties).[16] This limited not only those firms but also the economy as a whole as it sought capital to grow and compete with overseas competitors.[17] This highlights an even more troubling problem. The "offer to the public" concept simply did not fit with the realities of the New Zealand economy. It was well documented that approximately 99.5 percent of all businesses in New Zealand are SMEs, which employ 76.8 percent of the total labor force and have difficulty raising equity capital.[18] Section 3 of the Securities Act seemed to operate in ignorance of these facts. The offer to the public concept might have been appropriate to the 0.5 percent of large businesses in New Zealand but it was totally inappropriate for SMEs which cannot afford the time or expense associated with a formal public offering.[19] There was hence a need for better fit between securities regulation and the economic characteristics of the New Zealand economy.

The solution to the evolutionary maladaptation of section 3 was extinction—the replacement of section 3 with a general prohibition on offering securities without a prospectus, subject to certain statutory exceptions. The model, which New Zealand legislators later decided to by unlisted companies found that key reasons for not issuing a prospectus were cost and complexity. There was a consensus amongst companies surveyed that raising $1 million by a public issue with a prospectus cost about $120,000 (ie., approximately 12 percent of funds raised). Id, 2.

work from, was the Australian Corporations Law.[20] Under the Corporations Law, the concept of offer to the public, which appeared in the earlier Australian Companies Code, was removed and replaced by an overall prohibition on inviting or offering securities for subscription or purchase without a prospectus. The basic prohibition is contained in section 706. The most significant exemptions are the small-scale offerings exemption contained in section 708(1) which allows for 20 issues or sales in 12 months, to a ceiling of $2 million, and the 'sophisticated investor' or 'gold card' exemption which applies to an offer where the minimum subscription is A$500,000 by each person to whom the offer or invitation is made: section 708(8). Both exemptions avoid any inquiry as to the meaning of the public.

Replacing section 3(2) (a) (iii) with the Australian small-scale offerings' exemption was an immediate solution to the present problems surrounding the New Zealand section. If we view section 3 as a maladaptation, however, the only logical solution was extinction followed by a leap to the next evolutionary stage as manifested in the Australian legislation. More generally, the "offer to the public" concept highlighted the need for strategic thinking about securities regulation in New Zealand. The type of thinking required is well illustrated by the first major strategic review of New Zealand, the New Zealand Porter Report.[21] The major finding of that report was "a misalignment between the structure of the New Zealand economy and . . . today's global economy."[22] The same could have been said about the '78 Act. It remains to add that section 39 of the FMC Act is explicitly based on s 706 of the Australian Corporations Act. This section was in force on 1 December 2014. The exclusions to s 39 are contained in Schedule 1, Part 1 of the FMC Act. Broadly speaking, these follow the Australian model.

§ NZ:6 New Financial Markets Law: Financial Markets Authority Act 2011 and Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013

As stated, following the global financial crisis, capital market regulation in New Zealand underwent its greatest change in decades. After the Capital Markets Development Taskforce published its final report in December 2009, Government acted quickly introducing the Financial Markets (Regulators and KiwiSaver) Bill 2011 (NZ) into Parliament in September 2010. In April 2011, the Financial Markets Authority Act 2011 (NZ) ('FMA Act') was passed and came into effect on 1 May 2011. The new statute created the Financial Markets Authority ('FMA'), a new market conduct regulator to replace the Securities Commission, the Commissioner for Financial Advisers and the Government Actuary.[1] The FMA has been operating since May 2011. Significantly, the FMA Act not only created a new conduct regulator but also ushered in a new area of law for New Zealand—financial markets law. So, for example, it is no longer accurate to speak of securities regulation in New Zealand. Securities regulation is now subsumed under the rubric of financial markets law. The same point applies to investment adviser and broker regulation.

The new financial markets law rests upon three core definitions which appear in s 4 of the FMA Act. The first definition is "financial markets" which means the financial markets in New Zealand and includes markets in New Zealand for the provision of financial services and the capital markets of New Zealand. The term "financial service" is given the same meaning as in s 5 of the Financial Service Provider Act 2008 (NZ).

The meaning of the term "financial markets legislation" is set out in Schedule 1 of the FMA Act. Schedule 1 was divided into two parts:

- Part 1—Auditor Regulation Act 2011, Financial Advisers Act 2008 (NZ), Financial Service Providers Act 2008 (NZ), Securities Act 1978 (NZ), Securities Markets Act 1988 (NZ), Securities Transfer Act 1991 (NZ), Superannuation Schemes Act 1989 (NZ), Unit Trusts Act 1960 (NZ), Parts 4 and 5 and Schedules 1 and 2 of the KiwiSaver Act 2006 (NZ), Sections 45U and 45V of the Public Finance Act 1989 and the Securities Trustees and Statutory Supervisors Act 2011.
- Part 2 (inter alia)—Companies Act 1993 (NZ), Corporations (Investigation and Management) Act 1989 (NZ), Financial Reporting Act 1993 (NZ), Limited Partnerships Act 2008 (NZ), Trustee Companies Act 1967 (NZ) and Part 5C of the Reserve Bank of New Zealand Act 1989 (NZ).

The significance of the division between Part 1 and Part 2 of Schedule 1 of the FMA Act appears in s 9 (1) (c), which sets out the FMA's functions and powers:

> (c) to monitor compliance with, investigate conduct that constitutes or may constitute a contravention of, and enforce—
> (i) the Acts referred to in Part 1 of Schedule 1 (and the enactments made under those Acts); and
> (ii) the Acts referred to in Part 2 of Schedule 1 (and the enactments made under those Acts) to the extent that those Acts or other enactments apply, or otherwise relate, to financial markets participants.

Thus, while the statutes listed in Part 1 of Schedule 1 fall under the FMA's jurisdiction without restraint, the statutes listed in Part 2 of Schedule 1 are only indirectly covered. Hence, Part 1 sets out the core legislation for financial markets law while Part 2 delineates areas of law that constitute financial markets law in a broader sense (we might call this the penumbra of financial markets law). In this way, there are direct and indirect targets of financial markets law.

The definition of "financial markets participant" provides the "personal" scope of financial markets law. The legislation governing New Zealand's capital markets laws had been incoherent and fragmented across various statutes. For example, the Securities Act 1978 applied to offers of securities to the public. The Securities Markets Act 1988 dealt with persons trading (or involved in trading) in securities and with issuers listed on the NZX. The Financial Reporting Act 1993 referred to "issuers" in s 4 of that Act and that definition extended to unlisted issuers. The Financial Advisers Act 2008 addresses persons who offer financial adviser services. Finally, the Financial Service Providers Act 2008 applies to people who offer any kind of financial service. These two Acts have been replaced by the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 which moved amended regimes into the FMC Act.

Definitional incoherence caused practical problems. An example was where a majority controlled unlisted company in New Zealand was an "issuer." The issuer was an unlisted company which had allotted securities pursuant to an offer requiring the issue of some type of disclosure document as specified in the Securities Act 1978 or the Securities Regulations 2009. As it turns out, majority controlled unlisted issuers of debt securities were—at least in recent times—the key corporate governance problem in New Zealand. Evidence for this proposition is provided by the raft of finance company failures in New Zealand during the so-called global financial crisis.[2] Unlisted finance companies raised money from the public by way of debt securities, but these companies were not subject to the discipline of the New Zealand Exchange Listing Rules. In particular, such issuers were not subject to the continuous disclosure regime which applies to listed companies.[3] The inapplicability of the Listing Rules combined with significant weaknesses in the Companies Act 1993 (for example, weak related party transaction rules) and the securities regulation regime (as far as unlisted issuers of debt securities were concerned) are among the reasons for the finance company failures of recent years.

The FMA Act does not pursue definitional diversity. Instead, it addresses one person in s 4, the "financial markets participant", meaning a person (inter alia)

> . . . who is, or is required to be, registered, licensed, appointed, or authorized under, or for the purposes of, any of the Acts listed in Part 1 of Schedule 1 or any of the enactments made under those Acts.

This definition includes all of the aforementioned persons. It covers related bodies and, very significantly, directors and senior managers. The comprehensive definition of "financial markets participant" opens the door for the personal liability of directors and managers throughout all the financial markets law.

The first consequence of the new financial markets law is that the law governing New Zealand's capital markets and financial services needs to be approached differently. The legislative past was characterized by a proliferation of regulatory bodies as well as a multitude of statutes with differing scope and objectives. For example, the now repealed Financial Advisers Act 2008 (NZ) was a consumer protection statute. On the other hand, the Securities Act 1978 (NZ) and the Securities Markets Act 1988 (NZ) aimed for investor protection and/or the influx of capital.[4] Deviating objectives influence the regulators' work and may lead to an incoherent application of the relevant statutes. The FMA Act now sets out uniform objectives for the FMA: "to promote and facilitate the development of fair, efficient, and transparent financial markets": s 9. Hence, the new law creates a sole conduct regulator in charge of financial markets law bound to one single objective in the application of all the statutes listed in Schedule 1. This objective sets the baseline for financial markets law in general.

The FMA Act assigns the FMA new powers the former Securities Commission did not possess. The FMA is able to require persons to supply information or give evidence (ss 25 to 28), to enter and search premises, vehicles and things (s 29), to exercise a person's right of action (ss 34 to 38), to represent third parties in representative actions (ss 39 to 40), to make confidentiality orders (ss 44 to 45), to accept enforceable undertakings (ss 46 to 47), to state a case of law to the High Court (s 48), to issue warnings, comments, guidelines and comments (s 9) and to require its warnings to be posted on a relevant person's website (ss 49 to 51). Several of these powers are backed by criminal liability in case of circumvention (s 61). In principle, these tools are now available for application to all the statutes listed in Schedule 1. In this way, the FMA has a wider range of enforcement tools at hand than did, for example, the disestablished Government Actuary in respect of the KiwiSaver Act 2006 (NZ).

It is remarkable that the Takeovers Act 1993 (NZ) is not mentioned in Schedule 1. Takeovers are still regulated by the Takeovers Panel and not by the FMA; they are not part of financial markets law. The Takeovers Panel and the FMA are empowered to assist each other and "may" provide all available information to each other under s 15A of the Takeovers Act (NZ) and under s 30 of the FMA Act. The new law thereby continues the separation between market conduct and takeover regulation that already existed between the Securities Commission and the Takeovers Panel. Notwithstanding that the law relating to takeovers is closely related to financial markets and investor protection, the FMA has no control over its regulation.

On the other hand, the FMA has powers under the Companies Act 1993 (NZ), which directly confer rights to the FMA, allowing it to apply to court to appoint or remove a liquidator (ss 239L, 239R), to apply to court to disqualify directors (s 383) and to prohibit persons from managing companies under certain circumstances such as liquidation (s 385). Like the Takeovers Panel, the Registrar of Companies "may" provide the FMA any information or document that may assist the FMA in the exercise of its functions and duties (s 371A).

In addition, Schedule 1 of the FMA Act empowers the FMA to enforce the Companies Act 1993 (NZ) if the Act relates or applies to financial markets participants. The meaning of the referral seems unclear. It could be interpreted in a wide manner: according to s 4 of the FMA Act, a company that has offered shares to the public is a financial markets participant and accordingly all breaches of the Companies Act 1993 (NZ) by such companies fall under the FMA's enforcement powers. It is unlikely that the FMA has the intention (or the resources) to act as a watchdog for company law in general. It would make sense if the FMA limited its actions to breaches of the company law statute that directly relate to financial markets (for example, breaches of directors' duties that occurred in relation to initial public offerings). Any overlap with the Registrar's functions should be avoided. For a discussion of the FMA, see Phillip Maume, "The Financial Markets Authority: A Model Example of Regulatory Consolidation?" (2013) 25 (3) NZULR 616.

FMA Levy

Financial markets participants are subject to a levy to contribute to the FMA's funding (s 68): see Financial Markets Authority (Levies) Regulations 2012.

The FMC Act 2013

The FMC Act is now in full force.

As stated, the FMC Act replaced the two former principal Acts governing securities regulation in New Zealand: the '78 Act (primary market) and the Securities Markets Act 1988 (secondary market). In this way, a large part of the new financial markets legislation (and hence the new financial markets law in New Zealand that replaces the previous securities regulation regime) is found in the FMC Act: see Schedule 1 of the FMA Act.

We now turn to look at some key parts of the FMC Act in broad overview.

The FMC Act is divided into 9 Parts:

- Part 1 specifies the purposes and objectives of the Act.
- Part 2 provides for fair dealing matters including prohibiting misleading and deceptive conduct in connection with financial products and financial services. This Part of the FMC Act came into force on 1 April 2014 other than ss 23-27 (unsubstantiated representations) and ss 34-37. Sections 23-27 (offers in the course of unsolicited meetings) came into force on 17 June 2014.
- Part 3 deals with the disclosure of offers of financial products. Part 3 provides for the disclosure to investors in relation to certain offers of financial products. Schedule 1 of the Act contains the relevant disclosure requirements. Part 3 also deals with the advertisements for those offers and ongoing disclosure to investors.
- Part 4 provides for the governance of regulated products including debt securities, managed investment products and powers of intervention to enable the supervision of debt securities. This part also specifies the duties of issuers of all regulated products as well as the duties of persons associated with regulated products to make protected disclosures.
- Part 5 provides for matters relating to dealing in financial products including prohibiting insider trading and market manipulation. It also deals with continuous disclosure by listed issuers. New Subparts 5A and 5B contain the amended financial advisers regime.
- Part 6 regulates certain financial markets services, including the licensing of certain financial market service providers.
- Part 7 provides for financial reporting obligations. A new subpart, in effect as of October 2022, deals with climate related disclosures.
- Part 8 provides for enforcement and liability matters. Subpart 1 details the FMA's enforcement powers. Subpart 2 details the High Court's enforcement powers. Subpart 3 contains civil liability provisions. Civil liability orders are available for a contravention or involvement in a contravention of a civil liability provision. Orders that may be made comprise: a declaration of contravention, a pecuniary penalty order, a compensatory order and "other civil liability orders under section 497". A wide range of civil liability provisions are listed in s 485. For example, a Part 5 market provision is a civil liability provision. The purpose of a declaration of contravention is to enable an applicant for a compensatory order or other civil liability order under s 497 to rely on the declaration of contravention. Compensatory orders are provided for in s 494. Subpart 4 of Part 8 is entitled, "Offences relating to defective disclosure and false statements". Criminal liability attaches to the making of defective disclosure in a PDS or register entry or in any other provisions relating to defective disclosure. There is also a general offence for false and misleading statements: s 512.

- Part 9 provides for regulations and exemptions, including powers to prescribe matters relating to the form and content of product disclosure statements, and powers of the FMA to designate financial products and offers, and to grant exemptions, where this is necessary or desirable.

The FMC Act is complemented by the Financial Market Conduct Regulations 2014.

Alignment with the Australian Law

While the Act in some respects largely restates and consolidates New Zealand's current primary and secondary markets laws, it represents a significant shift towards the Australian legislative model. The FMC Act is modeled closely on Australian equivalent legislation and contains direct references to cognate Australian legislation. For example, s 39 of the FMC Act states as follows: "an offer of financial products for issue requires disclosure to an investor under this Part unless exclusion under Part 1 of Schedule 1 applies". This section is drawn from s 706 of the Australian Corporations Act which deals with offers of securities for issue that require disclosure to investors and, like s 39, defines these by reference to other provisions in the Act. Similar references to the Australian Corporations Act can be found throughout the FMC Act. The alignment with or borrowing from Australian law evident in the FMC Act flows from the Australia-New Zealand Closer Economic Relations Trade Agreement (ANZCERTA) and the downstream Memorandum of Understanding on Business Law Co-ordination between Australia and New Zealand: See G. Walker, "The CER Agreement and Trans-Tasman Business Law Coordination: From Soft Law Approach to Hard Law Outcome" in Jianfu Chen and Gordon Walker (eds) Balancing Act (Federation Press, 2004), 75. The broad policy aim is a single economic market as between New Zealand and Australia.

Key Aspects of the FMC Act

We now turn to outline at some key parts of the FMC Act in broad overview. Here, it is important to note that some changes have been made via regulation: see Financial Markets Conduct Regulations 2014.

Part 1, FMC Act—Preliminary Provisions

Part 1 of the FMC Act comprises ss 1-16. These sections state the main and additional purposes of the legislation, provide an overview of the Act, and contain the interpretation provisions.

Purpose: Sections 3-4 state the main and additional purposes of the Act. The main purposes provision (s 3) largely repeats the purposes of the FMA Act as contained in ss 8 and 9 (1) (a) of the FMA Act. Section 4 (a)-(d) of the FMC Act states additional purposes: for example, s 4 (c) states that an additional purpose is to "avoid unnecessary compliance costs". The new exclusions from Part 3 of the FMC Act (Disclosure of offers of financial products) are designed to facilitate capital raising and cut compliance costs. These exclusions from the ambit of Part 3 of the FMC Act are discussed below.

Overall, s 4 comprises a set of overarching guidelines that are of relevance to the FMA when exercising its discretion and the judiciary when considering the legislation.

Definition of Financial Product: The gateway to the '78 Act was the definition of a security. The gateway to the FMC Act is the definition of a "financial product", a term borrowed for the cognate Australian legislation. The term "financial service" has the same meaning as in the FSP Act and includes a "market service": s 6 FMC Act. Section 7 of the FMC Act provides the meaning of "financial product", namely: debt security; equity security, managed investment product or a derivative. These terms are further defined in ss 8-10. The term "managed investment product" means an interest in a "managed investment scheme" as defined in s 9 of the FMC Act. It replaces the category of "participatory security" in the '78 Act. Examples of a managed investment scheme are superannuation schemes or unit trusts. The three core elements of a managed investment scheme are stated in s 9 (1) (a)-(c) of the FMC Act. In summary, they are:

- The purpose or effect of the scheme is to enable persons taking part in the scheme to contribute money to acquire interests in the scheme;
- The interests acquired are rights to financial benefits produced principally by the efforts of another person under the scheme; and
- Interest holders do not have day-to-day control over the operation of the scheme.

There are carve-outs for schemes where investors have a direct interest in property, discretionary investment management schemes and certain types of insurance contracts: see s 9.

Act binds the Crown: Section 15 states that the FMC Act binds the Crown.

Application of Act: Section 16 states that the provisions of the Act have effect despite anything to the contrary in any other enactment. These words merely restate a well-known principle of statutory interpretation but presumably are included for the avoidance of doubt. There is no contracting out.

Part 2, FMC Act—Fair dealing

Background:

Most sections of Part 2 of the Act became effective on 1 April 2014.

A short discussion of the background to Part 2 of the FMC Act is required. Part 1 of the Fair Trading Act 1986 (NZ) (FT Act) contains provisions on misleading and deceptive conduct, false representations, and unfair practices. Sections 9-14 of this Act were explicitly based on cognate provisions contained in Part V of the Australian Trade Practices Act 1974. Thus, s 9 of the FT Act was based on s 52 of the Australian Trade Practices Act 1974 (TPA) and reads as follows: "No person shall, in trade, engage in conduct that is misleading or deceptive or is likely to mislead or deceive."

Section 9 of the FT Act was held to apply to dealings in shares. Jagwar Holdings Limited & Anor v. Julian & Ors (1992) 6 NZCLC 68, 040 (HC) involved the sale and purchase of shares. Jagwar alleged breach of s 9 of the FT Act. It was held that the relevant directors' statements were made in the course of trade and the representations made were false and misleading: see also De Alwis v. Luvit Foods International Ltd (2007) 10 NZCLC 264, 304. In the course of his judgment in Jagwar, Thorp J (at p 57) cited the decision of the New Zealand Court of Appeal in Taylor Bros Ltd v. Taylors Group Ltd [1988] 2 NZLR 1 where it was said that, "[t]he whole New Zealand Act [the FT Act] is largely derived from Part V of the Australian Act . . . and our courts are thus fortunate in being able to profit from Australian judicial authority and experience in applying the New Zealand Act. Consistency in the application of the legislation in the CER countries [a reference to the Closer Economic Relations Treaty between Australia and New Zealand] should clearly be aimed at so far as reasonably practicable." Thorp J relied on Australian case law in reaching his decision.

In summary, the FT Act was based on Australian legislation and the New Zealand courts will refer to Australian judicial consideration as highly persuasive precedent when interpreting the New Zealand FT Act. Further, the statement from Taylor's case cited above indicates the New Zealand courts will aim for consistency with Australian judicial consideration of this legislation because of the CER treaty (in passing, note this dictum anticipates the single economic market policy by over 20 years).

In Australia, the TPA applies to transactions made before December 31, 2010. The Australian Consumer Law (ACL) which replaced the TPA is contained in Schedule 2 of the Competition and Consumer Law Act 2010 (Cth.). Since 1998, s 52 of the TPA has not applied to conduct in relation to financial services and its successor, s 18 of the Australian Consumer Law specifically excludes conduct in relation to financial services by virtue of s 131A (1) of the ACL. Where conduct concerns financial services or a financial product, the relevant provisions are as follows:

- Section 12DA of the Australian Securities and Investment Commission Act 2011 (Cth.) provides that, "[a] person must not, in trade or commerce, engage in conduct, in relation to financial services that is misleading or deceptive or is likely to mislead or deceive."
- Section 1041H of the Corporations Act 2001 (Cth.) states that, "[a] person must not, in this jurisdiction, engage in conduct, in relation to a financial product or a financial service, that is misleading or deceptive or is likely to mislead or deceive."

There is significant overlap between these two Australian provisions.

In New Zealand, s 5A of the FT Act 1984 was inserted in 2008. The section says that there is no liability under the FT Act if a person would not be liable under the '78 Act or the SMA. However, the FMRA Act repealed the s 5A carve out and inserted new sections 48P to 48S into the FT Act. Section 48P of the FT Act states that the FMA's consent must be obtained before the Commerce Commission (the body that administers the FT Act) can commence proceedings under the FT Act in respect of financial products or services. The legislative intent is that misleading and deceptive conduct involving financial products or services should be dealt with under the FMC Act with the FMA as lead regulator.

A guide to the interpretation of Part 2 is contained in s 18. It states that "financial product" has the meaning set out in s 7 and any other class or classes of financial products falling within the meaning of s 5 of the now repealed Financial Advisers Act 2008 as declared by regulations for the purposes of that provision. This provision extends the reach of Part 2. Section 18 (2) defines the term, "trade". It means, "any trade, business, industry, profession, occupation, activity of commerce or undertaking".

Sections 19-22 of the FMC Act are based on ss 9, 10, 11 and 13 of the FT Act. The relevance of noting this point is that ss 19-22 are ultimately based on the cognate Australian TPA sections and hence the Australian case-law is directly relevant: see the discussion in Gill North, Company Disclosure in Australia (Lawbook, 2013) at Chapter 19.

Section 19 prohibits misleading or deceptive conduct generally. Section 19 (1) states that a person must not, in trade, engage in conduct that is misleading or deceptive or likely to mislead or deceive in relation to any dealing in financial products or the supply of financial services. As with s 13 of the SMA, the prohibition catches dealing in listed or non-listed securities (in this instance, because of the wide definition of financial product). Section 19 (2) contains a similar prohibition in relation to "quoted" financial products and here the dealing need not be "in trade". The s 19 prohibition is a powerful investor protection mechanism applying to conduct by issuers and other market participants. In this regard, the FMA will be able to use its new arsenal of powers in Part 8 of the FMC Act to enforce compliance. Section 20 prohibits conduct that is liable to mislead the public as to the nature, characteristics, suitability for a purpose or quantity of financial products. Section 21 repeats the same prohibition in relation to financial services.

Section 22 contains a prohibition on false or misleading representations in relation to financial products and financial services.

Section 23 prohibits unsubstantiated representations in respect of financial products or services. Sections 23-27 came into force on 17 June 2014.

Sections 34-37 contain provisions restricting offers of financial products during unsolicited meetings. These provisions are designed to strike at "boiler room" sales and the like.

Liability for breach of the fair dealing provisions is contained in s 38 which provides for civil liability including pecuniary penalties. A Part 2 Fair Dealing provision is a civil liability provision under Part 8, Subpart 3 of the FMC Act and compensatory orders are available: see s 484.

Part 3: Disclosure of offers of financial products

Part 3 of the FMC Act introduces new mechanisms for raising funds in the primary market. The former "offer to the public" concept appearing in the '78 Act has been abandoned. In its place is a regime that draws heavily on the cognate provisions in Chapter 6D (Fundraising) of the Australian Corporations Act 2001. The Australian provisions contain "bright line" rules that say disclosure to investors is required (s 706) unless ss 708 or 708A say otherwise. The key carve outs appear in s 708 and include small scale offerings, sophisticated investors and so on.

Part 3, Subpart 1—Application

Section 39 of the FMC Act says that an offer of financial products for issue requires disclosure to an investor under this Part unless a specified exclusion under Part 1 of Schedule 1 applies. The term "financial product" is defined in s 7. The exclusions in Schedule 1 include the following:

- Offers to wholesale investors as defined in Cl 36: This category is an aggregation of former exclusions under the 78 Act and covers investment businesses, person engaged in investment activities, "large" persons, government agencies, "eligible" investors and persons making an investment of $750,000 or more.
- Offers for persons in close relationships: This category comprises close business associates and relatives. There is an exhaustive definition of close business associates which will (presumably) render the earlier case-law nugatory.
- Offers through licensed intermediaries and DIMS licensees.
- Offers under employee share purchase schemes.
- Offers to person under control: This exclusion applies to entities controlled in any of the above categories.
- Small offers: This exclusion follows the cognate Australian exclusion known as the "20/12" rule. It enables issuers of debt and equity securities to raise funds up to $2 million in any 12-month period from 20 investors.

Schedule 1 of the FMC Act is entitled, "Provisions relating to when disclosure is required and exclusions for offers and services" and deals with definitions and the requisite certificates to attract the exclusions for offers and services. Limited disclosure requirements attach to use of the exclusionary provisions: see Cl 26, Schedule 1, FMC Act. Many of these exclusions came into effect on 1 April 2014. These include:

- Offers of financial products through licensed intermediaries: FMC Act, Sch. 1, Cl 6. This exclusion enabled the mechanism of crowd funding.
- Offers under employee share purchase schemes: FMC Act, Sch. 1, Cl 8.
- Offers of financial products under dividend reinvestment plans: FMZ Act, Sch. 1, Cl. 10.

- Small offers: issuers are able to raise up to $2 million within any 12-month period from up to 20 investors: FMC Act, Sch. 1, Cl. 1214.
- Exclusion for quoted financial products: This exclusion enables listed issuers to issue equity or debt securities in the same class as already listed securities with minimal documentation thereby greatly reducing compliance costs. For example, by utilizing this exclusion, a rights issue will no longer require a prospectus.

Part 3, Subpart 2—Procedures for making regulated offers

This subpart of the FMC Act sets out the new procedures for fundraising. A regulated offer is defined in s 41 as an offer of financial products where the offer requires disclosure. Section 48 says that a regulated offer must not be made unless a product disclosure statement (PDS) has been prepared and lodged with the RoC. In addition, the offeror must supply the RoC with any required information for the online Register of Offers of Financial Products (Offers Register). The latter requirement is further elaborated in Schedule 2 of the FMC Act. In brief, the Offers Register is a new register to be maintained by the RoC. Two registers are contemplated: the register of offers of financial products and the register of managed investment schemes: see FMA Act, Sch. 2. These registers are open to the public and amount to an investor protection mechanism.

According to s 49, the purpose of the PDS is "to provide certain information that is likely to assist a prudent but non-expert person to decide whether or not to acquire the financial products." Section 49 repeats the language of s 38D of the 78 Act which describes the purpose of an investment statement.

The detailed contents of the PDS appear in Part 3 of the Financial Market Conduct Regulations 2014. Section 57 of the FMC Act provides for the content and presentation of the PDS and register entry. It says that the PDS must contain all the information required by the regulations. Section 61 states that the PDS must be presented in "a clear, concise, and effective manner". Section 57 (1) (b) (ii) states that the register entry must contain "all material information relating to the regulated offer that is not contained in the PDS."

The procedure for making an offer under the FMC is as follows: issuer must prepare and lodge a PDS with the RoC and supply the requisite information for the register entry. The PDS need not have a mandatory expiry date: ss 57 and 84. Once the PDS is lodged, the RoC must notify the FMA in order that the FMA can consider the PDS. At this point, a departure from the previous law appears. Under the 78 Act, a prospectus was registered by the RoC pursuant to s 42 and a certificate of registration was issued by the RoC. Immediately thereafter, the RoC notified the FMA of the registration to enable a further review. Under the FMC Act, however, the PDS is "lodged" with the RoC. Issuer is then given a certificate of lodgment by the RoC: s 75. Immediately thereafter, the RoC must notify the FMA pursuant to s

64 in order that the FMA may consider whether the offer is in compliance with the Act. A waiting period of five days from the lodgment of the offer applies before an offeror can accept applications although the FMA can extend this period. At first glance, there appear to be uncertainties with this procedure that require clarification. Note, however, that all subscription monies are required to be held in trust: s 87. Where there has been a breach of the s 50 prohibition (disclosure must be given if offer requires disclosure), then the offeree has a right of withdrawal and to have the money repaid: s. 54. Once a notice of withdrawal is given to the offeror, the offeror must ensure that the money is repaid as soon as practicable: s 55. This new regime replaces the void irregular allotment regime that appeared in ss 37 onwards in the 78 Act.

Section 82 contains a prohibition on false or misleading statements, omissions, and new matters requiring disclosure. The prohibition goes to offending statements in a PDS, any application form that accompanies the PDS or a register entry that is false or misleading or is likely to mislead. Breach of s 82 gives rise to a criminal sanction—see Part 8, Subpart 4.

Part 3, Subpart 3—Advertising

Sections 89-94 constitute the new advertising regime that applies to issuers. A PDS that has been lodged and a copy of the register entry may be distributed. Section 91 deals with advertising before a PDS is lodged. Certain, "reasonably prominent" statements as required by s 94 must appear in any such advertisement.

Part 3, Subpart 4—Ongoing disclosure and updating of registers

Sections 95-98 enable the updating of the offers register with new information. The register of offers of financial products means the register provided for in the FMC Act, Sch. 2.

Part 3, Subpart 5—Civil liability for contraventions of Part 3

This part begins by setting up a contraction for all the provisions in this part giving rise to civil liability. They are collectively known as "Part 3 offer provisions": s 101 (1). Breaches of these provisions may give rise to civil penalties. These are provided for in Part 8, Subpart 3 of the FMC Act.

§ NZ:7 History and principal legislation—Companies legislation

Historically, New Zealand company law followed United Kingdom models. So, for example, the Companies Act 1955 (NZ) followed the UK Act of 1948. However, New Zealand company law legislation was comprehensively overhauled in 1993.[1] The new legislation drew on Canadian and U.S. models.[2] The package of legislation introduced in 1993 included: the Companies Act 1993; the now repealed Financial Reporting Act 1993; the Takeovers Act 1993; the Receiverships Act 1993 and the Companies Reregistration Act 1993. Except for the Takeovers Act 1993 (which came into full effect in 2001), all of these Acts came into force on 1 July, 1994 and all companies fell under this regime as of 30 June 1997. Further, the registration distinction between private companies, public companies and public listed companies deriving from the Companies Act 1955 was finally abolished by the Companies Act 1993 on 30 June 1997. This change greatly simplifies the establishment and maintenance of the electronic registry. To generalize, the only meaningful distinction between companies for our purposes goes to reporting and here the principal distinction is between companies that issue securities (for example, companies listed on NZX markets such as the NZSX) and those that do not. The leading topical text on New Zealand company is Susan Watson and Lynne Taylor, Corporate Law in New Zealand (Wellington: Thomson Reuters, 2018). In passing, note that the MBIE commenced a major review of the Companies Act in 2024—see further new developments.

§ NZ:8 Introduction of the investment statement

In 1996, changes to the law relating to the offering of securities were made in New Zealand. These changes came into effect on 1 October 1997. An important change to the Securities Act 1978 was the optional requirement for an investment statement to accompany an offer of securities. The investment statement was replaced in the FMC Act by the product disclosure statement (PDS) in effect as of December 2014. The PDS has a similar purpose to the investment statement: see s 49 FMC Act.

§ NZ:9 Organizations involved in securities regulation—Financial Markets Authority (FMA)

The FMA is a creation of the FMA Act and is the chief governmental agency with responsibility for securities regulation. The FMA's powers are discussed in more detail below.

§ NZ:10 Organizations involved in securities regulation—New Zealand Exchange Limited (NZX)

voted in favor of the demutualization of the former New Zealand Stock Exchange. Enabled by the New Zealand Stock Exchange Restructuring Act 2002, the NZSE became a limited liability company—NZSE Limited—with its own constitution on 1 January 2003. On 30 May 2003, NZSE Limited announced a further change of name to New Zealand Exchange Limited, trading as NZX, as part of a rebranding exercise. (Thus, the new website of the NZX is www.nzx.com and that website has a new format.) The NZX listed on its own stock market—the NZSX—on June 4, 2003. This resulted in a series of name changes—for example, the former NZSE Listing Rules are now known as the NZX Listing Rules. The NZX provides the principal markets for securities trading in New Zealand. The NZX is largely a self-regulatory organization although the FMA has a role in regulating its activities. The relationship between listed companies and the NZX is primarily contractual and is governed by the NZX Listing Rules, which are incorporated into the Listing Agreement made between the NZX and listed companies. However, the FMA has statutory power to enforce compliance by a listed company where the NZX's continuous disclosure listing rules apply to that listed company. The relevant listing rule is Listing Rule 3.1. (once listed issuer becomes aware of material information concerning itself, it must immediately release that information to the NZX) and this rule is given statutory force by s 270 of the FMC Act.

§ NZ:11 Organizations involved in securities regulation—The Companies Office and the Registrar of Companies

In New Zealand, the Ministry of Business, Innovation and Employment (MBIE) has overall responsibility for companies. This responsibility is discharged by its Business Services Branch. The Business Services Branch of the MBIE is headed by a Deputy Secretary with responsibility for the Companies Office.

The Registrar of Companies (RoC) heads the Companies Office. The Registrar of Companies is a position created by statute. The Registrar is the principal regulator of all companies in New Zealand. The role and powers of the Registrar are contained in Part XX of the Companies Act 1993.

Structure of the Companies Office

As stated, the Registrar of Companies heads the Companies Office. Immediately beneath the Registrar is the Group Manager of Business Registries. There are five main operational units beneath the National Manager of Business Registries:

- The National Enforcement Unit: The manager of the National Enforcement Unit has responsibility for prosecutions and the director prohibitions. This unit is based in Auckland.
- Central Region: The manager of this unit has responsibility for client services and the insurance and superannuation unit.
- Internet Support: The manager of this unit has responsibility for internet support and online promotions.

- Contact Centre and Southern Region: The manager of this unit has responsibility for the contact Centre, client services and quality control.
- Northern Region: The manager of this unit has responsibility for legal services, client services, compliance, other registers, document processing and document imaging.

Main functions of the Companies Office

Details of the organizational structure, functions and legislation administered by the Companies Office can be found at the website of the Companies Office: www.companies.govt.nz.

One of the principal functions of the Companies Office is to maintain registers containing information about companies that can be accessed by members of the public.

Some of the following information about the function of the Companies Office is extracted from the Companies Office, Online with NZ Business: Strategic Business Plan 2005-06. This booklet has not been updated.

The Companies Office is responsible for the provision of services relating to the registration of companies and other corporate entities and public access to corporate and securities information. The Companies Office has compliance and enforcement functions under the Companies Act, the FMC Act, the Corporations (Investigation and Management) Act 1989, the Financial Reporting Act 1993 and the Friendly Societies and Credit Unions Act 1982.

Corporate body registers maintained by the Companies Office: The Companies Office maintains and manages several registers including the following:

- New Zealand and overseas companies
- financial service providers
- cooperative companies
- incorporated societies
- industrial and provident societies
- limited partnerships and overseas limited partnerships
- charitable trusts
- unit trusts
- friendly societies and credit unions
- superannuation schemes
- contributory mortgage brokers
- building societies
- retirement villages
- motor vehicle traders
- personal property securities
- auditors register

Administration of the registries falls into four areas:

- new registrations

- maintenance of registered information
- removal of defunct entities, and
- ensuring compliance with statutory disclosure obligations.

The Companies Office monitors compliance and timeframes for filing changes to registered information, as prescribed by the associated legislation.

The information held on the registers is available for public search. Searches can be conducted online via the Companies Office website or at the regional office where the company is registered.

Since May 2002, the Companies Office has maintained the Personal Property Securities Register. This register is a centralized, fully electronic register that creates a single procedure for the creation and registration of security interests in personal property. This register was provided for in the Personal Property Securities Act 1999.

In August 2010, the Companies Office introduced the Financial Services Providers Register. The register was established in accordance with the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 (FSP Act). The FSP Act came into effect on 1 July 2011 and established a compulsory registration system for financial service providers. It was amended by the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019. Thus, all financial service providers must be formally registered under the FSP Act and are also expected to comply with the care, diligence, and skill provisions now contained in Part 5A of the FMC Act.

To qualify for registration, financial service providers are generally required to be members of an industry-run dispute resolution scheme or an alternative reserve scheme established by the Ministry of Consumer Affairs.

The register includes information about financial service providers, the type or types of financial service for which the financial service provider is registered and the name and business address of the approved dispute resolution scheme or the reserve scheme of which the financial service provider is a member.

Securities and corporate compliance: Several statutory responsibilities in relation to the supervision of corporate bodies and issuers of securities have been transferred from the Companies Office to the FMA. The Securities and Corporate Compliance Unit of the Companies Office ceased to exist on 1 May 2011 when the FMA came into being. Previous functions carried out by the unit included: market supervision; investigation of non-compliance with various statutory regimes and enforcement of legislation.

The RoC now simply registers prospectuses, but any substantive vetting is carried out by the FMA: see s 45 of the FMC Act.

The Register of Offers of Financial Products (Offers Register) was established by Schedule 2 of the FMC Act and is maintained by the RoC. Two registers have been established with public access to both; the first is the register of offers of financial products and the second is the register of managed investment schemes.

§ NZ:12 Organizations involved in securities regulation—Overseas Investment Act 2005

This legislation is designed to consider proposals concerning investment in New Zealand from overseas. The legislation is relevant to proposals to acquire, for example, more than 25 percent of a company where the value of that company exceeds NZD100 million. Note that the monetary limits are amended from time to time and Regulations and Notices under this Act must be regularly checked.

§ NZ:13 Co-regulation

There are two main co-regulatory organizations in New Zealand with statutory recognition for the purposes of securities regulation: the FMA and the NZX.

Some companies elect to have their securities listed for quotation on the main securities market (NZSX) conducted by the New Zealand Exchange Limited (the NZX). When they do so, they contract with the NZX that they will comply with the NZX Listing Rules. The NZX acts as co-regulator with the FMA in the sense that it has a primary policing function for listed companies' compliance with those rules. However, it is important to remember that the NZX is not a governmental or regulatory agency like the FMA.

Historically, it was the Sharebrokers Amendment Act 1981 that enabled the Stock Exchange Association of New Zealand and each of the then four trading exchanges to form together as a statutory membership-based entity.

In late 2002, members of the New Zealand Stock Exchange (the NZSE) voted in favor of the demutualization of the NZSE. Technological change and competitive pressures drove the change.

Enabled by the New Zealand Stock Exchange Restructuring Act 2002, the NZSE became a limited liability company—NZSE Limited—with its own constitution on 1 January 2003.

On 30 May 2003, NZSE Limited announced a further change of name to New Zealand Exchange Limited, trading as NZX, as part of a re-branding exercise. (Thus, the new website of the NZX is www.nzx.com and that website has a new format.) The NZX listed on its own stock market—the NZSX—on 4 June 2003.

The key rules of the NZX are as follows:

- NZSX /NZDX Listing Rules
- NZAX Listing Rules
- NZX Participants Rules

The Listing Rules were last amended and made effective in July 2024. They can be viewed on the NZX website, available at: https://www.nzx.com/regulation/nzx-rules-guidance.

The main markets now operated by the NZX are as follows:

- The NZSX: The New Zealand Stock Market (the NZSX) is NZX's premier equities market. It features the securities of most of New Zealand's listed companies and several overseas companies. Companies on the NZSX have one of three listing types. The first type is primary listing where NZX is the home exchange and the company abides by NZX Listing Rules. The second type is dual primary listing where the company abides by all NZX Listing Rules as well as its home exchange listing rules. The third type is overseas dual listing where the company abides by a limited number of NZX Listing Rules as well as those of its home exchange. Companies generally quote ordinary shares on the NZSX. They can also quote options, partly paid shares, warrants units, and notes and preference shares with equity-like characteristics. For a company to list on the NZSX, the securities being quoted must have a minimum anticipated market value on initial listing and a specific spread of shareholders.

- The NZDX: The New Zealand Debt Market (the NZDX) offers a range of investment securities, including corporate and government bonds and fixed-income securities.

The NZX Listing Rules

The NZX Listing Rules form part of the listing agreement between the NZX and the listed company. The listing agreement is a private contract. In effect, it provides that the NZX may vary its Listing Rules as it sees fit (subject always to the approval process contained in the FMC Act) and may act unilaterally in relation to exercising its powers to suspend or delist a company. As stated, the latest version of the Listing Rules came into effect in July 2024 and are available at: https://www.nzx.com/regulation/nzx-rules-guidance.

The NZX or a security holder—via the Contracts (Privity) Act 1982—can enforce the Listing Rules. The FMA plays an important role in enforcing the Listing Rules relating to continuous disclosure: see Part 5, Sub-Part 4 of the FMC Act.

Also of relevance here is Part 5, Sub-Part 7 of the FMC Act. This subpart most clearly establishes the new co-regulatory regime for securities regulation in New Zealand. The subpart gives the FMA the power to license markets for trading financial products in New Zealand.

In Australia, the Listing Rules of the Australian Stock Exchange (the ASX) primarily operate as private law that is binding only as a matter of contract between the ASX and the listed company: see CCH Australia, Annotated Listing Rules. However, they do have general statutory force. This is because s 793C of the Corporations Act 2001 gives the courts the power, on the application of ASIC, the ASX or a "person aggrieved", to order any person obliged to comply with the Listing Rules to do so.

The securities market operated by the NZX is a market where buyers and sellers exchange listed securities, and where a company requiring additional capital may issue newly listed securities to prospective buyers. The NZX states that its purpose is to provide and operate an efficient market for the raising of capital for listed companies and the trading of securities, including shares and fixed-interest securities such as bonds and Government stock. These functions and objectives are aspects of the economic role of financial markets. Most micro-economists define an efficient market as one in which the costs of transactions are minimized. The function of the market is also to transfer financial resources from those with surplus funds to those who can use those assets more productively. This function also enhances the risk-bearing capacity of the economy.

§ NZ:14 Co-regulation—Other self-regulatory bodies

Some self-regulatory bodies had a relationship with the former NZSC. They were the Advertising Standards Authority, the Life Offices Association of New Zealand, the New Zealand Thoroughbred Breeders' Association Inc., and Harness Racing New Zealand, and Local Authority and Other Venture Capital Schemes. The former NZSC exempted these organizations and business entities registered with them from compliance with Part II of the 78 Act in respect of share offers to the public overseen by them subject to compliance with an approved Code of Practice.

III. PUBLIC SECURITIES MARKETS

A. HISTORY

§ NZ:15 History*

New Zealand's first stock exchanges were established during the gold boom of the late 1860s in Auckland, Thames, Dunedin and Reefton to trade shares in gold mining ventures. As gold mining declined, trading on the Reefton and Thames exchanges diminished but the Auckland, Dunedin, Wellington, and Christchurch exchanges grew along with commercial development in those centers.

Information announcements to shareholders and interested parties were not a feature of these early exchanges. The situation changed in 1872 when twelve brokers formed the Auckland Sharebrokers' Association, which implemented a system facilitating the transfer of shares and announcements to clients throughout New Zealand.

In 1897, the Auckland Sharebrokers' Association was re-named the Auckland Stock Exchange. In 1910, the local exchanges established common rules and, in 1915, the Stock Exchange Association of New Zealand was formed. This Association comprised the four main centers (Auckland, Wellington, Christchurch, and Dunedin) and Thames and eventually developed into the NZSE, which operated under the authority of the Sharebrokers Act 1908-1981 (NZ). The NZSE operated regional exchanges in the four main centers until 1989—each regional exchange had a trading floor and was responsible for its own operations. In 1989 significant changes took place: the NZSE made a comprehensive review of its management structure, members voted to dispense with separate regional exchanges, and the management of the trading floors became the responsibility of the Board of the Exchange. As stated earlier, the NZSE demutualized and was renamed as the NZX in 2003. After that event, the framework for regulating and monitoring the conduct of NZX market participants was changed.

Floor trading ceased on the Dunedin Exchange in 1990 and on the Wellington, Auckland, and Christchurch Exchanges in 1991. Subsequently, electronic trading commenced via computer screens located in the offices of each member. Today, the NZX operates a continuous auction market during designated trading hours of 9:30 am to 3:30 pm (with an hour of pre-opening starting at 8:30 pm and half an hour of adjustment until 4 pm). The pre-opening session is used to establish opening prices for the day. Automatic trading was performed by the SEATS system. On September 10, 1999, the SEATS system was replaced by a modern alternative system called FASTER Trading. By July 2000, an open interface feature (Application Programming Interface or API) on the new system allowed buy and sell orders received from investors over the Web to be automatically routed through broker computer systems to the NZSE as it then was (Straight through Processing or STP). The present position regarding operations is described below.

The Role of NZX Clearing

Once a trade is executed on an NZX market, the Clearing House (NZC) becomes the central counterparty to both the buy and sell side of the trade through the process of novation. This structure makes the settlement system more efficient by allowing clearing Participants to net the entirety of their buy and sell trades across each day, regardless of the various counterparties involved. It also improves the integrity of the settlement system because as a central counterparty clearer, NZC, guarantees delivery of cash and securities, even if the underlying counterparty were to fail to deliver.

The Clearing House (NZC):

- Captures, validates and novates trades to act as a counterparty to every trade on NZX's markets
- Performs risk management functions in line with global standards
- Nets Clearing Participants' settlement obligations (BIS Model 3)
- Acts as a central counterparty for all securities lending transactions initiated through the Securities Depository
- Provides detailed reporting to Clearing Participants relating to their transactions in the NZX Clearing System.

The Securities Depository (NZD):

- Provides a settlement facility for all trades cleared via the Clearing House
- Holds securities in the legal name of New Zealand Depository Nominee Limited (Nominee)
- Facilitates Real-Time Gross Settlement (RTGS) functionality (BIS Model 1) of OTC trades
- Provides Legal Title Transfer via direct registry connectivity with share registries LINK Market Services and Computershare, facilitating real time securities lodge and uplift
- Provides a real time securities lodge and uplift process with NZClear
- Facilitates online shunting via Computershare
- Allows for cash transfers between Participants
- Offers an optional Securities Lending facility
- Corporate actions notification and processing
- Provides report facilities detailing account balances, corporate actions and settlement transactions to its Participants.

Technology/Systems

NZX Clearing operates the BaNCS Market Infrastructure platform ("BaNCS") provided by Tata Consultancy Services. BaNCS interfaces with several NZX systems and Participant connectivity is available through 15022 messaging over TCP/IP or the SWIFT network or via a web-based user interface.

The system also operates a direct connection to NZClear via the SWIFT network to ensure participants can seamlessly transfer securities between the NZX Clearing Depository and the NZClear system operated by RBNZ.

B. FUNCTIONS AND OBJECTIVES OF THE NZX

§ NZ:16 Overview

The NZSE (the predecessor to the NZX) was established by the Sharebrokers' Amendment Act 1981 (NZ) as the successor to the Stock Exchange Association of New Zealand. The Act empowered the NZSE to make rules regarding listing and trading on the NZSE and governing the conduct of its members and their businesses. The general functions and powers of the NZSE were contained in s. 4 of that Act:

- to operate a national stock exchange
- to promote and specify the conditions and terms for the listing and trading of securities on its exchange
- to regulate and promote uniformity in the conduct of its members and of business by its members
- to promote the interests of its members and members of the public in relation to the listing, underwriting, and marketing of securities.

This law was repealed with the introduction of the Securities

Markets Act 1988 (effective 2002). The position under this repealed Act was that Part 2 (entitled "Disclosure") and Part 2 B of the SMA (entitled "Registered Markets") provided the principal legislative basis for the external regulation of the NZX by the FMA within the co-regulatory scheme for New Zealand's securities markets. Under the FMC Act, the legislative basis appears in Part 5, Sub-Part 7 entitled, "Licensing of markets for trading financial products".

The FMC Act contains provisions regulating the establishment and operation of licensed markets. Under the FMC Act, a corporate body cannot hold itself out as a licensed market operator unless it holds a financial product market license. Further, the FMC Act imposes restrictions on persons operating a licensed market. An organization must, among other things, have its market rules approved by the FMA.

The Act also includes provisions relating to the imposition of a control limit (which is the highest percentage of voting rights in the company that may be held or controlled by any person) on a registered exchange: see s 344 of the FMC Act. NZX has a 10 percent control limit included in its constitution.

Once an exchange is licensed it must operate its securities markets in accordance with its rules. Any changes to those rules go through a statutory approval or disallowance process, depending on the nature of the proposed rule changes.

As a licensed market operator, NZX also assumes several reporting obligations to the FMA under Part 5, Sub-Part 8 of the FMC Act. The FMA also has monitoring powers over NZX. The first oversight review of the NZX was undertaken in 2005 under the repealed SMA.

Under the FMC Act, NZX must:

- notify the FMA when it takes any disciplinary action for breach of its rules;
- notify the FMA when it knows or suspects that a person has committed, is committing or is likely to commit a significant contravention of NZX's conduct rules or certain laws;
- give any material information disclosed to it under its listing rules to the FMA; and
- provide information, assistance, and access to its facilities to the FMA or Takeovers Panel where such information, assistance and access is required to assist those bodies to discharge their functions.

In recognition of the special importance afforded to the continuous disclosure provisions in NZX's Listing Rules, NZX must consider any submissions that the FMA may make in considering applications for determination of the Continuous Disclosure Listing Rules found in section 3.1 of the NZX Listing Rules: see s 359 of the FMC Act.

Disclosure Provisions of the FMC Act

Part 5, Subpart 4 of the FMC Act contains provisions for continuous disclosure by listed issuers. Section 270 says that listed issuers must disclose in accordance with listing rules if continuous disclosure listing rules apply. Continuous disclosure provisions are described in section 271 of the FMC Act as provisions that require a listed issuer that is a party to a listing agreement with a licensed market operator (i.e., NZX) to notify information about events and matters as they arise for the purpose of that information being made available to participants in the licensed market. Under this subpart, the Listing Rules of the NZX in respect of continuous disclosure (as contained in NZX Listing Rule 3.1) are given statutory force and the FMA is given consequential enforcement powers.[1]

Part 5 Subpart 5 of the FMC Act deals with the disclosure of interests of substantial security holders in listed issuers.[2]

Licensing of Market Operators under the FMC Act

Part 5, Subpart 7 of the FMC Act regulates the licensing, conduct and control of market operators. Section 301 of the FMC Act makes provision for a body corporate to apply to become a registered exchange. The NZX is a licensed market operator. Section 327 of the FMC Act states that a licensed market operator must operate its markets with "market rules" that contain required matters and have been approved under section 331 of the FMC Act.

Monitoring Provisions of the FMC Act

Sections 337-343 of the FMC Act are entitled "Monitoring of market operator obligations". These sections require the market operator to provide a compliance report to the FMA and empower the FMA to undertake obligations reviews.

Comparison with former law

Former section 7 of the repealed Sharebrokers Amendment Act 1981 stated that the NZSE should make rules for the conduct of its members and for the conduct of business on its exchange. These rules were not subject to oversight by the NZSE. However, the position now is that the FMA must approve market rules and proposed changes to market rules.

The powers of the NZSE were examined by the Court of Appeal in New Zealand Stock Exchange v. Listed Companies Association Inc. [1984] 1 NZLR 699 (CA), where the Court of Appeal held that the NZSE was neither empowered or required to make statutory rules for listing companies. Hence, the relationship between the NZSE and listed companies was purely contractual. This meant that the NZSE had the ability to vary its Listing Rules as it saw fit and might act arbitrarily in relation to exercising its powers to suspend or delist a company. In the Court's view, the NZSE was not subject to administrative law remedies under the Judicature Amendment Act 1972 (NZ) since the relationship between the NZSE and the listed company lay in contract. In the result, the NZSE had contractual relationships with listed companies and statutory relationships with members under s. 7 of this Act. Because New Zealand made no provision for statutory control over the Listing Rules, the NZSC had no power to enforce them. The NZSE or a security holder—via the Contracts (Privity) Act 1982 (NZ)—had the ability to enforce the Listing Rules.[3]

The changes introduced by the FMC Act necessarily imply that the New Zealand Stock Exchange Case is no longer good law. This is because: (a) the NZX is now required to seek approval for its Listing Rules and any proposed changes to them; (b) the relationship between the NZX and listed issuers is now regulated by contract (the Listing Agreement) and legislation (the FMC Act) and; (c) the FMA now has the power to enforce listing rules relating to continuous disclosure. For guidance as to how New Zealand courts might interpret the new regime, see Australian Corporations Law: Principles and Practice, Vol. 3 (Sydney: Butterworths) at paragraph 10.1.0940 under the heading "Enforcement of ASX Listing Rules".

Economic function of securities market

The NZX operates a market where buyers and sellers exchange listed securities, and where a company requiring additional capital may issue newly listed securities to prospective buyers. The NZX provides and operates an efficient market for the raising of capital for listed companies and the trading of securities, including shares and fixed interest securities such as bonds and Government stock. These functions are aspects of the economic role of financial markets. Most micro-economists define an efficient market as one in which the costs of transactions are minimized. The function of the market is also to transfer financial resources from those with surplus funds to those who can use those assets more productively. This function also enhances the risk bearing capacity of the economy. In such wealth transfer (an aspect of allocative efficiency), two classifications of the share market need to be considered—the primary and the secondary market.

§ NZ:17 Primary market

The primary or capital market is the market where companies sell new issues of securities to acquire new capital. Corporate issues include both fixed income (for example, debentures) and equity issues (common stock). This is the only market in which the issuer is directly involved in the transaction. By lowering information and transaction costs, the existence of such markets reduces the cost of raising funds for investment projects. Activity in the common stock primary market is usually considered in two main categories. The first and typically largest category is that of seasoned new issues offered by companies that already trade on the NZX. Here, a company has further need for capital, which it has decided to acquire by increasing the number of shares on issue. The typical mechanism here is a rights issue.

The second major category in the new issues market is generally referred to as the initial public offerings (IPOs) market. An IPO occurs when a company sells common stock to the public for the first time.[1] In most instances the company will previously have been privately held or, in more recent New Zealand history, may have been a state-owned organization. The primary market is principally governed by the FMC Act and the NZX Listing Rules.

Both seasoned and IPO issues are typically underwritten by investment bankers. Underwriters also offer advice to the company on the general characteristics of the issue, pricing, and timing of the offer. Underwriters may also accept responsibility for the sale of the issue, and hence, any shares that the underwriter cannot sell to the public will be acquired by the underwriter at the subscription price.

§ NZ:18 Secondary market

Secondary markets permit trading in existing issues. A secondary market exists where a stock has already been sold to the public and is traded between current and new owners. The proceeds from the sale of stock in the secondary market do not go to the issuing company but to the owner of the security. In New Zealand, the secondary market is principally regulated by the FMC Act.

In combination, the primary and secondary markets form the markets of the NZX—markets where new funds can be raised as well as a market that provides facilities for trading existing shares. The secondary market provides liquidity for stock sold on the primary market. Individuals who have acquired stock in the primary market will at some stage wish to sell. Companies would have great difficulties in selling stock on the primary market if investors were not able to resell in the secondary market.

The secondary equity markets in New Zealand may be broken down into two categories—the licensed markets of the NZX and over the counter (OTC) markets. The OTC markets in New Zealand are negligible and are not discussed in this Booklet. Securities traded on the NZX are sold on an auction basis with investors placing buy and sell orders through brokers and the NZX matching up these orders.

[Section NZ:17]

§ NZ:19 Mutual recognition of securities offerings between Australia and New Zealand

As noted earlier, a mutual recognition regime now operates between Australia and New Zealand whereby issuers can register a prospectus in one jurisdiction and offer in the other jurisdiction subject to the specified requirements.

§ NZ:20 Efficiency of the market

It is generally accepted that financial markets exhibit both operational and allocative efficiency. Operational efficiency refers principally to the cost-effectiveness of various intermediaries (including brokers) in channeling funds between buyers and sellers. The FASTER system (now replaced by Global Vision) increased operational efficiency in New Zealand because trading, settlements and registry functions have been integrated. Transaction costs incurred by investors range from 0.5 to 1.5 percent, depending on the amount of the investment.

Allocative efficiency requires that new information should be available to all investors so that informed and rational decisions can be made. An allocatively efficient market will ensure the immediate and widespread dissemination of accurate information. Furthermore, in an allocatively efficient market all ascertainable information is reflected in securities prices. Maurice Kendall proposed this concept of efficient markets in 1953 when he was unable to find regular price cycles in stock prices. Each series appeared random, whence the introduction of the term "random walk" which merely implies that price changes in a stock are as independent of each other as tosses of a coin.[1]

Subsequent to Kendall's discovery there have been refinements to the concepts of efficient markets, with three different levels of efficiency being proposed by Harry Roberts—weak-form, semi-strong form and strong-form efficiency.[2] Weak-form efficiency assumes that the price of a security will reflect all information contained in the record of past prices. This concept implies no relationship between past and future price changes.

The second level of efficiency, semi-strong form, is where prices reflect not only past prices, but also all other published information. Thus, as new public information, including stock earnings, mergers news and economic news becomes available, stock prices rapidly adjust. The opportunity to take advantage of any such adjustment is minimal—Patell and Wolfson found that most price adjustment occurs within 5 to 10 minutes of the announcement.[3]

Finally, strong-form efficiency holds that prices reflect not just public information but all information including private information. Hence, no group of investors could have monopolistic access to information relevant to the formation of share prices. Any painstaking analysis of companies and the economy would not render a fund manager or investor any additional information. Under strong-form efficiency no group would be able to consistently obtain above-average returns. The NZX is generally accepted by investment analysts to be semi-strong form efficient. This view, however, is challenged by the proponents of behavioral finance.[4]

IV. DISCUSSION OF REGULATIONS REGARDING SUBSTANTIVE SECURITIES MATTERS

§ NZ:21 Establishment, regulation, and organization of Securities Regulating Organizations—The Financial Markets Authority

The Financial Markets Authority (FMA) is the chief governmental agency with responsibility for regulating the financial sector: see generally, Philipp Maume, "The Financial Markets Authority: A Model Example of Regulatory Consolidation?" (2013) (3) NZULR 616-640. As stated, it took over the functions and powers of the former Securities Commission (NZSC) and the office of the Government Actuary in 2011. The FMA derives its functions and powers from the Financial Markets Authority Act 2011. This Act came into force on 1 May 2011 and had the effect of establishing the FMA as of this date. As a result, any powers of the Securities Commission as of 1 May 2011 have been transferred to the FMA. The FMA also has new and enhanced powers: see Philipp Maume and Gordon Walker, "Enforcing Financial Markets Law in New Zealand" [2013] NZ Law Rev 263-300.

The Financial Markets Authority Act 2011 sets out the main objectives and functions of the FMA. The Act comprises four parts.

- Part 1—Preliminary. This Part specifies the purposes of the Act and deals with matters of interpretation.
- Part 2—Financial Markets Authority. This Part establishes the FMA and describes its functions and objectives. It also contains provisions dealing with the membership of the board of the FMA, divisions of the FMA and FMA meetings.
- Part 3—General Information-gathering and Enforcement Powers. This Part is divided into five Subparts. Subpart 1 defines the information-gathering powers of the FMA. It provides that the FMA has power to obtain information, documents, and evidence. Subpart 2 deals with the sharing of information and documents between the FMA and other law enforcement or regulatory agencies and overseas regulators. Subpart 3 is concerned with representative actions and empowers the FMA to exercise a person's right to bring a civil action against a financial market participant where it considers this to be in the public interest. Subpart 4 is entitled "Other Powers". The FMA may in accordance with this Subpart 4 make confidentiality orders, accept undertakings and state a case for opinion before the High Court. Subpart 5 contains miscellaneous provisions relating to FMA's powers. The enforcement powers of the FMA are discussed in Philipp Maume and Gordon Walker, "Enforcing Financial Markets Law in New Zealand" [2013] NZ Law Rev 263-300.

[3]See J. Patell and M. Wolfson, "Intraday Speed of Adjustment of Stock Prices to Earnings and Dividend Announcements", 13 Journal of Financial Economics 223 (1984).

- Part 4—Miscellaneous Provisions. This Part deals with regulations relating to fees, charges, and costs. It also provided for the disestablishment of the NZSC and the Government Actuary and covers the consequences of such disestablishment. For example, s 72 states that the functions, duties, and powers of the NZSC vest in the FMA to the extent that those functions, duties and powers are consistent with those of the FMA under the Financial Markets Authority Act and other legislation.

The original Schedules 1-3 to the FMA read as follows:

- Schedule 1 to the Act refers to "financial markets legislation" including the:
  - Auditor Regulation Act 2011
  - Financial Advisers Act 2008
  - Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008
  - Parts 4 and 5 and Schedules 1 and 2 of the KiwiSaver Act 2006
  - Securities Act 1978
  - Securities Markets Act 1988
  - Securities Transfer Act 1991
  - Securities Trustees and Statutory Supervisors Act 2011
  - Superannuation Schemes Act 1989
  - Unit Trusts Act 1960
- Schedule 2 covered the FMA's search powers. It has now been repealed. The provisions of Part 4 of the Search and Surveillance Act 2012 apply except for ss 118-9.
- Schedule 3 deals with amendments to other enactments and Schedule 4 sets out the amendments required to replace references to the Securities Commission or Government Actuary with the FMA.

Subsequent to revision, Schedule 1 now reads (in abridged form):

The FMA's structure

The FMA is an independent Crown entity for the purposes of s 7 of the Crown Entities Act 2004. Its main objective is to promote and facilitate the development of fair, efficient, and transparent financial markets. Like the former Securities Commission, the FMA comprises between five and nine members. It can act in divisions of three members. In addition, the Minister of Commerce will be able to appoint up to five associate members for specified matters. This enables the FMA to deal with special requirements arising from its functions or build up expertise in particular areas.

The FMA's functions

While the FMA assumes any powers possessed by its predecessor (the Securities Commission), it also has new and expanded powers by virtue of the FMA itself. Among these powers are the general information-gathering (search and seizure) and enforcement powers contained in Pt 3 and the levy raising power contained in Pt 4 of the FMA Act.

Section 9 of the Act sets out the functions of the FMA. These include:

- to promote the participation of businesses, investors, and consumers in the financial markets;

- to perform and exercise the functions, powers, and duties conferred or imposed on it by or under the financial market's legislation and any other enactments;

- to monitor compliance with, investigate conduct that constitutes or may constitute a contravention of, and enforce specified legislation including the Auditor Regulation Act 2011, the Financial Advisers Act 2008, the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008, the Securities Act 1978 and the Securities Markets Act 1988;

- to monitor compliance with, investigate conduct that constitutes or may constitute a contravention of, and enforce specified legislation including the Companies Act 1993, the Corporations (Investigation and Management) Act 1989, the Co-operative Companies Act 1996, the Financial Reporting Act 1993, Limited Partnerships Act 2008, Pt 5C of the Reserve Bank of New Zealand Act 1989 and the Trustee Companies Act 1967*, to the extent that these Acts apply to "financial markets participants"*. Emphasis added. The latter term is defined in s 4 and encompasses financial advisers and brokers. For implications, see P. Maume and G. Walker, "A New Financial Markets Law for New Zealand" (2011) 29 C&SLJ 455; and

- to monitor and conduct inquiries and investigations into any matter relating to, financial markets or the activities of financial markets participants or of other persons engaged in conduct relating to those markets.

Section 9 (3) of the FMA Act says that the fact that some other person has functions, powers, or duties in relation to financial markets legislation, does not limit or restrict the FMA functions, powers and duties. This sub-section is explicitly designed to deal with regulatory overlap or fragmentation.

The FMA's statutory powers

The FMA takes over all powers of the Securities Commission except where the FMA Act otherwise provides: s 72(1) (a) of the FMA Act.

- General grant of power: The FMA can do anything that a natural person of full age and capacity can do, provided it is for the purpose of performing its functions and subject to any Act or rule of law.
- FMA's consideration of Product Disclosure Statements: Under the FMC, a PDS must be prepared and lodged with the Registrar of Companies (RoC): s 48. Under s 64, the RoC must notify the FMA of the lodgment of the PDS so that the FMA may consider the document at its discretion.

- General information-gathering and enforcement powers: appear in Pt 3 of the FMA Act. Part 3, subpart 1 of the FMA Act makes provision for the FMA's power to require a person to supply evidence or produce documents (s 25); the FMA's power to receive evidence (s 26); how evidence may be given (s 27) and witnesses expenses: s 28.

The following make up the most important of the FMA's specific statutory powers under the FMA Act.

- General information-gathering powers

— Information-gathering: Like the Securities Commission, the FMA can require a person to supply information, produce documents or give evidence if the FMA considers this to be desirable for the purposes of performing its functions. Section 25 of the FMA Act confers a broad range of powers on the FMA to obtain information: s 25.

— Protection against liability: The FMA is protected from liability in exercising its powers unless acting in bad faith: s 55.

— Power to enter and search place, vehicle, or other thing: The FMA may authorize a specified person to enter and search premises, subject to a search warrant. The new power extends to "vehicles" and "other things", meaning intangible things like email addresses and Internet data storage facilities. This provision was made because financial information is usually stored in computer files and aligns the FMA's power to the changes in the Search and Surveillance Act 2012. The term "vehicle" is defined as "any conveyance that is capable of being moved under a person's control, whether or not the conveyance is used for the carriage of persons or goods, and includes a motor vehicle, aircraft, train, ship or bicycle." s 29.

Schedule 2 of the FMA Act has been repealed. The FMA must apply for a search warrant to an "issuing officer" as defined in the Search and Surveillance Act 2012. The issuing officer can grant a search warrant where he/she is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to suspect that a person has engaged or is engaging in conduct that constitutes or may constitute a contravention of the financial markets legislation; and the proposed search is likely to yield evidential material: s 29(3).

Carrying out search and inspection powers: These powers are now governed by the Search and Surveillance Act 2012. Previous Schedule 2 of the FMA Act was repealed on 1 October 2012 by s 245 (8) of the Search and Surveillance Act 2012.

— Powers for receiving evidence: The FMA has the power to hear evidence which would not otherwise be admissible in a court of law. It may receive evidence through specified persons if the evidence is likely to assist the FMA in dealing effectively with any matter before it. The FMA may receive evidence whether or not given on oath: Sections 26, 27.

— Exercise of inspection and evidence powers for over- seas regulators: An overseas regulator may request the FMA to inquire into any matter related to its functions and the FMA has the power to comply with such request. Sections 31 to 33 deal with the power of the FMA to act on requests of overseas regulators, the FMA's consideration of such requests and the conditions that may be imposed on providing such information.

— Sharing of information: The FMA may provide to law enforcement or regulatory agency or an overseas regulator any information that the FMA holds if it is satisfied that protections are in place to maintain the confidentiality of the information provided: s30.

— Power to accept undertakings: The FMA has the power to accept enforceable undertakings: ss 46, 47.

— FMA may exercise persons' right of action: The FMA has the discretionary right to commence or take over civil proceedings on behalf of investors against financial markets participants when it considers it is in the public interest to do so. This right is circumscribed. If an individual is involved, the High Court cannot grant leave to the FMA to commence or take over proceedings. It extends to representative actions in appropriate circumstances. The FMA may commence proceedings without the leave of the High Court only if:

- a person has not yet commenced proceedings in respect of the matter
- the FMA serves a written notice on the person of its intention to bring the action in court, and
- the person does not commence proceedings or object to the FMA commencing proceeding within 30 working days of the FMA giving notice to the person.

— See ss 34, 35, 36 and 39.

— Power to make confidentiality orders: The FMA has wide power to make an order prohibiting the publication of any information provided in connection with any inquiry: s44.

— Power to state case for opinion of High Court: This power is provided for in s 48 of the FMA Act.

— Power to require warning to be disclosed: Where the FMA has issued a warning, it may order the relevant person to disclose such warning on its Internet site or offer document: s49.

— FMA may authorize person to obtain information or documents: The relevant powers are contained in ss 52 to 55 of the FMA Act.

— Privileges: witnesses and counsel: Section 56 of the FMA Act confirms that witnesses and counsel have the same privileges as witnesses have in proceedings before a court.

— Witness costs: The FMA may where it deems it appropriate reimburse a witness for his or her expenses: s28.

General enforcement powers of the FMA

The FMA has taken over all the enforcement powers of the Securities Commission except as specifically provided otherwise in the FMA Act. While the FMA Act itself "provided otherwise" for the general investigation and enforcement powers contained in the Securities Act 1978 in a new Pt 3 of the FMA Act, only one minor change was made to the Securities Markets Act 1988 in the FMA Act: see Schedule 3 of the FMA Act. The FMA took over the enforcement role of the Securities Commission in relation to the Securities Markets Act.

The FMC Act now sets out the enforcement powers of the FMA in relation to matters covered by that Act (e.g. insider conduct, market manipulation, general dealing misconduct, continuous disclosure, substantial holding disclosure and directors' and officers' disclosure obligations).

The FMA's enforcement role in relation to regulation of the offer of securities to the public is contained in the FMC Act. The FMA has the power to make some enforcement orders itself and can also apply to the court for other enforcement orders. It can also make pecuniary penalty orders and declarations of contravention and can apply to the court for compensatory orders and other civil remedy orders on behalf of those who have suffered loss.

In addition to enforcing the FMC Act, the FMA now has an enforcement role in respect of "financial markets legislation" as defined in the FMA Act. This includes the new regime for financial advisers and brokers which was in full force as of 1 July 2011.

Enforcement powers under the FMC Act

The FMC Act sets out the enforcement powers of the FMA in relation to matters covered by that Act (e.g. insider conduct, market manipulation, general dealing misconduct, continuous disclosure, substantial holding disclosure and directors' and officers' disclosure obligations). The former Securities Commission had the power to make a variety of orders under the Act, including prohibition and corrective orders, disclosure orders and temporary banning orders for investment adviser and broker activities where a provision in the Securities Markets Act had been contravened. These powers now reside with the FMA pursuant to the FMC Act. The main powers of the FMA under the FMC Act can be summarized as follows:

- Power of the FMA to seek injunctions: Under Pt 8, Subpart 1, the FMA has the power to apply for an injunction restraining a person from engaging in conduct that constitutes or would constitute a contravention of a provision: see s 480.
- Power of the FMA in relation to Insider Conduct: Under Pt 5, subpart 2, insider conduct is subject to criminal liability: see s 244.

• Power of the FMA in relation to Market Manipulation: Under Pt 5, subpart 3, various forms of market manipulation (such as false or misleading statements or information and false or misleading appearance of trading) are subject to criminal liability. There are carve-outs for takeovers, short selling, and the crossing of trades.

• Power of the FMA in relation to the General Dealing Misconduct prohibition: Under Part 2 a new general dealing misconduct prohibition is introduced in s 19. The section follows s 1041H of the Australian Corporations Act 2001 and the case law on the cognate Australian section is directly relevant. Section 38 says that a contravention of ss 19-23, 34 and 36 may give rise to civil liability: see Part 8, Subpart 3.

• Power of the FMA to enforce Continuous Disclosure Regime: Part 5, Subpart 4 deals with continuous disclosure by listed issuers. Under the NZX Listing Rule 10.1.1, a listed company is required to notify the NZX as soon as it becomes aware of any "material information" concerning itself. The Listing Rules are part of the Listing Agreement between the listed company and the NZX and are a private contract. However, NZX LR 10.1.1 now has an added statutory force because s 270 states that listed issuers must disclose in accordance with listing rules if continuous disclosure listing rules apply. As to compliance, see section 352 et seq.

• Power of FMA to make disclosure order regarding relevant interests by directors and officers of public issuers: Part 5, Subpart 6, requires directors and officers of listed issuers to disclose a relevant interest within a period of five trading days: s 297 Disclosure must be made to the licensed market operator with which the issuer is listed and in the interests' register of the listed issuer. Failure to comply is an offence: see s 307.

• Power of the FMA to apply for order where substantial security holder disclosure provisions have been breached: Part 5, subpart 5, requires that (subject to certain carve-outs), substantial security holders (persons who have a relevant interest in 5%% or more of the voting securities of a public issuer) must make disclosure to the issuer and the registered exchange. Under s 289, the FMA has the power to require disclosure of all relevant interests (by way of "tracing notices"). Failure to comply may attract civil and criminal liability: see Part 8.

• Powers of the FMA in relation to the co-regulatory securities regulation regime: Part 5 Subpart 7 (Licensing of markets for trading financial products) ad Subpart 8 (Operation of licensed markets) contain the operative provisions. As a result of Subpart 8, the FMA has a role in the administration of the NZX. Subpart 8 gives the FMA significant supervisory functions over licensed markets such as the NZSX.

The way in which the regime operates is described below:

— Part 5, Subpart 7: Financial product markets (a securities exchange) can only be operated by a licensed market operator: s

310. Exemptions are listed in s 312. A financial product market is defined in s 309 and this definition excludes a service that is covered by a market services license (as to which see Part 6). The general obligations of a licensed market operator appear is s 314. Section 315 et seq deal with the issuance of licenses. The FMA is required to keep a list of licensed markets on its internet site. Section 327 states that licensed markets must be operated under market rules complying with Subpart 7. Required matters for market rules are listed in s 328. They include listing rules and business rules. The FMA must approve market rules: s 331. Subpart 7 also makes provision for the monitoring of market operator obligations via market operator reviews: ss 338-339. Control limits may apply to licensed market operators: s 344.

— Part 5, Subpart 8: This subpart is entitled "Operation of licensed markets." The FMA is given a general oversight power of a licensed market. It also has the power to access real-time surveillance information: s 355. The Subpart imposes a set of requirements on licensed market operators (LMOs). First, an LMO must notify the FMA of disciplinary actions and suspected contravention of its market rules: s 352. Second, a registered exchange must give the FMA or the Takeovers Panel information or assistance on request: s 357. Third, an LMO must give the FMA notice on continuous disclosure determinations: s 359. Fourth, the FMA may give directions to the LMO: s 361. The direction may require the LMO to suspend trading in a particular security. Fifth, the FMA may give a continuous disclosure direction to an LMO: s 362. These powers of the FMA are backed by the criminal sanction contained in s 370.

Enforcement powers under the FMC Act:

The FMA's enforcement powers largely appear in Part 8 of the FMC Act. They include stop orders, direction orders, orders to prohibit the use of simplified disclosure PDS's and unsolicited offer orders. These are complemented by High Court enforcement powers which include injunctions and various civil liability orders.

Enforcement powers in respect of "financial markets legislation"

In addition to enforcing the FMC Act, the FMA has an enforcement role in respect of "financial markets legislation" as defined in the FMA Act. This includes the regime for financial advisers and brokers which was in full force as of 1 July 2011.

§ NZ:22 Statutory interpretation in New Zealand

Many of the problems of the 78 Act can be attributed to problems of statutory interpretation. It can be assumed that any such problems are greatly diminished under the new regime. In this section, the key rules of statutory interpretation in New Zealand are outlined.

The traditional mode of statutory interpretation in New Zealand, and other common law countries generally, was the literal approach. Thus, judicial interpretation of legislation was, "to give . . . a strict and narrow interpretation, holding it down rightly to those cases which it covered expressly."[1] The literal approach has obvious limitations. An over-literal approach might mean that, where parliament has not clearly expressed its intention in statutory language, courts might refuse to give effect to the obvious purpose of the legislation.[2] Nonetheless, New Zealand courts were prepared to look at the mischief that an Act was intended to remedy if the statutory words were unclear as they stood (but not if the words had clear meaning).[3] What if clear meaning was at variance with intended purpose? In such cases, as Professor John Burrows points out, "the approach could lead to decisions which were out of line with the overall scheme and purpose of the legislation and which were stricter and more literal than any ordinary reader would arrive at."[4]

The modern New Zealand judicial mode of statutory interpretation is the purposive approach—the court looks for the purpose of the legislation with the intention of giving effect to that purpose. Here, the New Zealand practice accords with that in the United Kingdom. In 1975, Lord Diplock said "If one looks back to the actual decisions of this House on questions of statutory construction over the past 10 years one cannot fail to be struck by the evidence of a trend away from the purely literal towards the purposive construction of statutory provisions."[5] This reflects the judiciary's desire that legislation should apply as parliament intended.[6] In New Zealand, there has been legislative direction for over a century in favor of the purposive approach.[7] Prior to 1 November 1999, such legislative guidance was contained in s. 5 (j) of the Acts Interpretation Act 1924 (NZ). That section stated:

[6]See Burrows, 3rd ed., 129-30. Here, Professor Burrows sets out several reasons why the judiciary traditionally favored the literal approach to statutory interpretation rather than an approach which gave effect to the intent of the legislature.

[7]For analysis, see J. Burrows, "The Cardinal Rule of Statutory Interpretation in New Zealand", 3 NZULR 253 (1969); R. Glover, "The Acts Interpretation Act, Section 5(j)", 1 (2) Canta LR 300 (1981); J. Burrows, "Statutory Interpretation in New Zealand", 11 NZULR 1 (1984), and, R. Glover, Acts Interpretation (1991) where the recent case law is exhaustively reviewed. Legislative direction requiring a purposive approach to interpretation first appeared in s. 5 (7) of the Interpretation Act 1888 (NZ). The words of that provision were identical to the legislative direction embodied in s. 5 (j) of the Acts Interpretation Act 1924 (NZ). The 1888 provision was preceded

> Every Act, and every provision or enactment thereof, shall be deemed remedial, whether its immediate purport is to direct the doing of anything parliament deems to be for the public good, or to prevent or punish the doing of anything it deems contrary to the public good, and shall accordingly receive such fair, large, and liberal construction and interpretation as will best ensure the attainment of the object of the Act and of such provision or enactment according to its true intent, meaning and spirit.

The provision requires that every Act should be interpreted liberally to give effect to its object or purpose. In CIR v. Challenge Corporation,[8] Richardson J. emphasized the point:

> . . . the twin pillars on which the approach to statutes mandated by section 5(j) rests are the scheme of the legislation and the relevant objects of the legislation. Consideration of the scheme of the legislation requires a careful reading in its historical context of the whole statute, analyzing its structure and examining the relationships between the various provisions and recognizing any discernible themes and patterns and underlying policy considerations.[9]

On 1 November 1999, the Acts Interpretation Act 1924 was repealed and replaced by The Interpretation Act 1999. Section 5(j) of the 1924 was replaced by a new section 5, which reads as follows:

> 5. Ascertaining the meaning of legislation—(1) The meaning of an enactment must be ascertained from its text and in light of its purpose.
> (2) The matters that may be considered in ascertaining the meaning of an enactment include the indications provided in the enactment.
> (3) Examples of those indications are preambles, the analysis, a table of contents, headings to Parts and sections, marginal notes, diagrams, graphics, examples and explanatory material, and the organisation and format of the enactment.

Commenting on new section 5(1) in 2003, Professor Burrows thought there was "no indication in the judgments of the Courts that the judges are treating s 5 (1) any differently from its predecessor."[10] An early decision on the new section 5 (1) confirmed this view. In Jack v. Manakau CC (an unreported decision of Randerson J, High Court, Auckland: M1698/99), Randerson J said that he was satisfied that the approach taken in the Challenge Corporation Case (above) remained applicable under the new Act. A decision of Thomas J is to a similar effect: see R v. Rongonui [2000] 2 NZLR 385 at 431. This implies that much of the judicial commentary on the former section 5 (j) remains by Provision 3 of the Interpretation Ordinance 1851 (NZ) which stated that the language of every ordinance was to be, "construed according to its plain import, and where it is doubtful, according to the purpose thereof". Thus, the approach under the 1851 Ordinance was to interpret legislation literally, an approach discarded in the 1888 Act.

§ NZ:23 Statutory interpretation in New Zealand—Case Law prior to the Interpretation Act 1999

Judgments of the New Zealand courts make frequent reference to the "object" or "purpose" of the legislation in question.[1] In Northland Milk Vendors Association Inc. v. Northern Milk Limited,[2] Cooke P. stated:

> The responsibility falling on the Courts . . . is to work out a practical interpretation appearing to accord best with the general intention of Parliament as embodied in the Act—that is to say, the spirit of the Act . . . the Courts must try to make the Act work while taking care not themselves to usurp the policy-making function which rightly belongs to Parliament. The Courts can in a sense fill in gaps but only to make the Act work as Parliament must have intended.[3]

In Marac Life Assurance Limited v. CIR,[4] the Court of Appeal had to determine whether Marac life bonds were taxable under the Income Tax Act 1976. In deciding that the life bonds were not taxable, Cooke P. stated:

> I recognise that, taken literally, the wording of the . . . legislation may perhaps be wide enough to cover the Marac life bonds . . . But . . . on considering the relevant history and scheme of New Zealand statute law and the mischief at which the 1983 income tax amendments were aimed, I am sure that Parliament cannot have meant them to change the law and traditional practice regarding life insurance taxation.[5]

There are numerous references in New Zealand cases to "making an Act work as Parliament intended",[6] to "purposive" construction,[7] the "broad statutory goal"[8] and to the "spirit of the legislation".[9] A similar trend toward the purposive approach to statutory interpretation is evident in Australia. In Kingston v. Keprose Pty Ltd,[10] McHugh JA said that:

> In most cases the grammatical meaning of a provision will give effect to the purpose of the legislation . . . But if the grammatical meaning of a provision does not give effect to the purpose of the legislation the grammatical meaning cannot prevail. It must give way to the construction which will promote the purpose or object of the Act.[11]

In short, the New Zealand Court of Appeal has endorsed a purposive approach to statutory interpretation.

Discovering the purpose of an Act is not free from difficulty.[12] Sometimes the most natural grammatical meaning of the provision in question gives effect to the purpose of the legislation.

Where grammatical meaning and purpose are congruent there is no problem. But if a purely grammatical construction does not give effect to the purpose of a provision then the Court should look for an interpretation that gives effect to the purpose.[13] Logically, this means that even where the meaning of a provision appears to be clear, interpretation must involve an examination of the underlying purpose of the legislation to ensure that meaning and purpose are congruent. Where a purposive approach to interpretation is used it will never suffice to simply look at the words of a provision in order to determine legislative intent or purpose.

A purposive approach to statutory interpretation involves consideration of the particular provision in its context. In turn, this requires examination of a number of factors. First, the purpose of the Act may refer to the overall "theme" of the Act. It may be possible to discern a theme running through the main provisions of an Act. New Zealand courts, particularly the Court of Appeal, continually emphasise the "scheme of the Act".[14] An examination of the main provisions of the Securities Act 1978 shows that the predominant theme running through that Act was investor protection. The judiciary agrees. In Re AIC Merchant Finance,[15] Richardson J. said:

> The pattern of the Securities Act and the sanctions it imposes make it plain that the broad statutory goal is to facilitate the raising of capital by securing the timely disclosure of relevant information to prospective subscribers for securities. In that way the Act is aimed at the protection of investors.[16]

The consumer protection rationale does not appear in the FMA Act. In the FMC Act, s 3 says that one of the main purposes of the Act is to "promote the confident and informed participation of businesses, investors, and consumers in the financial markets." To this extent, the consumer protection rationale reappears explicitly in the FMC Act: see further, G. Walker and A Pekmezovic, "Consumer Protection and Financial Products" in Kate Tokeley, ed., Consumer Law in New Zealand, 2nd ed. (2014), Chapter 8.

The Interpretation Act 1999 is now bolstered by the Legislation Act 2019 which states as follows:

> General principles of interpretation
> Section 10 How to ascertain meaning of legislation
> (1) The meaning of legislation must be ascertained from its text and in the light of its purpose and its context.
> (4) Examples of those indications are preambles, a table of contents, headings, diagrams, graphics, examples and explanatory material, and the organisation and format of the legislation.
> As of 2021, the Legislation Act 2019 must be read alongside the Secondary Legislation Act 2021.

§ NZ:24 Definition of a security—Introduction

Part 3 of the FMC Act is entitled, "Disclosure of offers of financial products". Section 39 says that an offer of financial products for issue requires disclosure to an investor under this Part unless exclusion under Part 1 of Schedule 1 applies. This formulation follows s 706 of the Australian Corporations Act 2001, i.e., a bright line rule with carve outs.

The term "financial product" is defined in s 7. It means:

- A debt security
- An equity security
- A managed investment product
- A derivative.

These four terms are then further defined in s 8.

Section 8(3) says that a managed investment product means an interest in a managed investment scheme and the latter term is further defined in s 9 but excludes arrangements whereby persons hold an interest in property, discretionary investment management schemes and certain insurance policies.

Overall, these new definitions follow the Australian model and remove the layers of complexity surrounding the previous definitions of a security. To date, there is no case law on the definition of a financial product in the FMC Act. There has been commentary on the cognate Australian provisions.

As stated, s 39 of the FMC Act says that an offer of financial products for issue requires disclosure to an investor under this Part unless a specified exclusion under Part 1 of Schedule 1 applies. The compliance costs involved with meeting the s 39 obligation means that persons seeking to raise funds will first turn to the key exclusions.

The exclusions in Schedule 1 include the following:

- Offers to wholesale investors as defined in Cl. 3: This category is an aggregation of former exclusions under the 78 Act and covers investment businesses (Cl. 37), person engaged in investment activities (Cl. 38), "large" persons (Cl. 39), government agencies (Cl. 40), "eligible" investors (Cl. 41) and offers requiring a minimum investment of $750, 000 or more.
- Offers for persons in close relationships: This category comprises close business associates and relatives. There is an exhaustive definition of close business associates which will (presumably) render the case-law under the '78 Act nugatory: see Cl. 4 and Cl. 5.
- Offers through licensed intermediaries (Cl. 6) and DIMS licensees (Cl. 7).
- Offers under employee share purchase schemes (Cl. 8).
- Offers to person under control: This exclusion applies to entities controlled in any of the above categories (Cl. 9).
- Small offers: This exclusion follows the cognate Australian exclusion known as the "20/12" rule. It enables issuers of debt and equity securities to raise funds up to $2 million in any 12-month period from 20 investors: (Cl. 12).

Crowdfunding and Peer-to-Peer Lending Exclusions

In 2013, New Zealand introduced two fundraising innovations in the FMC Act: (1) equity crowd funding (ECF), and (2) peer-to-peer lending (P2PL). The FMC Act establishes a licensing regime for ECF and P2PL providers, with additional and more detailed requirements contained in the FMC Regulations.

As a result of these legislative changes, companies can make offers through licensed ECF and P2PL intermediaries' facilities without having to comply with the full regulatory disclosure requirements under securities or financial markets legislation. In turn, this reduces compliance costs and enables investors to invest in early start-up financing which provides funds for fledgling companies with significant potential for growth.

Prior to the enactment of the FMC Act, providers of crowd funding and peer-to-peer services ran the risk of contravening the Securities Act. Under s 33 of the Securities Act, no securities could be offered to the public for subscription by or on behalf of an issuer unless the offer was made in an investment statement, or as part of an authorized advertisement, or made in or accompanied by a registered prospectus. There was no specific exclusion for crowd funding, which was technically possible under the 1978 regime, but only to the limited extent provided by the exclusions to the prospectus requirements contained in s 3 of the Securities Act.

The FMC Act improves the framework for ECF and removes the risk for issuers of non-compliance with securities legislation by creating a licensing regime that enables providers of ECF and P2PL services to provide licensed services under the supervision of the regulator, the Financial Markets Authority (FMA).

The effect is that the protection of investors in an ECF offering is derived from the licensing regime contained in Pt 6 of the FMC Act rather than the prospectus regime, as was previously the case under the Securities Act.

The policy rationale for these innovations derives from the Business Growth Agenda (BGA) of the New Zealand government and is intended to make it easier for small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs) to raise capital. In implementing an ECF regulatory framework, the New Zealand Government has stated as follows:

> The Government's updated securities legislation provides explicit mechanisms for regulating new forms of intermediated capital raising, such as "peer-to-peer lending" and "crowd funding". These enable funds for small businesses and individuals to be raised in internet-based marketplaces, potentially more efficiently than through traditional public or private offerings.[1]

The main purpose of the FMC Act is to avoid unnecessary compliance costs and promote innovation and flexibility in the financial markets.

The FMC Act provides that all offers of regulated financial products must comply with the disclosure requirements in Pt 3 of the Act unless specifically covered by exclusion: s 39.

[Section NZ:24]

[1]New Zealand Government, "Building Capital Markets Report", The Business Growth Agenda (February 2013).

An exclusion has been made available in respect of offers of financial products made by or through a "licensed intermediary" in the course of supplying "prescribed intermediary services."

- "Licensed intermediaries" for this purpose are persons licensed to provide ECF or P2PL services under Pt 6 of the FMC Act.
- ECF and P2PL services are designated as "prescribed intermediary services."

Thus, one benefit of obtaining a market service license for crowd funding or P2PL under Pt 6 of the FMC Act is that the disclosure obligations under Pt 3 are inapplicable.

This is a direct result of the exclusion contained in cl 6 of Sch 1, Pt 1 of the FMC Act which states that a person providing a "prescribed intermediary service" is excluded from the disclosure obligations under Pt 3.

The FMC Act provides that limited disclosure and other requirements can be prescribed by regulation in respect of offers exempted from the Pt 3 disclosure requirements where necessary or desirable to promote the purposes of the Act: FMC Act, s 543(1)(c).

The detailed requirements are set out in the FMC Regulations to the FMC Act and are discussed below. Broadly, licensed providers must make disclosure to clients about the nature of the services provided. They are also subject to FMA supervision.

Regulation 185 of the FMC Regulations defines the terms "crowd funding service" and "peer-to-peer lending services". A person provides a "crowd funding service" if the following two elements are met:

- the person provides a facility by means of which offers of shares in a company are made; and
- the principal purpose in doing so is to facilitate the matching of companies who wish to raise funds with many investors who are seeking to invest relatively small amounts.

A person provides a "peer-to peer-lending service" if:

- the person provides a facility by means of which offers of debt securities are made; and
- the principal purpose in doing so is to facilitate the matching of lenders with borrowers who are seeking loans for personal, charitable, or small business purposes.

Both definitions require the principal purpose of the relevant facility to be the matching of companies with potential investors—that is, equity or debt investors. This requirement is intended to:

> [D]ecrease the risk that these licenses can be misused for wider offer scenarios. This approach would prevent, for example, banks, pay day lenders, and others from setting up services to refinance their loans (because the principal purpose here would be re-financing rather than matching lenders with borrowers) . . . For the same reasons, the definitions require that the services are not generally for use by the [intermediary] or associated persons of the [intermediary]. FMA can also specifi> cally restrict or prohibit use of the service by the [intermediary] and its associated persons through conditions.[2]

The definitions do not cover donation and rewards-based crowd funding. Under rewards-based crowd funding, investors receive a reward—such as tickets, or goods, or a mention on a website—in return for providing funds to an enterprise, while donation-based crowd funding facilitates public funding of charitable causes. Both reward crowd funding and donation crowd funding can be thought of as crowd sponsoring since there is no financial return involved for the backers, and these activities remain unregulated under the FMC Act.

Part 6 of the FMC Regulations contains provisions which:

- allow crowd funding services and peer-to-peer lending services providers to be licensed;
- provide additional eligibility criteria, such as adequate systems and procedures to ensure that issuers do not raise more than NZ$2 million in any 12-month period, and
- set out adequate disclosure arrangements applicable to crowd funding providers, this includes disclosure statements for retail investors, conditions (including warning statements for investors), and client agreements.

These requirements are discussed below.

ECF facilities and P2PL service facilities must apply to be licensed by the FMA. The FMA issued the first ECF licenses on 31 July 2014 to PledgeMe and Snowball Effect.

The criteria for obtaining a license to provide a crowd funding service are set out in s 396 of the FMC Act and additional eligibility criteria apply under reg 186 of the FMC Regulations. The eligibility criteria for an ECF service under s 396(a) of the FMC Act are as follows:

- the provider has fair, orderly, and transparent systems and procedures for providing the service;
- the service is designed primarily for offers by persons other than the provider and its associated persons;
- the provider has an adequate policy for identifying and managing the risk of fraud by issuers using the service (that is, an anti-fraud policy);
- the provider has adequate disclosure arrangements to give investors, or to enable investors to readily obtain, timely and understandable information to assist investors to decide whether to acquire the shares (for example, through initial disclosure, or question and answer forums, or other information that is made available); and
- the provider has an adequate policy (that is, a fair dealing policy) for excluding an issuer from using the service if the provider has information (for example, from checks or assessments it carries out (if any)) that gives it reason to believe that the issuer, in relation to any dealing in shares using the service, has engaged in conduct that is misleading or deceptive or is likely to mislead or deceive, or has made an unsubstantiated representation.

Upon registration, licensed ECF service providers must meet and maintain certain minimum standards, as set out by the FMC Act and any applicable regulations. The general fair dealing provisions contained in Pt 2 of the FMC Act are also applicable, including the prohibition on false and misleading representations.

Regulation 215 provides that a disclosure statement for an ECF service or P2PL service must contain a description of the following matters:

- the nature of the service provided;
- how investors apply for, and obtain, access to the facility and the eligibility criteria that apply;
- how issuers apply for, and obtain, access to the facility and the eligibility criteria that apply;
- how investments are made and financial products are issued under the service; and
- how investor money is received and dealt with.

In addition, the provider must disclose information about the nature and extent of the checks and assessments made by the provider of each issuer that offers financial products under the service; the directors and senior managers of those issuers; the risks involved in those financial products; the nature and extent of disclosure arrangements that apply in relation to the financial products offered under the service; the charges that may be payable to the provider by an investor or by an issuers; the rights of the provider; the nature of any restrictions or prohibitions; and the nature and extent of any interest held by or in the provider that may materially adversely impact on the providers' ability to have fair, orderly, and transparent systems and procedures for providing the service. Further, investors must receive information about the contact details of the provider, and how they may complain about the service to the provider and to any dispute resolution scheme that is available.

Regulation 196 imposes an obligation to make a warning statement available. The required boilerplate appears in reg 196(2):

> Equity crowd funding is risky. Issuers using this facility include new or rapidly growing ventures. Investment in these types of businesses is very speculative and carries high risks. You may lose your entire investment and must be in a position to bear this risk without undue hardship. New Zealand law normally requires people who offer financial products to give information to investors before they invest. This requires those offering financial products to have disclosed information that is important for investors to make an informed decision. The usual rules do not apply to offers by issuers using this facility. As a result, you may not > be given all the information usually required. You will also have fewer other legal protections for this investment. Ask questions, read all information given carefully, and seek independent financial advice before committing yourself.

Regulation 197(1) requires crowd funding service providers to obtain confirmation from an investor to the effect that the investor has seen the warning statement about crowd funding and understands the risks involved.

This confirmation must be obtained in writing in a separate document.

There are no other restrictions, however, on who may invest via ECF. This approach may be contrasted with that of other jurisdictions where ECF is available in a limited form only and open to a restricted audience of investors, such as accredited or high net worth investors.

The Regulations limit companies using ECF, peer-to-peer lending services, and/or the small offers exclusion under Sch 1 of the FMC Act to a NZ$2 million "aggregate limit". This means that issuers may not raise more than $2 million from the public in any 12-month period.

The New Zealand provisions have no limit on the number of investors. In addition, investors are not subject to any investment caps. There are no limits on the maximum amount of capital investors can invest using ECF platform.

Crowd funding service providers must have adequate procedures in place to implement anti-fraud and fair-dealing policies. The relevant requirements are set out in reg 186:

- The anti-fraud policy adopted by a provider must, at a minimum, ensure that the provider checks information about the identity of the issuer, and its directors and senior managers. This occurs in light of publicly available and readily accessible information about the issuer.
- The provider must act to exclude an issuer from using its service if the provider is not satisfied as to the identity of the issuer or its directors and senior managers; or has reason to believe that any of the issuer's directors or senior managers are not of good character.
- The obligation to exclude an issuer also applies if there is reason to believe that the issuer is not likely to comply with the obligations imposed on it under the service or if the issuer has engaged or is likely to engage in misleading and deceptive conduct.

The requirements applicable to P2PL providers are set out in reg 187.

A failure to comply with the requirements prescribed in the FMC Regulations 2014 does not prevent the exemption from continuing to apply but may give rise to civil liability consequences under Pt 8 of the FMC Act: cl 26(6) of sch 1.

Finally, a provider must have adequate systems and procedures for handling conflicts between the commercial interests of the provider

(or of its associated persons) and the need for the provider to have fair, orderly, and transparent systems and procedures for providing the service. This requirement applies to both ECF and P2PL providers.

Regulation 223 provides that client agreement requirements apply to prescribed intermediary services, including ECF and P2PL. A client agreement must be entered into before an investor applies for or acquires any financial products under the ECF or P2PL service.

Regulation 225 sets out a list of terms which are implied by default into such client agreements. Thus, one of these terms is that a licensee must exercise the care, diligence and skill that a prudent licensee providing the service would exercise in the same circumstances.

Regulation 227 deals specifically with client agreements for crowd funding services. It states that such an agreement must provide for various matters, including how investors and issuers apply and obtain access to the facility and the relevant eligibility criteria in each case. Secondly, the agreement must provide adequately for how investor money is received and dealt with. The provider must also comment on the frequency and extent to which the provider engages in the monitoring of issuers, to the extent that this is part of the service. Finally, an investor must be made aware of the charges that may be payable to the provider, and if those charges are not fixed, the types and basis on which the charges will be imposed and when the investor must pay the charges.

Regulation 228 provides similar requirements for P2PL services. The client agreement must adequately set out, amongst other things, how investor money is received and dealt with, and how the P2PL provider will monitor compliance by the issuer with obligations to make.

§ NZ:25 Continuing disclosure requirements of public companies

Disclosure requirements are imposed on issuers by statute (via the Companies Act 1993, the Financial Reporting Act 2013 and the FMC Act), and by contract (via the Listing Agreement between the NZX and the listed company which incorporates the NZX Listing Rules).

§ NZ:26 Companies Act 1993

Under Part XII of the Companies Act 1993, companies are required to disclose certain limited information. Some of this information is kept by the Registrar of Companies and the company and is available to the public ("public information"). Certain other information is kept by the company alone and must be made available to shareholders on request. An annual report must be sent to shareholders: see s 209 Companies Act 1993.

Public Information

Section 215 of the Companies Act 1993 states that every company must keep the following documents available for inspection by the public on request: certificate of incorporation or registration; constitution (if any); share register; full names and residential addresses of directors; registered office and address for service: s 215. This information is also held by the Registrar of Companies and may be inspected by any person. In the case of listed companies, full details of shareholders are not kept by the Registrar. An annual return must be delivered to the Registrar of Companies: s 214. Pursuant to the FMA Act, a register of securities offers is established at the Companies Office.

Shareholder Information

Companies must keep certain records available for inspection by any shareholder on request: s 216. These include: minutes of shareholder meetings and resolutions; written communications to shareholders over the last 10 years; certificates given by directors under the Act and the interests register.

§ NZ:27 Companies (Registration of Charges) Act 1993 and the Personal Property Securities Act 1999

The Companies (Registration of Charges) Act 1993 required the Registrar of Companies to keep a register of company charges and provided for each company to keep a separate register of charges. It was abolished by the Personal Property Securities Act 1999 (PPSA). The position now is that charges over land are registered via the applicable real estate legislation and charges over personal property are registered under the PPSA.

§ NZ:28 Register of Securities under the FMC Act

In addition to the requirement under the Companies Act 1993 to keep a share register, issuers are required under the FMC Act to keep a register of all securities issued by the company: ss 215 et seq. The register must contain particulars of the security and the security holder and be audited annually. The register may be inspected: s 221 et seq.

§ NZ:29 FMC Act—Continuous disclosure by listed issuers

Part 5, Subpart 4 of the FMC Act contains the provisions governing continuous disclosure by listed issuers. Section 270 states that listed issuers must disclose in accordance with listing rules if continuous disclosure listing rules apply. All entities listed on the NZSX are subject to continuous disclosure obligations and s 270 of the FMC Act provides statutory backing to that obligation: see further (2018) 36 (4) C&SLJ 292.

§ NZ:30 FMC Act—Disclosure of relevant interests in quoted financial products by directors and senior managers of listed issuers disclosure of relevant interests by directors and senior managers of a listed issuer or related body corporate: see s 297. The term "director" is given an extended definition in section 6 of the FMC Act to catch "any person occupying the position of director by whatever name called". The term "senior manager" is also defined in s 6. It means, "a person who is not a director but occupies a position that allows that person to exercise significant influence over the management or administration . . ." The term "relevant interest" is defined in ss 235-238. The definition is expansive and does not turn on the holding of a given percentage (unlike the substantial shareholder disclosure regime where a 5 percent shareholding is the trigger for disclosure). The term "related body corporate" is defined in s 12 (2) of the FMC Act.

The obligation imposed by this Subpart is to disclose to the licensed market operator and the listed issuer via the interests register maintained by the listed issuer under section 304 of the FMC Act. Failure to comply is an offence: see s 307. The FMA is empowered to make disclosure orders under section 42B and there is an offence of failing to comply with such orders: section 42J.

§ NZ:31 FMC Act—Disclosure of interests of substantial product holders in listed issuers

Pursuant to the FMC Act, the requirements regarding substantial security holders only apply to substantial holdings in a listed issuer. The substantive provisions are contained in Part 5, Subpart 5 of the FMC Act. These provisions are intended, inter alia, to ensure disclosure by persons with substantial interests in the company or their nominees: see s 273. A substantial security holder is a person who has an interest in 5 percent or more of the voting securities of the company: s 274. Persons who are substantial shareholders must give notice of such interest (as well as any change in such interest), to the issuer and the licensed market operator. Such notice must be given in the prescribed form and contain the prescribed information. Various carve outs are created in ss 284-288. The most useful is the exemption for nominee companies: see s 285.

Both the FMA and listed issuers have the power to require disclosure of relevant interests: see ss 289-29. Under s 293, listed issuers must make available information on substantial holdings.

§ NZ:32 Disclosure requirements under the Financial Reporting Act 2013 (FRA)

The Financial Reporting Act 2013 repealed and replaced the Financial Reporting Act 1993 as of April 1, 2014. The purpose of the FR Act 2013 as stated in s 3 is to:

- provide for the External Reporting Board (XRB)
- provide for the issue of financial reporting standards and auditing and assurance standards, and

- provide for auditor qualifications and other standard provisions relating to financial reporting duties under other enactments.

The External Reporting Board

The XRB is an independent Crown Entity that consists of the XRB Board, the New Zealand Accounting Standards Board (NZASB), the New Zealand Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (NZAASB) and the XRB Staff Team. Key functions include establishing a Financial Reporting Strategy, an Accounting Standards Framework and an Auditing and Assurance Standards Framework. These various standards can be viewed on the XRB website at https://www.xrb.govt.nz/.

Financial Reporting Act 2013: Overview

The FR Act 2013 is best viewed as providing for standard setting legislation. Standard setting is carried out by the XRB. As indicated, the Act defines key concepts such as generally accepted accounting standards and provides for the XRB to prepare and issue financial reporting standards. By contrast, the Companies Act and the FMC Act 2013 specify various and specific financial reporting duties that apply to different kinds of entities.

Section 9 of the FR Act 2013 states that, where an Act that applies to an "entity" provides that the financial statements be prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting practice, such financial statements must be prepared accordingly.

In the FR Act 2013, the term "entity" is defined in s 5 to include "a company, an overseas company, or any other body corporate". In this way, all companies must comply with the FR Act 2013.

An "FMC reporting entity" is also defined in s 5 of the FR Act 2013. The definition states that a FMC reporting entity has the same meaning as in s 451 of the FMC Act 2013. Section 451 of the FMC Act 2013 appears in Pt 7 of the FMC Act 2013. This part of the FMC Act 2013 became effective on 1 April 2014 via the Financial Reporting (Amendments to Other Enactments) Act 2013: see Financial Markets Legislation (Phase 1) Commencement Order 2014. Section 451 states, inter alia, that an FMC reporting entity includes companies that have more than 50 shareholders and are issuers or listed issuers.

The reporting and disclosure obligations imposed on companies vary depending on their size and nature. Generally, issuers are subject to the most onerous disclosure and reporting requirements. If a company is an "issuer" as defined in s 11 of the FMC Act 2013, the reporting obligations contained in Pt 7 of that Act apply: see further below.

The net result is that:

- For FMC reporting entities, one must consider the provisions contained in Pts 11 and 12 of the Companies Act, the FR Act 2013, the provisions of Part 7 of the FMC Act 2013 and (where relevant) the applicable Main Board/Debt Market Listing Rules.

- For non-FMC reporting entities, one must consider the provisions contained in Pts 11 and 12 of the Companies Act and the FR Act 2013.

§ NZ:33 NZX disclosure requirements

The NZX Listing Rules can be viewed at the NZX website. Updated NZX Listing Rules were published in July 2024 and can be viewed on the NZX website; New Guidance Notes and Practice Notes have been issued as well. Section 3 of the NZX Listing Rules contains various requirements for disclosure by listed issuers.

The term 'material information' is defined in section 1 of the NZX Listing Rules as information in relation the issuer that "a reasonable person would expect, if it were generally available to the market, to have a material effect on the price of Quoted Securities of the issuer and relates to particular securities, a particular issuer, or particular issuers, rather than to securities generally or issuers generally." There is also a further definition of information "generally available to the market". Listing Rule 3.1 then contains an obligation to release material information to the NZX subject to a set of "carve outs". Note that this obligation is backed by legislation: see section 270 of the FMC Act. The best guidance on the interpretation of this listing rule is the Australian equivalent upon which it is based, the Australian Stock Exchange LR 3.1: see CCH Australia Limited, Annotated Listing Rules (Sydney: CCH Australia Ltd). The current version of the NZX LRs is reproduced in the documents section of this release.

§ NZ:34 Fraud, manipulation, and insider trading—NZX Listing Rules

The relationship between the NZX and the listed issuer is contractual. Pursuant to such contract, the NZX has the discretionary power to cancel or suspend a listing: LR 9.9.3. Further, pursuant to LR 3 (Disclosure), issuers are obliged to release relevant information to the NZX to the extent necessary to prevent the development or subsistence of a market for their securities which is materially influenced by false or misleading statements emanating from the issuer or other persons in circumstances in each case which would give such information credibility: LR 3.

§ NZ:35 Fraud, manipulation, and insider trading—Common law remedies

New Zealand is a common law country. Section 542 of the FMC Act provides that nothing in the Act shall limit or diminish, inter alia, any liability that any person may incur under any rule of law or the Crimes Act 1961 or any other enactment other than this Act. Hence, common law remedies remain unaffected by the Act. The most important common law remedies are actions for rescission of contract, deceit, negligent misrepresentation and breach of contract.

§ NZ:36 Fraud, manipulation, and insider trading—Statutory offences

The FMC Act contains provisions dealing with insider trading, market manipulation and misleading or deceptive conduct generally. Insider trading is covered in Part 5, Subpart 2 of the FMC Act. Market manipulation is covered in Part 5, Subpart 3 of the FMC Act. Misleading and deceptive conduct is covered in Part 2 of the Act: see especially s 19.

§ NZ:37 Companies Act 1993

Various provisions of the Companies Act 1993 could be regarded as providing relief for forms of fraud or manipulative conduct. An example is the statutory remedy for oppression: see generally, G. Walker and others, Commercial Applications of Company Law in New Zealand, 5th ed. (2015).

§ NZ:38 Fraud, manipulation, and insider trading—Insider conduct

A major overhaul of insider conduct legislation in the SMA came into force in February 2008. The reforms were based on the Australian model.[1] The New Zealand and Australian insider trading regimes are discussed in Stephen Bainbridge, ed., Research Handbook on Insider Trading (Edward Elgar, 2013).

In New Zealand, there are three main means of dealing with insider conduct. At common law, a shareholder could recover from a director of a company where the director purchased shares off the shareholder.[2] However, to succeed with such an action the courts held that it is necessary to establish a fiduciary relationship between the parties,[3] which would normally be only available in private companies.[4]

The Companies Act 1993 has provisions dealing with insider

[Section NZ:38]

The Journey of the Insider Trading Provisions", 26 C&SLJ 460 (2008). For an overview of the Australian law, see Black and Hanrahan, Securities and Financial Services Law, 10th ed. (2021).

[3]Woodhouse J stated that some of these factors included a "dependence upon information and advice, the existence of a relationship of confidence, the significance of some particular transaction for the parties, and of course the extent of any positive action taken by or on behalf of the directors to promote it." Id., 325.

[4]In Cottom v. GUS Properties Ltd (1995) 7 NZCLC 260,821 the Court of Appeal confirmed the applicability of the Coleman v. Myers decision and discussed that decision in context of a non-listed company which had 200 shareholders. The Court was prepared to find that directors "intending to participate as purchasers in the share exchange, owed a duty to shareholders to ensure they were fully informed of relevant matters known to the directors before making a decision to sell". Id., 260,827. McKay J felt that the company was, apart from having 200 shareholders, like a private conduct. Section 145 prohibits a director from disclosing company information to any person or using the information without the consent of the board. Similarly, section 148 requires a director to disclose share dealings in the company shares to the board. Section 149 goes further and restricts a director who possesses company information "which is information material to an assessment of the value of shares" from acquiring or disposing of these shares unless the consideration given or received "is not less than the fair value of these shares or security".[5] Under section 149 (4), the director is liable to the person from whom the shares were purchased or to whom they were sold for the difference between the sale price and the fair value of the shares. However, section 149 does not apply in relation to shares quoted on a licensed market.[6]

The third and principal means of dealing with insider conduct in listed companies since 1998 was the provisions of the SMA. In broad overview, the insider conduct regime in effect between December 1998 and 29 February 2008 was ineffective. And while it may be that case law under the 1998-2008 will be of assistance in interpreting the new post-February 2008 regime, the better view is that scrutiny of the Australian law—upon which the New Zealand post-February 2008 insider trading regime is modeled—is of more utility. Until December 2014, the insider trading prohibitions contained in the SMA were in force. As of 1 December 2014, the insider trading provisions contained in Pt 5, Subpart 2 of the FMC Act took effect. The only major differences between the two regimes (SMA and FMC Act) are terminological. The next section describes the insider trading regime applying since 1 December 2014.

Statutory prohibitions on insider conduct in the FMC Act

Part 5, Subpart 2 of the FMC Act creates three criminal offences for insider conduct in relation to securities: These are:

- the trading offence appearing in s 241
- the disclosing ("tipping") offence contained in s 242, and
- the advising or encouraging offence contained in s 243.

The three offences also apply to insider conduct in relation to futures contract(s).

Section 244 imposes criminal liability for insider conduct.

Ingredients of the insider trading offences

(1) Territorial connection: Section 239 of the FMC Act states that the insider conduct prohibitions apply to conduct in relation to quoted financial products or listed issuers regardless of whether the conduct is in or outside New Zealand.

company. Ibid.

[5]Section 149 (1). Section 149 (2) provides that "the fair value of shares or securities is to be determined on the basis of all information known to the director or publicly available at the time".

(2) Quoted financial products of a listed issuer: The relevant insider conduct must be in relation to quoted financial products. Section 7 defines the term, "financial product" to include a debt security, an equity security, a managed investment product or a derivative. Section 6 defines the term "quoted" to mean financial products of a listed issuer that are approved for trading on a licensed market. The term "listed issuer" is defined in s 6 to mean a party to a listing agreement with a licensed market operator.

(3) Information insider: There must be an "information insider". This term is defined in s 234. A person is an information insider of a listed issuer if that person:

(a) has material information relating to the listed issuer that is not generally available to the market, and

(b) knows or ought reasonably to know that the information is material information, and

(c) knows or ought reasonably to know that the information is not generally available to the market.

A listed issuer may be an information insider of itself: see s 234(2). Further, the relevant "inside information" means the information in respect of which a person is an information insider of the listed issuer in question: s 234(4).

(4) Material information relating to a listed issuer: An information insider must have material information. Section 231 defines material information in relation to a listed issuer as information that:

(a) a reasonable person would expect, if it were generally available to the market, to have a material effect on the price of quoted financial products of the listed issuer, and

(b) relates to particular financial products, a particular listed issuer, or particular listed issuers, rather than to financial products generally or listed issuers generally.

(5) Information not generally available: Pursuant to s 232, information is generally available to the market:

(a) if it is information that:

(i) has been made known in a manner that would, or would be likely to, bring it to the attention of persons who commonly invest in relevant financial products, and

(ii) since it was made known, a reasonable period for it to be disseminated among those persons has expired, or

(b) if it is likely that persons who commonly invest in relevant financial products can readily obtain the information—whether by observation, use of expertise, purchase from other persons, or any other means—or

(c) if it is information that consists of deductions, conclusions, or inferences made or drawn from either or both of the kinds of information referred to in paragraphs (a) and (b).

(6) Materiality: The prohibition against insider conduct applies only where a reasonable person would expect that the material information, if it were generally available to the market, would have a material effect on the price of quoted financial products of the listed issuer. This is an objective test.

(7) Knowledge: Pursuant to s 234, it must be proved that the information insider knows, or ought reasonably to know, that the information is material information, and knows or ought reasonably to know that the information is not generally available to the market.

The Three Offences

(1) The Trading Offence: Where the ingredients described above are present, an information insider of a listed issuer must not trade quoted financial products of the listed issuer: s 241.

(2) The Disclosing or Tipping Offence: Where the ingredients described above are present, an information insider (A) of a public issuer must not directly or indirectly disclose inside information to another person (B) if A knows, or ought reasonably to know or believe, that B will, or is likely to trade quoted financial products of the listed issuer or if B is already a holder of those quoted financial products, continue to hold them or advise or encourage another person (C) to trade or hold them: s 242.

(3) The Advising or Encouraging Offence: Where the ingredients described above are present, an information insider (A) of a listed issuer must not (a) advise or encourage another person (B) to trade or hold quoted financial products of the listed issuer, or (b) advise or encourage (B) to advise or encourage another person (C) to trade or hold those securities.

Contravention of ss 241-243 is a criminal offence: see s 244.

Exceptions to the prohibition

There are exceptions to the prohibition on insider conduct. These are described in ss 245–256.

The affirmative defenses

There are five affirmative defenses. They are:

- absence of knowledge of trading: s 257
- inside information obtained by independent research and analysis: s 258
- equal information: s 259
- options and trading plans: s 260, and
- Chinese wall defense: s 261.

Criminal penalties

Section 244(2) provides for criminal penalties. For an individual, the maximum penalty is imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or a fine not exceeding $500,000 or both. For a company, the maximum penalty is a fine not exceeding $2.5m.

Civil remedies

Civil remedies are also available for breach of the insider conduct prohibition: see Pt 8, Subpart 3 of the FMC Act.

§ NZ:39 Tender offers, takeovers, and other corporate combinations—In general

A takeover involves someone acquiring enough shares in a company to give them "control" of the company. Often a takeover is a full takeover, where 100 percent of the shares are acquired. A full takeover is sometimes called a "merger". But a partial takeover is also possible. Here, the takeover bidder acquires a shareholding of less than 100 percent but large enough to give control. The principal legislation is the Takeovers Act 1993.

§ NZ:40 The Takeovers Code

The Takeovers Code made pursuant to the Takeovers Act 1993 came into force on 1 July 2001. The Takeovers Code effectively deems a shareholding of 20 percent or larger to be a controlling shareholding. This reflects the fact that, in many companies, that are listed on the NZX:

- There is a very large number of shareholders, many of whom hold only a small parcel of shares (that is, many companies are "widely held"); and
- Many shareholders do not exercise their voting rights.

In a "widely held" company, a 20 percent or larger shareholding will commonly provide "effective" or "practical" control of the general meeting. That is, motions put to the shareholders in general meeting—in relation to matters like election of directors—will normally be passed or rejected according to how the 20 percent plus shareholder votes.

Data on takeover activity in New Zealand up until 1993 may be found in John Farrar, ed., Takeovers (Auckland: OUP, 1993). Today, data on takeover activity may be found in Code Word, the newsletter of the Takeovers Panel or on the website of the Takeovers Panel www.takeovers.govt.nz. A useful report is entitled, "20 Years of the Takeover Panel" available at https://www.takeovers.govt.nz/guidance/codeword/issue-52/20-years-of-the-takeovers-code.

The purposes of the takeover provisions appearing in the Takeovers Code are set out in the Takeovers Act 1993. The Takeovers Act 1993 created a Takeovers Panel. The Takeovers Panel has two main functions. The first was to prepare a takeovers code that complied with the objectives set out in the Act. The second function was to enforce the resultant code. Thus, the principal purposes of the Takeovers Code appear in sections 20, 21 and 24 of the Takeovers Act 1993. These sections were not amended by the Takeovers Amendment Act 2006. For all practical purposes, however, readers are directed to the Takeovers Regulations 2000 and the Schedule to those regulations which contains the Takeovers Code.

Section 20 of the Takeovers Act states that, in formulating a takeovers code, the Panel shall consider the following objectives:

- Encouraging the efficient allocation of resources;
- Encouraging competition for the control of specified companies;
- Assisting in ensuring that holders of securities in a takeover are treated fairly;
- Promoting the international competitiveness of New Zealand's capital markets;
- Recognizing that the holders of securities must ultimately decide for themselves the merits of a takeover offer;
- Maintaining a proper relation between the costs of compliance with the code and the benefits resulting from it.

Section 21 specifies certain matters to be considered by the Panel in formulating a code such as whether advance notice and publicity should be given.

Section 24 states that when formulating a code, the Panel should have regard, to any principles applying to the co-ordination of business law between Australia and New Zealand set out in any agreement or memorandum of understanding between the Governments of Australia and New Zealand. The agreement is contained in the Memorandum of Understanding between the Governments of Australia and New Zealand on the Harmonisation of Business Law.

§ NZ:41 Tender offers, takeovers, and other corporate combinations—Overview of the Takeovers Code

There is a general prohibition (the "fundamental rule") contained in Rule 6 of the Takeovers Code on acquiring control of more than 20 percent of the voting rights in a code company except as set out in the code.

Exceptions to the "fundamental rule" contained in Rule 6 are contained in Rule 7. Rule 7 states that a person may increase a holding of voting rights beyond the 20 percent threshold in one of the following ways:

- Acquisition under a full offer;
- Acquisition under a partial offer;
- Acquisition approved by resolution of shareholders of the target company;
- Acquisitions of less than 5 percent per year by a holder of between 50 and 90 percent of the voting rights; or
- Acquisitions by a person holding at least 90 percent of voting rights in a code company.

Section 45 of the Takeovers Act 1993 also permits the Takeovers Panel to grant exemptions from the requirements of the code.

The general prohibition or "fundamental rule" is contained in Rule 6 of the Takeovers Code. This rule prohibits a person holding or controlling more than 20 percent of the voting rights in a code company except as prescribed in the code.

The general prohibition contained in Rule 6 applies to companies that are:

- Party to a listing agreement with a registered exchange and have securities that confer voting rights quoted on the registered exchange's market;
- Were a party to a listing agreement with a registered exchange in the 12 months before or after the event referred to in the code; or
- Have 50 or more shareholders.

These companies are code companies and cannot contract out of the code.

The term "control" is defined in Rule 3 (1) of the Takeovers Code to mean, in relation to a voting right, as "having, directly or indirectly, effective control of the voting right" and the term "controller" has a corresponding meaning. Rule 6 (2) provides that a person will have control if that person acted jointly or in concert with other persons or if a person joins another person or group of persons controlling voting rights as an "associate", or if a person controls voting rights together with "associates".

The term "associate" is defined in Rule 4. A person is an associate of another person if:

- The persons are acting jointly or in concert; or
- The first person acts, or is accustomed to act, in accordance with the wishes of the other person; or
- The persons are related companies; or
- The persons have a business relationship, personal relationship, or an ownership relationship such that they should, under the circumstances, be regarded as associates; or
- The first person is an associate of an associate.

However, directors are not associates of companies merely by reason of their status as director.

The provisions of the Takeovers Code could be easily avoided if they did not include the concepts of associate and control. Consider the following example:

Five people each own 10 percent of the shares of company A. They each agree to vote the same way to make sure they control who will be directors of Company A. The five shareholders therefore have control of Company A. They are each associates of each other. This means that each of the five shareholders has "voting rights" of 50 percent. Assume that they agree that one of them can buy the shares of the other four. The agreement means there is a breach of the general prohibition or fundamental rule in Rule 6.

The Takeovers Code does not contain any provisions regarding breach of Rule 6. However, Part III of the Takeovers Act 1993 empowers the Panel to act in relation to compliance with the code. Under sections 32 and 33 of the Takeovers Act 1933, the Panel may issue a "temporary restraining order" to prevent a takeover from proceeding.

The High Court also has powers under Part III, Subpart 2 of the Takeovers Act 1993. For example, it can order disposal or forfeiture of shares and payment of compensation.

As mentioned, the main exemptions to the fundamental rule contained in Rule 6 are acquisitions resulting from an offer to shareholders under a formal "takeover bid". Offers may be full or partial and may be made on-market or off-market.

A full offer is an offer for all the voting and non-voting securities of the target company. If the target company has different classes of securities, the full offer must be fair and reasonable as between different classes.

A partial offer (for less than 100 percent) is permitted but must be extended to all holders of voting securities. The partial offer must be for a specified percentage of each holder's voting securities. If there is more than one class of voting security, the partial offer must extend to each class. If the offeror's existing holding is 50 percent or less, the offer must be for securities which will result in the offeror holding or controlling more than 50 percent of the voting rights. A partial offer can be made for a lesser percentage if approval is obtained from the target company.

An off-market bid may be made for shares in listed and unlisted companies. A market bid can only be made for shares in listed companies because the offers under a market bid are made through the NZX's trading system.

An off-market bid will normally be successful only if the bidder offers to buy the shares for a price significantly above the market price of the shares just before the bid is announced. That is, the target company's shareholders must normally be offered a "premium".

There are detailed requirements for a takeover bid, including:

Offer procedure. Part 6 of the Takeovers Code (Rules 41 to 49) sets out a procedure for full and partial takeover offers. A takeover notice must be sent to the target together with the information specified in Schedule 1. If listed, the target company has to notify the NZX. If unlisted, the target company must inform offeree shareholders. The target company is then required to provide the offeror a copy of its securities register (a document on which the names of its shareholders appear). A written offer is then sent to all offerees. The offer must be open for between 30 and 90 days although a full offer can be extended by up to 60 days.

Equal treatment of shareholders. With both full and partial offers, the same terms (including price) must be offered to all security holders within a class of securities. Where there are different classes of securities, an independent adviser must certify that the price is fair and reasonable as between classes.

Price. There is no restriction on the price that can be offered except that the price must be fair and reasonable between different classes of securities.

Minimum acceptance condition. Where the bidder does not hold or control more than 50 percent, the offer must be conditional on receiving acceptances which will bring the offeror's total holding above the 50 percent threshold, unless it is a partial offer and shareholder approval for a lesser percentage is obtained.

The Takeovers Code restricts defensive tactics by the target company's directors that might "frustrate an offer" except in limited circumstances.

A shareholder who receives an offer under a takeover bid has the choice of accepting the offer (and selling their shares to the bidder) or rejecting the offer (and keeping their shares). In limited circumstances, a shareholder who has rejected the offer can later be forced to sell their shares to the bidder.

Under Part 7 of the Takeovers Code, a takeover bidder has the power to compulsorily acquire shares where some time up to the end of the offer period the bidder controls 90 percent or more of the voting rights in the target company. Such a person is called a "dominant owner" and has the right to acquire all the remaining securities of the company.

Part 8 of the Takeovers Code was introduced by the Takeovers Amendment Act 2006. It includes a new Rule 64 which contains a prohibition on misleading or deceptive conduct.

§ NZ:42 Companies Act 1993

This Act is not directed at takeovers but some provisions may be relevant in a takeover context. These include:

- directors' duties to act in good faith and in the best interests of the company.
- directors' duty to disclose personal interests in transactions.
- directors' duty not to disclose confidential information.
- directors' duty to disclose dealings in company's securities and to ensure that the other party to the dealing receives fair value.
- safeguards in the Act to protect shareholders against misuse of the power to have a company acquire its own shares or financially assist in the purchase of its own shares.
- requirement that disposal or acquisition of assets worth more than 50 percent of the company's value demands approval by special resolution of shareholders.
- minority shareholder buy-out rights.
- general protection against oppression, unfair prejudice and unfair discrimination.

There is a discussion of these duties in J. Farrar, Corporate Governance in Australia and New Zealand, 3rd ed. (2008).

§ NZ:43 NZX Listing Rules

The latest version of the NZX Listing Rules is dated July 2024 and is accessible on the NZX website. Section 4 of the NZX Listing Rules governs takeovers. Where a company is a code company as defined, then LR 4.3.1 states that the issuer's constitution must contain Notice and Pause provisions, Enforcement provisions and Compulsory Acquisition provisions.

Notice and Pause Provisions

The fundamental rule contained in LR 4 is that "notice and pause" provisions will apply to all "restricted transfers". These are changes of ownership or control of securities of a class carrying more than 20 percent of the votes in that class, or more than 5 percent per annum once that 20 percent threshold has been reached. Every issuer must have notice and pause provisions in its constitution: LR 4.3.1. These provisions may be modified so that they apply only where the bidder or purchaser is an insider: LR 4.4.2. This will provide a more liberal takeover regime than the standard Notice and Pause provisions. The provisions require offerors to give periods of public notice before the transfer can take place. The notice periods are:

- one business day where the transfer is effected solely through the NZX
- three business days for off-market transactions
- fifteen business days where any offeree is an insider.

Minority Veto Provisions

These provisions are optional and are an alternative to the standard notice and pause provisions. A listed company may amend its constitution by adopting the restrictive "minority veto" provisions pursuant to LR 4.4.1 through LR 4.6. These require that restricted transfers be made only by offers to all holders of securities of the class in question or only by on-market transactions except where approved by a resolution passed by a simple majority of each "relevant group". These provisions also require directors to obtain an independent report on the proposal. Very few companies listed on the NZX have chosen the restrictive minority veto provision.

Enforcement Provisions

NZX LR 4.7 makes provision for enforcement procedures where a default has occurred as defined in LR 4.1.1.

Compulsory Acquisition Provisions

LR 4.8 contains provisions dealing with compulsory acquisitions in takeover situations. These are intended to take the place of s. 208 of the Companies Act 1955 (which section was not re-enacted in the Companies Act, 1993). The provisions come into effect when a majority holder acquires 90 percent or more of a class of securities of the issuer. In that event, within 20 business days, the majority holder must notify the remaining security holders of the acquisition and either express an intention to acquire all remaining securities in the affected class or inform the remaining holders that they may require the majority holder to purchase their securities.

Restrictions and Defensive Measures

LR 4.2 prohibits certain provisions which might be used as takeover defenses.

§ NZ:44 Fair Trading Act 1986

Section 44E of Takeovers Act 1993 states that the Fair Trading Act 1986 does not apply to conduct in relation to any transaction or event regulated by the Takeovers Code. This section of the Takeovers Act 1993 came into effect on 29 February 2008.

§ NZ:45 Commerce Act 1986

Section 47 of the Commerce Act 1986 prohibits the assets of the business or shares if the acquisition would have, or would be likely to have, the effect of substantially lessening competition in the market.

§ NZ:46 Overseas Investment Act 2005

Where a takeover offer is made by an overseas person involving "significant business assets" with a consideration in excess of NZD100 million, the Overseas Investment Act 2005 requires that the offeror obtain the consent of the Treasurer: section 13 (1) (c). The criteria for consent are contained in section 14 and 18 of the Overseas Investment Act 2005.

§ NZ:47 Financial Markets Authority

The review function of the former NZSC under s. 10 of the Act was very wide. In City Realties Ltd v. The NZSC [1982] 1 NZLR 74 (CA), it was said that the NZSC had the power to investigate in depth a particular company takeover or attempted takeover and that such power may be exercised while the attempt is in progress. However, the new FMA has no direct power over takeovers.

§ NZ:48 Tender offers, takeovers, and other corporate combinations

—Amalgamations

The procedure for amalgamations is contained in Part XIII of the Companies Act 1993. The procedure allows two or more companies to amalgamate without having to seek Court approval. An amalgamation is now made effective by the issue of a certificate of amalgamation by the Registrar of Companies. The amalgamation procedure under the Companies Act 1993 was reviewed by the Court of Appeal in Carter Holt Harvey v. McKernan [1998] 3 NZLR 403. See also Elders New Zealand Limited v. PGG Wrightson [2007] 1 NZLR 710 (High Court).

§ NZ:49 Accounting and Auditing—Companies Act 1993

The statutory obligation to keep accounting records is found in s. 194 of the Companies Act 1993. Section 194 requires that the board of a company must cause accounting records to be kept that:

- correctly record and explain the transactions of the company
- enable the financial position of the company to be determined at any time with reasonable accuracy
- enable the directors to ensure that the financial statements of the company comply with the Financial Reporting Act 2013
- are capable of being readily and properly audited.

The responsibility for ensuring that proper accounting records are kept rests with the board of directors and failure to comply with this provision renders the directors personally liable to a pecuniary penalty.

The financial reporting and audit requirements that apply to companies are contained in the Companies Act 1993 and the FR Act 2013. As of 1 April 2014, the provisions of Pt 7 of the FMC Act 2013 must also be considered for FMC Act reporting entities.

Those obligations vary depending on the nature and size of the company in question. The discussion below begins by explaining some of the definitions used in these statutes, and then looks at the reports themselves.

This set of provisions provides an investor protection mechanism. By requiring managers to disclose certain information about the financial position, management and operation of the company, the disclosure requirements can reduce the extent to which shareholders are vulnerable to fraud, negligence or overreaching by the company's management. The intention underlying compulsory disclosure is to enable shareholders of a company to use their control rights (such as voting rights) in an informed manner, by allowing them to assess the performance of the company's management on a periodic basis. As such, compulsory disclosure is an important corporate governance measure.

The provision of standardized information about companies and their performance also plays an important role in maintaining an informed and transparent market for company securities.

Summary of periodic disclosure requirements

Section 4(2) of the FR Act 2013 states that Acts such as the Companies Act and the FMC Act 2013 specify various financial reporting duties that apply to different types of entities. This means that one must look to such legislation rather than the FR Act 2013 to ascertain the requisite reporting obligations. For example, s 211 of the Companies Act (Contents of annual report) requires that the annual report contain any financial statements required to be prepared under Pt 11 of the Companies Act, Pt 7 of the FMC Act 2013 or any other enactment, plus other specified disclosures be included in the annual report which is then made available to all shareholders.

The NZX also requires that companies listed on the NZX Main Board provide half-yearly reports: Main Board/Debt Market Listing Rule 10.4.2.

Definitions used in the Financial Reporting Act 2013 and in Part 11 of the Companies Act

Under s 45(1) of the FR Act 2013, an entity (other than an overseas company or a subsidiary of an overseas entity) is "large" in respect of an accounting period if at least one of the following applies: (a) as at the balance date of each of the two preceding accounting periods, the total assets and subsidiaries (if any) exceed $60 million, and (b) in each of the two preceding accounting periods, the total revenue of the entity and its subsidiaries (if any) exceeds $30 million. In s 45(2), an overseas company or a subsidiary of an overseas company is "large" in respect of an accounting period if at least one of the following applies: (a) as at the balance date of each of the two preceding accounting periods, the total assets of the entity and its subsidiaries (if any) exceed $20 million, and (b) over the same periods, the total revenue of the entity and its subsidiaries (if any) exceeds $10 million. A carve-out for entities that are inactive applies: s 45(3).

Section 196 in Pt 11, subpart 2 (Financial reporting) of the Companies Act imposes financial reporting requirements on: every large company; every large overseas company that carries on business in New Zealand; every company with ten or more shareholders (unless the shareholders of the company opt out of compliance) and every other company with fewer than ten shareholders if the shareholders of the company holding at least 5 percent of the shares require the company to comply.

Section 197 states that Part 11, subpart 2 does not apply to a company whose financial statements are required to be prepared under Pt 7, subpart 3 of the FMA Act 2013 or s 55 of the FR Act 2013.

Section 198 of the Companies Act provides a set of definitions. Some of the key definitions are as follows:

A "group" means a group comprising a company or an overseas company and its subsidiaries.

A "large company" means a company that is large under s 45 of the FR Act 2013.

A "large overseas company" means a body corporate incorporated outside New Zealand that (a) carries on business in New Zealand within the meaning of s 332, and (b) is "large" under s 45 of the FR Act 2013. Section 332 states that an overseas company is a company incorporated outside New Zealand but carrying on business in New Zealand, either through establishing a share transfer or share registration office in New Zealand or by administering, managing or dealing with property in New Zealand.

Financial statements

The financial reporting requirements relating to companies are found in Pt 11, subpart 2 of the Companies Act and, in the case of FMC reporting entities, in Pt 7 of the FMC Act 2013.

Preparation of financial statements under the Companies Act

The obligation upon every company or overseas company to prepare financial statements appears in s 201. Section 202 states that group financial statements must be prepared. These obligations are qualified by s 200, which states that ss 201 and 202 apply to: every large company; every company that is a public entity and every large overseas company. Companies with ten or more shareholders can opt out of compliance and companies with fewer than ten shareholders can opt into compliance.

If a s 201 obligation applies, the company must ensure that within five months of the balance date, financial statements that comply with generally accepted accounting practice (GAAP) are completed and dated and signed by directors. The same requirement as regards group financial statements appears in s 202.

Section 207 requires that financial statements must be audited by a qualified auditor. Section 206 states the companies to which this obligation applies. The audit must be carried out in accordance with auditing and assurance standards (s 207A) and the auditor must report to shareholders: s 207B. If the auditor's report indicates that the Companies Act requirements have not been met, the auditor must send a copy of the report and the financial statements to the Registrar and the External Reporting Board: s 207C.

The financial statements of some overseas companies must be registered with the Registrar.

Shareholders may request a copy of the financial statements: s 207F.

Section 207G lists financial reporting offences. If financial statements are not completed and signed within the time specified, the company and every director of the company is liable to a fine not exceeding $50, 000.

Preparation of financial statements under the FMC Act 2013

As of 1 April 2014, Pt 7 (Financial reporting) of the FMC Act 2013 applies to FMC reporting entities. Amendments to s 6(1) and ss 46-61 were made pursuant to the Financial Reporting (Amendments to other Enactments) Act 2013 by the Financial Markets Legislation (Phase 1) Commencement Order 2014. This new regime is now described in general terms.

The amendments to s 6(1), the interpretation section of the FMC Act 2013, were largely made to incorporate the new definitions of terms such as "accounting period", "applicable auditing and assurance standard", "applicable financial reporting standard", "financial statements", "generally accepted accounting practice", "group financial statements" and "balance date" appearing in the FR Act 2013.

Section 450(1)(a) and (b) of the FMC Act 2013 gives an overview of new Pt 7. It states that Pt 7 provides for FMC reporting entities to keep proper accounting records, prepare financial statements and have those statements audited and to lodge those financial statements.

The meaning of the term, "FMC reporting entity" appears in s 451. It includes every person who is an issuer of a regulated product (subject to s 452) and every listed issuer (subject to s 351).

Part 7, subpart 2 deals with accounting records. FMC entities must:

- keep proper accounting records: s 455
- keep accounting records at the registered office of the FMC reporting entity: s 456
- keep accounting records in English: s 457
- keep the accounting records for seven years: s 458
- keep the accounting records available for inspection to directors, supervisors, the FMA and authorised persons: s 459.

Part 7, subpart 3 relates to the preparation, audit and lodgement of financial statements. Financial statements must be prepared (s 460) as must group financial statements (s 461). All financial statements of an FMC reporting entity must be audited by a qualified auditor: s 461D. A qualified auditor is a licensed auditor or a registered audit firm: s 461E. The audit must be carried out in accordance with all applicable auditing and assurance standards: s 461F. The same requirement applies to the auditor's report: s 461G. Every FMC reporting entity must lodge copies of financial statements together with the auditor's report with the Registrar of Companies within four months after the balance date of the entity: s 461H.

An FMC reporting entity and every director of the entity may be liable to a fine or imprisonment for knowingly failing to comply with financial reporting standards: s 461I. Further, Pt 7, subpart 4 makes provision for civil liability for certain contraventions of the Pt 7 financial reporting provisions.

§ NZ:50 Audit

A company's financial statements must be audited, unless s 206(1)(d) or (e) applies (opting out or in). The auditor performs two core functions. The first is to report to shareholders of the company on various matters relating to the preparation of the company's financial statements. This is intended to give shareholders some independent assurance that the information received from management about the company's financial position is reliable. The second function is to report to the Registrar of Companies on any breaches of the Companies Act discovered as part of the audit.

Audit has been described in the following terms:

> "The primary purpose of an audit of a financial report is to express an opinion on whether the financial report is prepared, in all material respects, in accordance with an identified financial reporting framework.

> An audit cannot guarantee that the financial report is free from material misstatement. It does, however, provide a high level of assurance about an accountability matter, which is expressed as 'reasonable assurance' ".
> C. Martinz, "What Do Auditors Do About Fraud and Other Illegal Acts?" (1995) 13 Company and Securities Law Journal 537.

The requirement for an audit is imposed by s 206 of the Companies Act. It applies to any company required to prepare financial statements.

The audit must be conducted in accordance with s 207A of the Companies Act and the applicable provisions of the FR Act 2013. Section 20 of the FR Act 2013 refers to auditing and assurance standards. These are issued by the XRB.

In addition to reporting to shareholders, the auditor also performs a watchdog function. If the auditor's report indicates that a contravention of the Companies Act has occurred, the auditor must notify the Registrar of Companies within seven working days.

Auditors are required to be licensed and audit firms are required to be registered under the Auditor Regulation Act 2011. This legislation states the relevant requirement for licensing and registration.

Under s 207P of the Companies Act, an auditor must be appointed if financial statements are required to be audited under the Companies Act or the FMC Act 2013.

The first auditor of a company may be appointed by the directors before the first annual meeting: s 207P(4). Thereafter, the company must appoint an auditor at the annual meeting: s 207P(2). Provision for automatic reappointment appears in s 207T.

An auditor may resign at any time by giving written notice to the company and the company must notify shareholders of the auditor's resignation: s 207R.

A company must not appoint a new auditor in the place of a qualified auditor, unless the auditor has been given a reasonable opportunity to make representations to the shareholders: s 207U.

Where an auditor does not wish to be reappointed or resigns, the board of directors must (if so requested by the auditor) distribute to shareholders a written statement of the auditor's reasons or permit the auditor to address a shareholders' meeting to explain those reasons: s 207V.

The auditor may attend a shareholders' meeting and may be heard at such meeting on matters concerning the auditor: s 207W.

Special requirements apply to auditors of issuers: see the Auditor Regulation Act 2011 and the Auditor Regulations 2012. The Auditor Regulation Act 2011 sets up a regime whereby auditors of issuers must be licensed and such licence is entered in a register: s 8. Provision for a register of licensed auditors and registered audit firms is provided for in Pt 2, subpart 4 of the Auditor Regulation Act 2011. The register is maintained by the Registrar of Companies. The FMA has various powers in relation to licensed auditors.

If the auditor fails to comply with his or her obligations, the company may have a claim against the auditor for breach of statutory and contractual duties.

For example, if an auditor fails to report to shareholders on the company's failure to keep sufficient financial records, or fails to notify the Registrar of Companies of a breach of the Companies Act where the auditor is required to do so, this may form the basis of a claim. As Thomas J put it in Dairy Containers Ltd at 54: "They must perform the audit with such care and skill as is necessary to reach the opinion . . . that the financial statements give a true and fair view of the state of the company's affairs . . . If the audit fails to meet this standard, the auditors . . . have failed to fulfil their basic function".

Auditors are in a contractual relationship with the company and, on the basis of ordinary principles of contract law, can be liable to the company if they fail to honour the terms of the contract. A contract for the provision of audit services carries with it the following implied duties:

- to do an audit of the company's affairs sufficient to enable the auditor to form the opinion required under statute
- to audit the financial affairs of the company generally throughout the relevant period having regard to the records throughout the period
- to report in accordance with the Companies Act and the FR Act 2013, and
- to use reasonable care and skill in the conduct of the audit and the making of the report.

Auditors also owe a duty of care and skill at common law. What amounts to the exercise of reasonable care and skill depends on the prevailing standards in the profession.

However, this in turn depends on many factors, including the nature of the service to be provided:

> "The duties owed by an auditor to its client are high in the sense that the auditor holds itself out as practising a highly skilled and exacting profession. Even so the court must beware of imposing upon the auditor duties which go beyond the scope of what it is requested and undertakes to do . . . While the duty to exercise reasonable care and skill is a single comprehensive duty the factors according to which a court determines whether there has been a breach of the requisite standard of care will vary according to the particular service which is being provided". Daniels (formerly practising as Deloitte Haskins & Sells) v Anderson (1995) 13 ACLC 614 at 646; 16 ACSR 607 at 645.

On ordinary principles of tort law, the auditor's common law duty of care and skill may be owed to persons other than the company itself. This is because the existence of the duty does not depend on the existence of a contract between the parties. It is therefore possible that an auditor may be liable to a person other than the company (such as a person who invested in the company, or lent money to it after having seen audited accounts) if the person suffers loss as a result of a negligent audit. However, in light of recent decisions in the Commonwealth courts, it remains very difficult to establish a duty of care owed by an auditor to a third party.

§ NZ:51 International securities transactions

Recognition of foreign issuers is a matter which the former NZSC generally dealt with on a case-by-case basis. The FMA may give an exemption from the requirements of the New Zealand legislation where prospectuses have been issued overseas which generally conform to the requirements of New Zealand law and are made available to investors in New Zealand.

On 22 February 2006, a Treaty between the Government of Australia and the Government of New Zealand in Relation to Mutual Recognition of Securities Offerings was signed. In June 2008, implementing regulations were made: see Securities (Mutual Recognition of Securities Offerings—Australia) Regulations 2008 and NZSC, Offering securities in New Zealand and Australia under mutual recognition (2008).

§ NZ:52 International securities transactions—NZX Listing Rules

LR 5.1.1(b) states that any person may apply to the NZX for listing with a "Recognised Stock Exchange" as the "Home Exchange" if that person is domiciled or incorporated outside New Zealand and listed on a "Recognised Stock Exchange" (an "Overseas Listed Issuer"). LR 5.1.1 (c) makes provision for application for listing as a "Dual Listed Issuer". The terms "Dual Listed Issuer", "Home Exchange" and "Recognised Stock Exchange" are defined in Section 1 of the Listing Rules. A "Dual Listed Issuer" means an issuer listed on the ASX and the NZX. The key term is "Recognised Stock Exchange" which is defined as a stock exchange approved by the NZX from time to time as enforcing rules sufficiently similar to those of the NZX as to justify classification as a Recognised Stock Exchange for the purposes of the Listing Rules. Full members of the World Federation of Exchanges (WFE) are recognised for this purpose. LR 5.1.2 specifies the information required to be submitted for listing generally. An "Overseas Listed Issuer" is deemed to have complied with the LR 5.1.2 so long as it remains listed on its "Home Exchange": LR 5.1.6. The intention of Rules 5.1.6 and 5.1.7 (Rules applicable to Overseas Listed Issuers), is that a company or other entity which is listed on a recognised overseas stock exchange (and accepted by the NZX for listing on the NZX as well), is not required to comply with the Listing Rules so long as that company or other entity complies with the rules of the overseas stock exchange. The NZX may however in its discretion at any time require compliance with any provision of the Listing Rules. As a rule, the NZX will cancel the listing of an Overseas Listed Issuer if the listing of that issuer is cancelled on its Home Exchange. Overseas Listed Issuers must appoint a natural person resident in New Zealand with whom the NZX may communicate and such person must be authorised on behalf of the issuer to accept service of notices or legal proceedings from the NZX.

§ NZ:53 International securities transactions—International Organization of Securities Commissions (IOSCO)

The NZSC was a member of IOSCO and one of the subscribers to the Rio Declaration of 1986 which calls on signatories to provide assistance on a reciprocal basis in the gathering of information related to market oversight and protection of investors against fraudulent securities transactions. In 2004, the NZSC was accepted as a signatory to the IOSCO multilateral MOU which enables cooperation between signatories to combat international fraud and to effectively enforce securities law. In May 2004, NZSC Chairman, Jane Diplock, was elected to chair the Executive Committee of IOSCO.

The NZSC signed bilateral MOUs with the China Securities Regulatory Commission, the Indonesian Capital Markets Supervisory Agency, and, the Malaysian Securities Commission. It also has MOUs with ASIC, the USA CFTC, the Hong Kong SFC, the PNG Securities Commission and the SEC of Sri Lanka. The NZSC had an exchange of letters with the USA SEC.

The FMA has assumed all these relationships.

§ NZ:54 Investment companies

Company legislation in New Zealand does not recognise a distinct category of "investment company". The provisions of the Unit Trusts Act 1960 cover any scheme or arrangement that has the effect of providing facilities for the participation, as beneficiaries under a trust, by members of the public in income and gains arising from money, investments and other property subject to the trust.

§ NZ:55 Investment advisers and brokers

On September 29, 2008, the New Zealand Government introduced a new regulatory regime for financial advisers and brokers in the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 (FSP Act) and the Financial Advisers Act 2008 (FA Act). This legislation was dramatically re-designed from 2008 to mid-2010 and did not come fully into effect until July 2011: see Gordon Walker and Alma Pekmezovic, Financial Adviser and Broker Regulation in New Zealand (Auckland: CCH New Zealand Limited, 2010), and V Stace, Securities Law in New Zealand (LexisNexis New Zealand Ltd, 2010), Ch 25.

The regime is avowedly consumer protection legislation that brings with it a set of extensive compliance burdens for participants. For example, part of the compliance burden involves the acquisition of the minimum standards of competence, knowledge and skills required to provide financial adviser services.

A major overhaul of this law took effect in 2021. The Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act Commencement Order 2019 provided for a revised financial advice regime being introduced under the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 to commence in March 2021. From that date, the remaining provisions of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (FSLA Act) come into force. The FSLA Act also amended the FSP Act.

As of 2024, the position is as follows: the Financial Advisers Act 2008 is repealed but an amended FSP Act remains in force. The regulation of financial advice now appears in Part 6 of the FMC Act in new Subpart 5A and Subpart 5B. In addition, Subpart 6 contains a new s 432A providing the meaning of a discretionary investment management service.

New Part 6, Subpart 5A commences with s 431A which gives an overview of financial advice and financial advice services. Subsequent sections flesh out the overview. Thus, s 431C gives the meaning of the term "financial advice" and the term "regulated financial advice." Duties are imposed on persons who give regulated financial advice and breach of those duties may incur civil penalties: see s 431H. The key duties are as follows:

- Section 431I: Duty to meet standards of competence, knowledge and skill;
- Section 431J: Duty to ensure client understands nature and scope of advice;
- Section 431K: Duty to give priority to client's interests;
- Section 431L: Duty to exercise care, diligence and skill;
- Sectuin431M: Duty to comply with code of conduct;
- Section 431N: Duty relating to offer that contravenes Act or regulation; and
- Section 431O: Duty to make prescribed information available.

In Armitage v. Church, HC Wellington 27 May 2011, CIV-2009-485-1952, the plaintiff, Mr Armitage, brought an action on his own behalf and that of his family trust, against Mrs Church, a financial planner, and the company via which she provided relevant financial planning services, Moneyworks Limited (Moneyworks), in respect of losses from unsuccessful investments recommended by Mrs Church. Mr Armitage alleged that Mrs Church had recommended an inappropriately risky investment strategy and had failed to discharge her duty of care by recommending a narrow range of investment options.

The High Court found that financial advisers owe a duty of care in the provision of financial advice. The nature and extent of that duty of care will depend on the factual circumstances in any particular case. Mrs. Church owed to Mr. Armitage and the trust a duty to adequately assess their needs and ensure that her recommendations matched those needs. The recommended investments involved a lack of spread, an imprudent concentration of investments in finance companies and exacerbated the risks to which Mr. Armitage and the trust were exposed. Mrs. Church breached the duty to provide competent advice by failing to offer any alternatives that would have created options for less risky investments.

While the investment advice was given with a standard disclaimer, the terms of the disclaimer did not afford any grounds for Mrs. Church to avoid liability. The court noted the existence of pre-existing power imbalances between the parties, and highlighted that it may be inappropriate for a "fiduciary who enjoys the benefit of an imbalance of power to exert that power over the beneficiary in order to avoid fundamental duties."

Although the financial advisory services provided to Mr Armitage were provided in the name of Moneyworks, the court imposed personal liability on Mrs Church, stating that she "was the principal point of contact, and it was the essence of a personal relationship between adviser and client. It must have been her, rather than any other personal manifestation of the second defendant, who ought to have appreciated the reliance Mr Armitage placed on the expertise being applied for his benefit, and that expertise was essentially personal to her."

Publicly accessible registers and investor protection

The Financial Services Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 (FSP Act) established a registration system for financial service providers. The register is operated by the Companies Office. During the first reading of the FSP Bill, the Minister of Commerce, the Hon Lianne Dalziel stated:

> The new registration system will identify for the first time all entities providing financial services in the New Zealand market . . . This will assist all relevant regulatory authorities to both monitor and enforce the law and enable sectoral data to be collected. It will allow more effective monitoring and evaluation of financial service providers . . . The establishment of such a register will provide easy access to information about financial service providers. Having a register will enable New Zealand to meet specific anti-money laundering obligations under The Financial Action Task Force . . . and it will ensure that the controlling owners, directors, and senior managers of financial service providers do not have certain criminal convictions, are not bankrupt, and are not the subject of a management ban under companies, securities, or consumer legislation.

This statement indicates that the registration system is not a consumer protection mechanism per se; rather it is an information gathering tool. Nonetheless, there is a persistent view that the registration system promotes investor protection. During the first reading of the FSP Bill on 11 December 2007, one Member of Parliament appeared to consider that the public register would be utilised to good effect by investors. Martin Gallagher MP stated:

> The register will provide easy access to information about financial service providers to investors and institutions who seek to utilise them . . . At present it can be very costly for investors who seek information on > the products provided by the various financial service providers. This bill will allow investors to be well informed in their investment decisions. It does not matter whether one is a large investor or a small investor; that is obviously a very, very important thing.

This is debatable. The registration system itself will not enable well-informed investment decisions. To be sure, a search of the register will enable viewers to distinguish between registered providers and authorized or licensed providers: see s 27 FSP Act. In the case of registered banks, there is no doubt that public access to the register of banks serves a useful function for some users. Equally, however, it is unlikely that average members of the New Zealand public check on the status of entities describing themselves as "banks" by using the register. The same point could be made in relation to the register of financial service providers under the FSP Act.

Class Exemption for Australian financial service providers

The FMA has granted a class exemption from key provisions of the FA Act and the FSP Act for Australian regulated firms to enable them to continue providing financial adviser services for New Zealand based clients: see Financial Advisers (Australian Licensees) Exemption Amendment Notice 2018.

Australian financial service providers can take advantage of the exemption provided they meet the following criteria:

- they must hold a current Australian financial services license from the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC) enabling them to provide services to retail clients in Australia;
- they provide personalized services to "retail clients" in New Zealand;
- they must not have a place of business in New Zealand;
- they must provide the services from a place of business in Australia; and
- they notify the FMA of their intention to rely on the exemption, providing the FMA with a list of New Zealand based clients and details of specified representatives who will be providing the services in New Zealand on their behalf.

The New Zealand retail client list should include the retail clients who are existing clients of the Australian licensee and who will be treated as clients within the definition of Australian personalized services for a retail client.

Clause 6 of the Financial Advisers (Australian Licensees) Exemption Amendment Notice 2018 sets out other conditions. It requires the Australian firm to be a registered financial services provider on the FSPR, and be a member of an approved dispute resolution scheme in New Zealand. Specified representatives in Australia must be adequately trained and competent to provide personalized services to retail clients. Further, New Zealand clients must be informed that the Australian firm and its representatives are regulated by ASIC under Australian laws and exempt from some key requirements under the FSP

Act and FA Acts. The firms must ensure that their New Zealand clients receive the same disclosure as Australian clients. There is also an obligation to notify the FMA of any material enforcement action or disciplinary action taken by ASIC or any other overseas regulatory authority against the firm or its representatives.

Compulsory registration system for financial service providers

The FSP Act established a compulsory registration system for financial service providers. The term, "financial service providers" is defined in s 4 of the FSP Act. It is an "umbrella" term for various types of industry participants of which financial advisers are perhaps the most important sub-category. Certain persons are excluded from the operation of the FSP Act. Generally speaking, lawyers, accountants and real estate agents are excluded as persons who are not in the business of providing financial advice; see s 7.

Purpose of the registration system

The purpose of the registration system is stated in s 9 of the FSP Act. In summary, s 9 states that the purpose of the FSP Act is to:

- establish a compulsory public register to enable the public to access information about financial service providers and to enable the Registrar and other regulators to regulate them
- prohibit certain people (i.e. those with criminal convictions) from being involved in management or direction of registered financial service providers, and
- conform to New Zealand's obligations under the Financial Action Task Force Recommendations on Money Laundering.

The Register of Financial Services Providers

All financial service providers must be formally registered under the FSP Act. The register is maintained by the Registrar of Financial Service Providers who is the Registrar of Companies.

The relevant regulations are the Financial Service Providers (Registration) Regulations 2010 amended. The Register of Financial Service Providers (FSPR) went live on 16 August 2010.

Exemptions

Some entities are exempt from the application of the FSP Act pursuant to the Financial Service Providers (Exemptions) Regulations 2010 (in effect on 22 November 2010).

Normally, registration under the FSP Act will be the first step taken by individuals and entities seeking to comply with the new regulatory scheme.

Qualifications required for registration as a financial service provider

The FSP Act sets out the qualifications required for registration: ss 13 to 14. To qualify for registration a person must not be disqualified under s 14 (for example, disqualified for having a criminal conviction), be a member of a dispute resolution scheme and, where required, be a "licensed provider": s 13. Disqualified persons include undischarged bankrupts, persons subject to management banning orders and persons convicted of certain offences under the Crimes Act 1961: s 14.

The qualifications for registration under the FSP Act are minimal. No formal training requirements whatsoever are required of the applicant. Essentially then, all the fact of registration tells us is that the registered person is not an undischarged bankrupt and has not been convicted of an offence within the last five years. The register will also disclose whether or not a registered person is a licensed provider: s 27 FSP Act.

Applications for registration

Applications for registration are made to the Registrar of Financial Service Providers who is the Registrar of Companies: s 15. As stated, the information required is minimal. Significantly, s 16 says that if the Registrar accepts that an applicant is qualified to be registered, he must enter the applicant's name on the register. Having regard to the terms of s 13 (qualifications for registration), it is plain that an applicant will be registered so long as the s 13 criteria are met.

Public access to the register

The register is available for access and searching by members of the public: s 25. Section 26 of the FSP Act states that the purposes of the register include enabling the public to identify registered financial service providers and access information about them. Data sharing from the register (e.g., with the New Zealand Police) is permitted; see s 34.

Dispute resolution scheme

A key requirement of the FSP Act is that financial service providers are members of an approved dispute resolution scheme or the reserve or default dispute resolution scheme (as described in s 48 of the FSP Act). Membership of an approved dispute resolution scheme is one qualifying criterion for registration: s 13(b).

Enforcement

The FSP Act imposes obligations on industry participants such as the obligation to register under the FSP Act. Those obligations are backed up by criminal sanctions enforced by the Registrar. As stated, a key obligation is that the financial service provider be a member of an approved dispute resolution scheme or the reserve scheme. The intention of the legislation is that all disputes involving "retail clients" will be resolved exclusively by reference to the dispute resolution scheme: s 63(g) FSP Act.

The Registrar is granted inspection powers under s 37 and it is an offence to obstruct or hinder the exercise of the Registrar's inspection powers. Failure to comply with these inspection powers is also a criminal offence. Where an entity that is a financial service provider commits an offence, every director who knowingly authorizes or knowingly fails to prevent the offence commits an offence: s 40. False or misleading representations by a person in any documents or information required by the Act are subject to criminal sanction: s 41. In this regard, note also that the FMA has enhanced powers under the FMA Act.

§ NZ:56 Broker-dealers or entities authorized to trade in securities

Sharebrokers are now regulated by the legislation discussed above.

§ NZ:57 Civil and criminal liability—Criminal liability—Liability for misstatements

Section 82 of the FMC Act contains a prohibition on misleading statements, omissions and new matters requiring disclosure in a regulated offer. Contravention of the section is a criminal offence: see s 510 of the FMC Act. A general offence for false and misleading statements appears in s 512.

§ NZ:58 Civil and criminal liability—Indemnities or insurance

Part 8, Subpart 8 of the FMC Act has provisions dealing with indemnities and insurance. Sections 526-530 are the operative provisions. Section 526 contains a general prohibition against indemnification in respect of liability in connection with conduct regulated by the financial markets legislation. There are certain permitted exceptions.

§ NZ:59 Civil and criminal liability—Civil liability for insider conduct

Civil liability for insider trading is discussed above.

§ NZ:60 Civil and criminal liability—Civil liability for breach of continuous disclosure provisions

Part 8, Subpart 3 of the FMC Act provides a civil remedy for breach of the continuous disclosure provisions: see s 485 (d).

§ NZ:61 Civil and criminal liability—Civil liability of substantial product holder for failure to notify relevant interest

This area of law is covered by Part 5, Subpart 5 of the FMC Act. Apart from a change in some of the terminology, the legislation is identical to that under the SMA. This means that the earlier case-law remains relevant: see below.

The purpose of this subpart is stated in section 273. It states that the purpose of the subpart is, "to promote an informed market, and to deter insider conduct, market manipulation, and secret dealings in potential takeover bids, by ensuring that participants in financial product markets have access to information concerning the identity and trading activities of persons who are or may at any time be, entitled to control or influence the exercise of significant voting rights in a listed issuer".

Under s 274 of the FMC Act, a person who is a "substantial product holder" (generally speaking a five percent or greater shareholding) in a listed New Zealand issuer must disclose certain information to the company and to the NZX. The main features of the New Zealand regime are:

- A "substantial security holder" is defined in s 274 in relation to a listed issuer as a person who has a "substantial holding" in a listed issuer. A person has a substantial holding in a public issuer for the purposes of the Act if the person has a relevant interest in quoted voting products that comprise five percent or more of a class of quoted voting securities of the listed issuer. The term "relevant interest" is very widely defined in ss 235-238 so as to catch any type of legal or beneficial ownership as well as, for example, the power to control the exercise of any voting right. A person who has power over voting rights attached to shares, or over disposal of the shares, has a relevant interest in the shares regardless of whether or not the person is the registered owner of the shares. Once a person has a substantial holding in a listed issuer, disclosure must be made to the listed issuer and the licensed market operator: see ss 280-282.
- Once a person is above the 5 percent threshold, the person must disclose again if their holding goes up or down by a whole percentage point or more: s 277.
- The information that must be disclosed to the listed issuer and the licensed market operator is described in section 281 and includes details of the nature of the relevant interest.
- Disclosure must be made as soon as the person knows or ought to know that the person has a substantial holding in the listed issuer: s 276 (2).

Sections 289 and 290-291 of the FMC Act give the FMA and listed issuers the power to send out notices (called "tracing notices") requiring a member of a listed company to provide details about their own relevant interest in the company's shares and the relevant interest of other persons in those shares. This enables a listed issuer to discover who controls the voting rights attached to shares registered in the name of nominees. It also assists in the proper functioning of the takeover provisions. For example, somebody may be secretly assembling a stake of just below 5 percent in a listed company, through several nominees, before making a takeover bid. As their stake is below 5 percent, the substantial security holder provisions do not apply.

Civil liability orders under Part 8, Subpart 3 may be made in relation to breaches of the substantial product holder regime: see s 485 (d). The types of orders that may be made are listed in s 484.

The dominant purpose of the law on substantial security holder disclosure is to further a key goal of securities regulation; timely and fair information disclosure to all investors in order to ensure market integrity and address the problem of "information asymmetry": see s 274 for a statement of the purpose of the subpart. Information asymmetry in securities markets refers to the situation where select market participants—usually by virtue of their relationship to a company—possess significant information that is not available to the market at large. The presence of information asymmetries has significant implications for market efficiency. A central tenet of the Efficient Capital Market Hypothesis (ECMH) is that an efficient market will accurately reflect all publicly available information about securities in the price of those securities. Where information asymmetries exist, a privileged few may exploit significant information (not yet available to the market as a whole) for personal gain. Ideally, however, all participants in a public securities market should have equal access to information relevant to market decisions: the so-called "fairness" rationale. In order to achieve fair disclosure of significant information such information must be in the public domain. The former NZSC stated:

> A marketplace is full of rumours, and nothing will change it. It is the testing of judgment against events that provides much of the interest in share market operations. Yet the market must operate upon the basis of information, and there is no doubt that there is a core of information about any security that ought to be public knowledge.[1]

The identity of substantial security holders may be a significant factor in the price and value of listed securities. Substantial security holders are in a position to exercise voting or other control rights and their presence or absence on a share register will affect the investment decisions of investors. The activities of controlling shareholders can precipitate major market activity. If substantial security holder transactions take place without the disclosure of that information to the market, market efficiency is impaired. Disclosure enables the market to respond rapidly to new information thereby ameliorating the price effect of significant information.

Substantial security holder disclosure is regarded as an important element of a liquid securities market and is a requirement in most major international markets. The disclosure threshold varies from country to country—for example, it is 3 percent in the United Kingdom and 5 percent in the United States and Australia. The Australian provisions are very similar to the New Zealand regime. Since New Zealand and Australia seek business law co-ordination and because New Zealand is actively following Australian law in the area of securities regulation it is useful to outline the cognate Australian provisions.

§ NZ:62 The cognate Australian provisions

In Australia, substantial security holder disclosure is regulated by Chapter 6C of Corporations Act 2001 entitled "Information about Ownership of Listed Companies and Managed Investment Schemes" which incorporates amendments from the latest round of CLERP reforms.[1] The recently revised Australian Securities and Investment Commission (ASIC) policy statement on substantial holdings, Policy Statement 159: Takeovers, Compulsory Acquisitions and Substantial Holding Notices,[2] discusses these changes and provides additional explanation of the key prohibition contained in section 671B using recent case law.[3] The general purpose of substantial security holder disclosure in Australia is stated as being "to maintain an informed market in quoted securities".[4] Australian courts have affirmed this rationale as the primary purpose of the law: Re North Broken Hill Holdings Ltd (1986) 10 ACLR 270 at 282, 283; Australian Securities Commission v. Bank Leumi Le-Israel (Switzerland) (1996) 69 FCR 531; New Ashwick Pty Ltd v. Westfarmers Ltd (2000) 35 ACSR 263. The following passage from the judgment in Brunswick NL v. Blossomtree Pty Ltd states the rationale for substantial security holder disclosure in Australian law:

> It is in the interests of shareholders, current as well as past, to have information as to the real owners of shares which may influence the future of the company and their future as shareholders and which indeed might impact upon the management and control of the company. It is also in the market interest to know those matters and whether or not any such shares were acquired illegally.[5]

More specifically, the disclosure requirements aim to facilitate access to information regarding:

The CLERP 9 changes bolstered tracing procedures under Part 6C.2 of the Corporations Act, 2001 by introducing a register of information about relevant interest in a listed company or listed management scheme to be kept by that entity: s 672DA. The details to be included in the register, its location, availability and duplication procedures are dealt with in s 672A.

[3]The revised policy was released on 18 November 2004, and now incorporates the substantial holdings policy. The policy replaces Policy Statement 110: Substantial Shareholding Notices; Interim Policy Statement 109: Substantial Shareholder Notices and Practice Note 26: Takeovers: Offerors and Substantial Shareholders.

(a) who the controllers of substantial blocks are;
(b) who the associates of substantial holders are;
(c) details of any consideration or special benefits a person received for disposing of their relevant interest; and
(d) details of any agreements or special condition or restrictions that may affect the disposal of shares or the way in which they are voted.[6]

Pursuant to section 671B(1) of the Corporations Act, a person must provide a substantial holding notice if they:
(a) begin to have or cease to have a substantial holding in the body; or
(b) have a substantial holding in the body and there is a movement of at least 1 percent in their holding; or
(c) make a takeover bid for securities of the company or scheme.

A person is deemed to have a "substantial holding" if they or their associates have a relevant interest in five percent or more of the voting shares of the body; see s 9. A person has a relevant interest in securities if they:
(a) are the holder of the securities; or
(b) have power to exercise, or control the exercise of, a right to vote attached to the securities; or
(c) have power to dispose of or control the exercise of a power to dispose of, the securities: s 608.

The substantial shareholder must disclose details of their relevant interest and any relevant agreement and the nature of any association and the associate's interest: s 671B (3). This requirement is predicated on full disclosure rather than minimum or technical disclosure. For example, a party must disclose movements in each direction and not merely net movements in substantial holdings.[7] The relevant transaction should be described in clear commercial and legal terms[8] such that the nature of the substantial holding or the change in the holding is apparent to other investors.[9]

Disclosure must be made within two business days (or by 9.30 a.m. next trading day during a takeover bid) after the party has become aware of the information; s 671B (6). This deadline is designed "to compel, in fast-moving markets, the immediate disclosure of the identity of the persons who become substantial security holders".[10] Disclosure must be made "whether or not they have completed a larger investment move or unwound their investment position within that time", notwithstanding that the situation may have changed by the time disclosure is due.[11]

The substantial security holder disclosure requirements have not been extensively litigated in Australia. This is noteworthy given the number of cases which the cognate New Zealand provisions have spawned. A possible explanation is the Australian Investment and Securities Commission's (ASIC) propensity for pursuing actions under s 606 appearing in Chapter 6 (entitled "Takeovers") of the Corporations Act, 2001 (acquisitions contravening the 20 percent threshold), thus prioritizing contraventions that result in a change of control in a company. (As with the substantial shareholding disclosure provisions, s 606 is concerned with the acquisition of relevant interests, but only if share acquisition leads to an accumulation of voting power beyond permitted levels.) One of few relevant cases to go before an Australian court, ASIC v. Terra Industries Inc, involved a failure on the part of the defendant to lodge substantial shareholder notices within two business days of acquiring a relevant interest in more than 5 percent of the company's shares.[12] Merkel J held that Terra Industries' contraventions were "willful, contumelious and . . . led to a seriously uninformed and misinformed market".[13] Terra Industries was deprived of its disposal rights and its shares vested in ASIC for the purpose of sale.

§ NZ:63 Civil and criminal liability—History of the New Zealand provisions on substantial product holder disclosure

Prior to the introduction of the Securities Amendment Act 1988 in New Zealand, there was no means of ascertaining the identity and interests of substantial security holders (or their nominees) in public companies. As early as 1981, the New Zealand Securities Commission highlighted the need for reform in a report entitled Nominee Shareholdings in Public Companies: A Review of the Law and Practice with a Proposal for Reform (hereafter NZSC report). The NZSC report focused on takeover activity in New Zealand and overseas. Such activity had been referred to as "takeover by stealth", "takeover by inches" and "acquisition by ambush".[1] The NZSC report foreshadowed the development of an "informal and off the record market in substantial shareholdings" as well as practices designed to "conceal transactions and interests which the principals do not wish to expose."[2] As a remedy, the NZSC report proposed that a substantial security holder disclosure regime be introduced. Though ultimately providing the policy basis for the substantial security holder disclosure regime, these recommendations languished for many years before being incorporated into the Securities Amendment Act 1988 (SAA).

The impetus for the introduction of a substantial security holder disclosure regime next arose out of "concern at so-called nefarious activities through nominees in the share market prior to the crash in October 1987".[3] However, substantial security holder disclosure quickly assumed a secondary importance. When the SAA was first introduced into Parliament in July 1988, nearly all attention was focused upon the insider trading provisions under Part I. There was little comment on the provisions in Part II which dealt with the disclosure of interests of substantial security holders.[4] In 2000, the New Zealand Government embarked on a broad programme of reforms aimed at strengthening the regulatory framework of the securities market. Despite anecdotal evidence of concerns about the effectiveness of the disclosure regime, the law directly relating to substantial security disclosure remained unchanged.

The issue of substantial shareholder disclosure assumed greater prominence in 2003 when two significant cases reached the Court of Appeal. These cases arose in the context of takeovers and highlighted a number of difficulties in the legislation. The first case, Ithaca (Custodians) Ltd v. Perry Corporation (hereafter, Ithaca), examined the meaning of 'arrangement or understanding' and the standard of proof for determining whether relevant interests exist.[5] The second case, Richmond Ltd v. PPCS Ltd (hereafter, Richmond), concerned the nature and purpose of orders that can be made against a party in default.[6] These cases are reviewed later in this section.

The key question in determining whether or not a person is a substantial product holder is whether that person holds a "relevant interest" in a threshold stake. The substantial product holder regime will apply to any person whose interest exceeds this threshold.

§ NZ:64 Civil and criminal liability—Meaning of "relevant interest"

The term "relevant interest" is broadly defined and may arise in a variety of situations. The new definitions are contained in ss 235-238 of the FMC Act.

Describing the former section 5 of the SMA, Fisher J noted in Mercury Energy Ltd v. Utilicorp N.Z. Ltd & Power New Zealand Ltd. (Mercury Energy), that s. 5 broadly encompassed three categories of relevant interest: beneficial ownership, presently existing powers, and arrangements which may give rise to powers in the future".[1]

The need for such an extensive provision results from the nature of voting securities and the ingenuity of the legal mind. Shares confer a bundle of rights including the right to vote, the right to dividends, and the right to share in any available surplus upon the winding up of a company. These rights can be dealt with individually and assigned outright to other persons as can other property right. Alternatively, the benefit of the exercise of these rights (particularly the right to vote) can be transferred (for example, for a particular occasion such as a general meeting or for a period of time) while the legal title and other rights are retained. In the context of voting rights, this can be achieved by granting a proxy to a person which is open-ended and allows that person to vote as they think fit at a general meeting. Alternatively, it can be achieved by a shareholder entering into an agreement with another party to attend and vote at a meeting as directed to by that party. The ability to obtain control of shares and particularly the right to vote (without the need to obtain a beneficial interest in the shares) requires that the provisions be widely drafted.

In most cases, whether a person has acquired a "relevant interest" is easily established. For example, in Securities Commission v. Re Jones,[2] Sir Robert Jones sold shares in Robert Jones Investments Ltd (RJI) but failed to give the appropriate notice. It was clear that Sir Robert was beneficial owner of the shares. Brook Investments Ltd v. Paladin Ltd[3] and Securities Commission v. Honor Friend Investment Ltd[4] involved overseas parties acquiring shares in New Zealand listed companies. In each case, it was clear that beneficial ownership had been transferred. The relevant issue was the failure of the new owners to disclose their acquisition.

The expansive reach of the former Part II was confirmed by the inclusion in section 5(1) (f) of the terms "arrangement" or "understanding". These terms appeared in s 5A of the SMA. These terms were not defined in the SMA, however, they will be familiar to those involved in competition law, and arise in a number of sections of the Commerce Act 1986, particularly s 27. As a result of their inclusion, it was possible that dealings between parties which result in a meeting of minds, but which are not a contract, could create a relevant interest if they confer on one party "power" or "power to control" voting securities.

§ NZ:65 Civil and criminal liability—The Ithaca litigation

As noted earlier, the meaning of the terms "arrangement" and "understanding" in the context of former section 5(1) (f) of the SMA was discussed in Ithaca (Custodians) Ltd v. Perry Corporation (Ithaca).[1] Ithaca involved allegations of a failure to give notice of a relevant interest by Perry Corporation, a United States-based fund-manager. In April 2001, Perry Corporation held shares (amounting to 10.81 percent) in the listed company Rubicon Ltd. In May 2001, Perry Corporation sold 14 million of these shares to Deutsche Bank and 17 million shares to UBS Warburg. These sales were matched by sophisticated equity swap transactions (governed by master agreements) with the two institutions.[2] While the terms of the agreement provided for a termination date, the nature of the situation was such that the shares would be available for repurchase on demand. Perry Corporation subsequently made further purchases of Rubicon shares which were on-sold to Deutsche Bank on similar terms to those above. In September 2001, the equity swaps transactions were partially unwound. This enabled Perry Corporation to participate in a Rubicon buy-back, after which time it set about re-establishing its shareholding.

In June 2002, Guinness Peat Group plc (GPG) began purchasing shares in Rubicon with a view to assembling a holding of just under 20 percent (to avoid the takeover threshold). GPG acquired a 19.87 percent stake in the company and filed notice accordingly. It soon became apparent that GPG and Perry Corporation were strategically (if not philosophically) incompatible. In particular, the two were at odds over the future of Rubicon Forest Holdings Ltd, a Rubicon subsidiary. In July 2002, all the equity swaps were unwound and cash settled. Perry Corporation was consequently entitled to vote on those securities at Rubicon's first annual meeting. In all, Perry Corporation filed substantial shareholder notices on three occasions. Disclosure was not made in respect of the shares held by Deutsche Bank and UBS Warburg as a hedge for the equity swaps. On this basis GPG instituted proceedings against Perry Corporation.[3]

The High Court held that entry into the equity swaps did not give

Use of equity swaps in this context is not confined to New Zealand. There have been recent instances in the UK and Australia. For the UK, see The Panel on Takeovers and Mergers, Consultation Papers on Dealings in Derivatives and Options (January 2005 and May 2005). rise to a disclosure obligation per se. Under the circumstances, however, Potter J found that there was an arrangement or understanding pursuant to which Perry Corporation could repurchase the shares which gave rise to an ongoing interest in the shares. On this basis, Potter J concluded that Perry Corporation had breached its disclosure obligations by not disclosing the equity swaps. The following factors were determinative in this regard:

(a) Perry Corporation was confident that the shares would be available for repurchase as required, as were Rubicon and the Deutsche bank.

(b) at all relevant times, Rubicon treated Perry Corporation as being a substantial shareholder.

(c) Both Rubicon and Perry Corporation were concerned about GPG's intentions and wished Perry Corporation to be able to exercise its voting rights as a major shareholder at the annual general meeting.

(d) On both occasions when Perry Corporation needed large parcels of shares, the equity swaps were promptly terminated and the shares repurchased.[4]

Considering the deliberate nature of the non-disclosure (perpetrated by a sophisticated investor); that it lasted over 12 months; related to 36 million shares and the need for deterrence, Potter J ordered the forfeiture of 12 million Rubicon shares and the on-market sale of the remaining 24 million shares.[5]

The New Zealand Court of Appeal set aside the orders made by the High Court. The Court of Appeal ruled that the terms "arrangement" and "understanding" describe something less than a formal contract but more than mutual expectations based on commercial reality. In this case, market reality (in a practical business sense) diminished the necessity for an arrangement or understanding in relation to the reacquisition of the hedge shares. Hence, it was regarded as inherently unlikely that one was entered into. Moreover, the power to control securities must arise by virtue of the arrangement or understanding and not merely as a result of its performance. The Court was satisfied that the pattern of dealings and transactions by Perry Corporation merely reflected market reality and did not give rise to an arrangement or understanding. With respect to section 5(2), the Court ruled there was insufficient evidence to draw the inference that Perry Corporation's equity swap partners were accustomed to act in accordance with its wishes.

[5]The orders targeted the 36 million voting securities that the equity swaps related to. Perry Corporation was prohibited from exercising voting rights or receiving any payments in relation to the shares pending their sale.

Ithaca demonstrates that sophisticated financial instruments can be used to avoid the substantial shareholder regime.[6] It is submitted that the decision of the Court of Appeal was wrong and that the decision of Potter J in the High Court is to be preferred.[7] The proposed amendments contained in the first version Securities Legislation Bill 2004 were aimed at negating the effect of the Court of Appeal decision. However, in the version of the Bill reported back from the Commerce Committee these amendments were removed.[8]

§ NZ:66 Civil and criminal liability—Meaning of "power" and "power to control" pre-February 2008

The former section 5(1) was considered in relation to claims involving "relevant interests" (other than beneficial ownership) by both the High Court and in a report by the NZSC into the voting securities of Air New Zealand Ltd in 1991. Although the NZSC report has no precedent value, it is one of few times that section 5 has been considered in New Zealand.

Gulf Resources

In NZSC v. Gulf Resources and Chemical Corporation,[1] the NZSC alleged that Gulf Resources (Gulf) had acquired a relevant interest in the voting securities of City Realties Ltd (CRL) yet had failed to disclose this interest as required. In this case, certain persons made representations to Tower Corporation for the purpose of acquiring its shares in CRL allegedly on behalf of other persons. The NZSC alleged that the shares were acquired by a company, Zelas Enterprises Ltd (Zelas), as trustee for Gulf. As a result, Gulf was the beneficial owner of the shares and therefore had a relevant interest in the shares (under section 5(1) (a)). McGechan J determined that the initial moneys advanced to Zelas for the purchase came from one of the persons who had made the original representations to Tower Corpora-

[7]The difficulty that disclosure laws have with complex transactions (such as the equity swaps in Ithaca) was examined by Professor Steven Schwarcz in "Rethinking the Disclosure Paradigm in a World of Complexity", 1 U of Illinois LR 1-37 (2004). The conduct described in the Ithaca Case might give rise to "unacceptable circumstances" in a takeover context in Australia. See In the Matter of Austral Coal [2005] ATP 16.

[8]In the Commentary to the Bill as reported back, it was stated that (at page 8): "Extension of the relevant interest definition to include a power or control exercised through a practice was intended to cover a potential gap in the law exposed by recent litigation. However, we consider that the deficiency is fact-specific to that case, and that the proposed solution would create undue uncertainty as to when the substantial security holder disclosure obligation arises."

tion, not from Gulf.[2] He also found that a subsequent advance by Gulf to Zelas of $16.7m was in fact a loan. Accordingly, he was satisfied "that no beneficial ownership by Gulf of either Zelas or of Zelas' CRL holding was thereby created".[3]

This was not the end of the matter, however, since four documents were signed in relation to the loan and shares in Zelas and were later issued to Gulf. The four documents comprised a loan agreement between Zelas and Gulf; a debenture over Zelas to Gulf; a mortgage over the Zelas' shares by the shareholders to Gulf; and, "a Deed of Covenant between Mr McGoldrick and Mr Whitaker and Gulf under which to speak very roughly the latter gentlemen were not to act prejudicially to Gulf".[4] Gulf only disclosed the loan agreement. The NZSC attacked the omission of the Deed of Covenant as a breach of the Act. McGechan J then found:

> I think the omission of the Deed of Covenant from the notice was technically a failure to notify a relevant interest under sec 5(1) (f) and so under sec 5(2). The Deed's restraint upon prejudicial action carried with it a restraint and hence control on voting from at least the time of the Gulf loan to Zelas and contract as represented by the Deed.[5]

While McGechan J did not specify which subparagraph of section 5(1) (f) he was relying upon, it would appear to be subparagraph (ii) which deals with the "power to control the exercise of any right to vote attached to the voting security". Ordinarily this would cover a situation where the substantial security holder indicates that a shareholder has to vote for or against a particular resolution. The terms of the Deed of Covenant are not set out in the judgment but it seems that there was no requirement for the covenantees to consult with Gulf prior to voting. McGechan J's view extended the concept of "power to control" to a situation where a shareholder can vote as they wish provided they do not prejudice the other party's interests—in a sense a negative constraint or "control" on the power to vote. This raises the question of whether or not a positive obligation that a shareholder take into account the interests of another when considering how to exercise one's power to vote, without the other party specifying how to vote or actually influencing how a vote is cast, would also constitute a "control" or a "power to control".

In any event, the concept of "power to control" under section 5 (on McGechan J's interpretation) appears to have a very wide ambit. It could be found to arise from something less than an agreement ("an arrangement or understanding"), which may be express or implied

The Air New Zealand Report

The NZSC report pertains to the privatisation of Air New Zealand Ltd (Air NZ) in 1989 and 1990.[6] Qantas and Brierley Investments Ltd (BIL) formed part of a consortium that made a bid for a stake in Air NZ. Part of the arrangements for the consortium included an agreement between Qantas and BIL.

Qantas and BIL's agreement provided for consultation when either party decided to sell its shares.[7] Essentially, notice was given in order that the other party might find a possible purchaser. If the other party found a purchaser at a better price that party was to share in the price obtained that exceeded the original price notified by the offering shareholder. Clause 4(b) provided for the payment of 25 percent of the sale price of any shares sold in the event that either party sold their shares without first advising the other. Clause 4(c) provided for a 5 percent penalty in the event that the shares were sold to a purchaser, who had not been located by the other party, at the same price or on better terms for the purchaser. The agreement did not require that the shares be offered to the other party first, although the other party could obviously have bid for the shares, so that it did not constitute a pre-emptive requirement. In fact, clause 4(d) expressly provided that neither party had "any power to control the disposition of any of the seller's shares" in Air NZ, and that the sole remedy was in damages as measured by the amounts specified in clauses 4(c) or 4(d).

One of the issues that concerned the NZSC was whether some of the provisions of these agreements constituted a constraint "on either party's freedom to dispose of the securities of such as to give rise to a relevant interest in the voting securities of Air New Zealand".[8] The NZSC considered what was meant by "power to control". It accepted the submission of one counsel that "control" should be taken as having its ordinary (dictionary) meaning:

> . . . the fact of controlling, or of checking and directing action; domination, command, sway.[9]

Considering this definition, the NZSC stated:

> Having regard to this ordinary meaning given to the word "control", the statutory expression would cover the circumstances where a person is in > a position to direct or to exercise a dominating influence over the acquisition or disposition of a share by another person.[10]

The NZSC then considered decisions pertaining to parallel Australian provisions. In particular, it noted a decision of Beach J in Re Kornblums Furnishings Ltd[11] "that where the practical effect of an agreement to dispose of shares is that any shareholder who was a party to the agreement could restrain any other shareholder from selling his shares on the open market, a relevant interest had been created".[12] In the light of this decision, and taking into account section 5(6) (which provides that a "power" can include a power that arises from breaching a trust, agreement or understanding, whether or not it is legally enforceable) the NZSC formed the view that:

> When proper weight is given to s.5 (6), it follows that a negative constraint, although not capable of enforcement by way of injunction, may still constitute the exercise of a power of control. The existence of an economic power which would effectively constrain a shareholder's freedom of action in the disposition of his shares may constitute a relevant interest for the purposes of the Act.[13]

The NZSC later appeared to qualify this statement, stating that counsel for the parties had accepted that "where a shareholder was in a position to place a significant economic constraint on the freedom which another shareholder would otherwise have to dispose of its shares, this could amount to the exercise of a power to control the disposition of the shares, and so create a relevant interest".[14] Having determined that a (significant) economic power is sufficient, the issue then became whether or not on the facts of this case such a power existed.

Counsel for BIL and Qantas both argued that clauses 4(b) and (c) of the agreement were designed to encourage compliance and that "the requirement to consult and the financial mechanisms in the agreements [did] not create or permit the exercise the of a degree of control sufficient to oblige or coerce a party to act in a certain manner", rather they were incentives or inducements.[15] Counsel relied upon Australian High Court dicta that "a power on a person to provide shareholders with an incentive or inducement to exercise their voting power as that person may wish is not aptly described as making the company capable of being controlled by that person".[16] The NZSC was unwilling to accept these dicta outright, saying that "it is a matter of degree, and it may be necessary to determine at what point a mere inducement or incentive becomes sufficiently powerful to constitute an effective constraint which directs a party towards a desired course of action".[17] After analysing the clauses the NZSC held that they were not an effective economic constraint on either party. The NZSC also stated that it gave little weight to clause 4(d) as it took the view that it was necessary to look at the agreement as a whole, and that such a declaration would not have any effect if there were provisions that did confer control over the disposition of shares.

The NZSC clearly viewed the expression "power to control" as having a wide ambit. Economic incentives have the potential to come within this term and hence create a relevant interest. If clauses 4(b) or 4(c) had provided for a 100 percent penalty for the failure to comply or had provided that the seller had to give six to twelve months' notice then it is possible that the NZSC would have viewed these provisions as conferring a "significant economic constraint". However, it should be remembered that "economic power" does not need to refer directly to the disposition of shares as happened in this case. It is possible to imagine two parties which have a commercial relationship (such as supplier and purchaser of manufactured goods or financial services) where the supplier is able to use its economic power, arising from the commercial relationship, to "oblige or coerce" the purchaser into dealing with the shares in a way that is desired by the supplier. The provision of goods or services at a favorable rate or the threat to remove supply or only to supply at unfavorable rates may be sufficient. As only an "arrangement or understanding" is needed and the arrangement can be indirect or even unenforceable it is possible that a "relevant interest" could arise in such a situation.

Mercury Energy Case

This case arose out of a long running takeover battle for the control of Power NZ Ltd between Mercury Energy Ltd (Mercury) and Power NZ Ltd (Power NZ) and Utilicorp NZ Ltd (Utilicorp). The takeover battle spawned a significant amount of litigation as each side attempted to use various actions to slow down or gain an advantage over the other side. Previous actions included an unsuccessful claim by Power NZ alleging the takeover offer by Mercury was in breach of the Fair Trading Act 1986 and the Companies Amendment Act 1963,[18] and a further unsuccessful claim that the proposed merger would breach the Commerce Act 1986.[19] Mercury too pursued its share of unsuccessful claims, including an injunction to restrain Power NZ acquiring shares in Waikato Energy Ltd.[20] Subsequent litigation between the parties, Mercury Energy Ltd v. Utilicorp N.Z. Ltd & Power New Zealand Ltd,[21] involved an allegation that Utilicorp failed to give the appropriate notice under Part II of the SMA. Like the Air NZ case referred to above, this case involved analysis of a written agreement. The critical issue was whether or not a put option or pre-emptive agreement came within the terms of section 5, so as to confer a relevant interest on Utilicorp.

In December 1995, in the midst of the takeover battle between Mercury and Utilicorp, Utilicorp entered into an oral agreement with three local councils who held shares in Power NZ. The local councils granted a put option to Utilicorp and a right of first refusal in the event that the councils wished to sell their shares. At the time Utilicorp failed to notify this agreement under Part II of the SMA. In early July 1996 Mercury became aware of the agreement (when a fax was sent to the home of one of Mercury's officers containing some of the local councils' confidential documents). In late July, under threat of litigation by Mercury, Utilicorp gave notice of its interests pursuant to the agreement. The notice made it clear that the effect of the agreement was to raise Utilicorp's relevant interests (taking into account its interest in WEL Energy Group Ltd which was a shareholder of Power NZ) from 35 to 42.76 percent.

Mercury then commenced an action claiming that Utilicorp had breached Part II. Though conceding it was engaging in the proceedings to "assist in its take-over battle", Mercury argued that the orders it was seeking (including suspension of Utilicorp's voting rights; forfeiture or disposal of its shares; forfeiture of its dividends and/or restraints upon share transactions to which it might be a party the forfeiture of Utilicorp's shares) were in the "wider public interest".[22]

Fisher J considered whether the put option or the right of first refusal conferred a relevant interest on Utilicorp. He noted that the option did not impose an obligation on the local councils to sell, nor to sell at a particular price, or even to sell to Utilicorp. Utilicorp did gain a potential right to insist upon a sale but this was subject to the fundamental condition that the local council's wished to sell their shares. Fisher J found that neither provision conferred beneficial ownership nor did it give Utilicorp any existing powers. The issue then became whether it created a power which arose in the future.

Fisher J held that the relevant provision to examine was section 5(1) (f) (iii) (which deals with a person who may have the power to dispose or acquire shares at any time). He thought that section 5(1)

(d) (which deals with a person having the power to acquire or dispose of the voting security) could be of potential relevance when combined with section 5(4). The latter provides, among other things, that the power can exercisable presently or in the future (s 5(4) (f)) and only on fulfillment of a condition (s 5(4) (g)). Fisher J was inclined to think that the reference to condition in section 5(4) (g) "was intended to refer to an event beyond the control of the contracting parties, thereby excluding put options and rights of first refusal". Why Fisher J came to this conclusion is not clear as there is nothing in the subparagraph that would appear to support this view.

The elements of section 5(1)(f)(iii) that Fisher J considered in greater depth were the meaning of the term "power", and the significance of the phrase "may at any time". In considering the term "power" Fisher J found:

> I agree with Mr Craddock that in this context "power" is concerned with the ability to do something, that the ability to bring about the effect required must lie within one's own hands and not those of another, and that a notion of domination or command is involved. None of those facilities necessarily exists at the time that a right of first refusal is conferred but of course s 5(1) (f) (iii) does not demand the existence of the power from the beginning. Nor is it necessary to postulate that the power will necessarily ever arise in the future. It is sufficient if at the time of the agreement one can say that the grantee "may at any time" have such power. And of course the possibility that the power may only arise in the future, and be exercisable only on fulfillment of conditions, is expressly provided in s 5(4) (f) and (g).[23]

Fisher J's view that "power" involves the notion of domination or command is similar to that of the NZSC in the Air NZ report. This position places a relatively high threshold on what constitutes "power", although this is tempered by the requirement that it "may arise any time" in the future.

Fisher J went on to consider the phrase "may at any time". He rejected an argument put forward by counsel for Utilicorp that attempted to equate this term with the term "will". In his view:

> The phrase "may at any time" is not to be equated with the word "will". Section 5(1) (d) ("has the power to acquire") in combination with section 5(4) (f) ("is exercisable. . .in the future") already caters for the case in which it is known that the power to acquire will arise in the future. The significant element introduced by s5(1)(f)(iii) is that in place of certainty it becomes sufficient if by virtue of the agreement the power "may at any time" accrue. The role of the word in s5 (1) (f) (iii) is thus to indicate uncertainty: there is a possibility that the grantee will "have the power to acquire" the shares but equally there is the possibility that that power will never accrue. That is precisely the situation with a right of first refusal.[24]

Fisher J considered the "absurd consequences" that could flow from holding that the mere possibility that an interest may be acquired was sufficient to constitute a relevant interest. He accepted that there were "many situations in which a trust, agreement, arrangement or understanding creates the mere possibility that a person may acquire shares or may control their acquisition or disposition". After considering the policy behind the legislation (particularly that of promoting the prompt provision of adequate information to the market), the Act's legislative history, and the approach to this issue in Australia, Fisher J was of the view that the result was not so absurd "that one would be justified in departing from the literal language of s 5".[25] He preferred to deal with "anomalous situations" by exercising the discretion under section 32 for the imposition of any penalty.[26] As a result, Fisher J determined that Utilicorp should have disclosed the December agreement and the put option and right of first refusal.

§ NZ:67 Criminal liability—Criminal liability for misstatements—Position under the Securities Act 1978

A discussion of the previous law has been retained since the case law remains of precedent value. This includes case law on the meaning of materiality; please see below.

Advertisements: Section 58(1) of the '78 Act stated that where an advertisement which contains an untrue statement is distributed then the issuer of the securities referred to in it, if an individual, commits an offence. If the issuer is a body, an offence is committed by every director of it at the time of distribution.

Registered Prospectus: Section 58(3) of the '78 Act stated that, where a registered prospectus that includes an untrue statement is distributed, every person who signed the prospectus commits an offence. Section 55 defined untrue statements by way of a deeming provision. A statement in a registered prospectus was deemed to be untrue if it is misleading in the form and context in which it is included[1] or it is misleading by reason of the omission of a material particular.[2] Decisions on s. 58 were R v. Reid (1990) 5 NZCLC 66, 483 (HC); R. v. Rada Corporation Ltd (No. 2) [1990] 3 NZLR 453 (HC); R

Section 58 (3) of the '78 Act—which concerned an untrue statement in a registered prospectus—was a strict liability offence subject to a statutory defense of immateriality or reasonable grounds to believe that the statement was true. The term, "distribute" was defined in the 78 Act in section 2 (1). The onus is on the defendant to avoid a conviction, assuming a prima facie case is made out by the prosecution. The prosecution did not need to show that an investor suffered loss as a result of the untrue statement. The defendant had to prove one of the two statutory defenses on the balance of probabilities. Whether a statement was immaterial was to be looked at not only from an actual investor's standpoint but also from the reasonable investor's standpoint.

Materiality: The leading case in New Zealand on the meaning of "material" is Coleman v. Myers.[3] Directors of a family company offered to purchase shares from shareholders without disclosing that the accounts, which were based on the book value of the company's assets, significantly understated the market value of those assets. Cooke J (as he then was) discussed the obligations of directors to disclose material information to shareholders when they are advising them on an offer and they are also the vendors. Cooke J stated:

With regard to ascertaining the precise scope of the obligation here, it is important to remember that directors are free to profit from their position, in the sense that there is no reason why they should not make a profit from dealings with shareholders. The obligation has to be worked out in terms of representations and disclosures. Particularised in those respects . . . there must be an obligation not to make to shareholders statements on matters material to the proposed dealing which are either deliberately or carelessly misleading. And in my opinion there must be at least an obligation to disclose material matters as to which the director knows or has reason to believe that the shareholder whom he is trying to persuade to sell is or may be inadequately informed. As to what matters are material, there was some debate in argument before us. In his judgment Mahon J uses sometimes the expression might influence the shareholder, sometimes would. Mr Williams prefers would. I think it is often easier to assess whether a statement is in the circumstances truly significant than to propound a watertight test. If forced to a formula I would select one somewhere between the alternatives just mentioned.[4]

Cooke J then set out his broad test of materiality as "those considerations which can reasonably be said, in the particular case, to be likely materially to affect the mind of a vendor or of a purchaser."[5] Cooke J relied on the United States Supreme Court decision TSC Industries Inc v. Northway Inc[6] where Marshall J considered proxy solicitation and commented that:

> An omitted fact is material if there is a substantial likelihood that a reasonable shareholder would consider it important in deciding how to vote. This standard is fully consistent with Mills' general description of materiality as a requirement that 'the defect have a significant propensity to affect the voting process'. It does not require proof of a substantial likelihood that disclosure of the omitted fact would have caused the reasonable investor to change his vote. What the standard does contemplate is a showing of a substantial likelihood that under all the circumstances the omitted fact would have assumed actual significance in the deliberations of the reasonable shareholder. Put another way, there must be a substantial likelihood that the disclosure of the omitted fact would have been viewed by the reasonable investor having significantly altered the 'total mix' of information made available.[7]

While the TSC Industries case involved proxy solicitation, a more recent Supreme Court decision based on Rule 10b-5 (which covers insider trading and fraudulent disclosure suits) is Basic, Inc v. Levinson.[8] The United States Supreme Court also adopted the reasonable investor standard for materiality: an omitted fact is material if there is a substantial likelihood that a reasonable shareholder would consider it important.

Cooke J's consideration of the meaning of "materiality" shows a close parallel with the philosophy of disclosure under the '78 Act. While Cooke J was dealing with an issue arising out of common law rather than statute, his reasoning would still appear to be very relevant given that he found that directors had a duty not to make misleading statements and had an obligation to disclose material matters. Both of these duties parallel the definitions of "untrue statement" in section 55 of the '78 Act. Also, the common law position for promoters or directors of a securities offering was one requiring "utmost candour and honesty" which is similar to the obligations that Cooke J found for directors who purchase shares in a Coleman v. Myers situation. As such Cooke J's comments should be considered to form the basis for determining "materiality" in prospectus (and now PDS) statements even though he was dealing with directors' common law obligations. For Cooke J., the information had to be "likely to materially affect the mind" of an investor of average prudence."[9]

On the basis of Coleman v. Myers, "material information" does not have to be such as to determine the outcome of the investor's decision. However, it appears Cooke J was inclined to the view that the information had to be such that the investor would take into account in making his or her decision. Initially Cooke J commented that he thought that the test as to whether or not information was material lay between whether it "might" or "would" influence an investor,[10] but he subsequently adopted Marshall J's approach which clearly considers that information is material if it would influence a shareholder.[11] From the viewpoint of certainty it would be preferable if the test was the higher test of "would" influence a reasonable investor. This is consistent with the United States position, although in Australia the lower test of "may" has been used.[12] Hazen commented that in the United States, "the test of materiality is whether a reasonable investor would have considered the matter significant; it is not necessary to show that the investor would have acted differently".[13] As he pointed out once materiality is established the investor still has to show cause or connection between the violation, the transaction and the loss suffered.

Coleman v. Myers also indicated that the perspective from which "materiality" was to be determined was that of the reasonable shareholder, not an actual shareholder. Hazen pointed out that in the U.S. in the context of Rule 10b-5 the test of materiality "depends not upon the literal truth of statements but upon the ability of reasonable investors to become accurately informed."[14]

The use of the "reasonable" investor is consistent with Maslen v. Shaw,[15] and with earlier common law authority on share offerings.[16] For example, Lord Halsbury LC commented in Arnison v. Smith:

> It is an old expedient, and seldom successful, to cross-examine a person who has read a prospectus, and ask him as to each particular statement what influence it had on his mind, and how far it determined him to enter into the prospectus and determined him to take shares on the faith of it as appropriate among the different parts of it and the effect produced by the whole. This can rarely be done even at the time, and for a shareholder thus to analyse his mental impressions after an interval of several years, so as to say which representation in particular induced > him to take shares, is a thing all but impossible. A person reading the prospectus looks at it as a whole, he thinks the undertaking is a fine commercial speculation, he sees good names attached to it, he observes other points which he thinks favourable, and on the whole he forms his conclusion. You cannot weigh the elements by ounces. It was said, and I think justly, by Sir G Jessel in Smith v. Chadwick that if the Court sees on the face of the statement that it is of such a nature as would induce a person to enter into the contract, or would tend to induce him to do so, or that it would be a part of the inducement to enter into the contract, the inference is, if he entered into the contract, that he acted on the inducement so held out, unless it is shown that he knew the facts, or that he avowedly did not rely on the statement whether he knew the facts or not.[17]

New Zealand Case Law on section 58 of the 78 Act

As stated, the former case law is of precedent value to the cognate provisions in the FMC Act discussed in this Booklet. Section 55(a)(ii) provided that a statement is untrue if it omits a particular which is material in the form and context in which it is included. Section 58 imposed criminal liability for untrue statements in any advertisement, investment statement or registered prospectus.

The first decision to consider section 58 and section 55(a)(ii) involved an offer of shares by Prorada Properties Limited, a subsidiary of Rada Corporation Limited.[18] A prospectus issued by Prorada Properties Limited in 1987 stated that Rada Investments Limited, another subsidiary of Rada Corporation Limited, would take up $50 million in share capital in the offeror company in effect on behalf of Rada Corporation. Rada Investments borrowed $50 million from a bank and subscribed for $50 million in shares. Prorada Properties in turn lent the $50 million to Rada Nominees Limited which in turn deposited the $50 million on term deposit with the lending bank and acted as guarantor for Rada Investments Limited's loan obligations. This meant that the issuer could not use for its own purposes the $50 million it had received from Rada Investments. Neither were funds placed on either the official short term money market or any unofficial money market as promised in the prospectus. In addition, the prospectus stated that investments would begin as soon as possible after the date of registration of the prospectus but in fact Prorada could not use the $50 million from Rada Investments and there was evidence that it had been decided before the prospectus was issued that no investments would be made by the company until a chief executive had been found. However, the prosecution only alleged that the statement in the prospectus that the $50 million payable by Rada Investments was misleading since it omitted a material particular, that is, that it did not have the cash or a firm arrangement to obtain the $50 million.[19]

Barker J hinted strongly that these other statements could have been the subject of an action.[20]

Barker J found that at the relevant time Rada Corporation had shares in other investments in excess of $50 million which could readily have been converted into cash within a matter of days. Effectively he treated Rada Corporation and Rada Investments as one party and treated the term "cash" as including that held in the Bank but also the cash that could be gained through Rada Corporation.[21] He took the view that looking at the position from "commercial reality" there was cash available if needed. Barker J was relatively liberal in terms of finding that "cash" included liquid assets held by a parent company, in effect removing the corporate veil to do away with the distinction between the subsidiary and the parent company, although the prospectus did indicate that Rada Corporation was investing through Rada Investments.[22]

On the issue of "materiality" Barker J held that:

> The omission was immaterial because, on 14 October 1986, Rada Corporation both had the $50 million in readily available assets or could have borrowed $50 million from a variety of sources. Investors reading the prospectus would have assumed that Rada Corporation would be funding the Prorada Properties share money either from its own sources or else from borrowings. They would have known of NZFP's interest in Rada Corporation and assumed that NZFP would never let Rada Corporation default in its obligations.[23]

Given the nature of the disclosure in the prospectus of Rada Corporation's involvement Barker J's decision would appear to be correct as materiality of an omission has to be determined on the basis of the statement "in the form and context in which it is included". His comments on the matters that he hinted may have been more appropriate for a prosecution provide greater insight into his views on materiality. On the issue that the money "invested" by Rada Investments was loaned to a related company rather than placed on the short-term money market he commented:

> I should have thought that the average investor, seeing a statement about investment in the short-term money market, would take it to mean just that. Possibly the expression could be stretched to include reputable unofficial short-term money market dealers as well as official dealers.
> The average investor would not have envisaged a loan to an in-house company which was really not a loan at all. I am not clear about Mr Gunn's reference when he said the directors could invest in anything. In > fairness, I note that the interest earned by Prorada Properties was probably the equivalent of what it would have received in the short-term money market. The more weighty objection is that the money was unavailable for Prorada Properties' use.[24]

Barker J's approach is consistent with Cooke J, in that the focus is on the "average" or "reasonable" investor. In addition, he would have expected disclosure of the in-house loan even though the interest actually received was equivalent to that on the short-term money market. In other words, investors may have received the same return as on the short-term money market but they should have been advised of this intention in the prospectus. In addition, it is clear that he thought the issue was a matter for the court as he did not accept the views of witnesses who stated that the statement relied upon by the Crown was material.[25]

The second decision to consider the second limb of section 55 was Department of Justice v. Witehira.[26] Witehira was managing director of Powerbeat International Limited which issued a short form prospectus. The prospectus included a forecast of income and a substantial component of the forecast income was a series of payments from a licensee of Powerbeat's technology. The prospectus stated that the forecasts were based on a number of assumptions including that the Powerbeat "expected" to receive the forecast income. At the same time the directors did not accept liability for any forecast for the level of expenditure and had included a statement that "the projections made in this forecast statement may be varied at the Director's discretion in response to changing commercial consideration".[27] The Department of Justice claimed that the prospectus contained an untrue statement by way of a material omission by its failure to refer to a deteriorating relationship with the licensee and in particular that a cheque for US$500,000 had not been honoured at the time the prospectus was signed. A second attempt to lodge the cheque was not known by the directors to be unsuccessful at the time the prospectus was distributed.

Spear J noted that the particular statement in the prospectus was:

> . . . a forecast couched in very cautionary terms as expected income. It is expressly stated to be conditional upon payment being made.[28]

He was of the view that the omission to refer to the cheque not having been met was not material because the directors did not fully appreciate that the cheque was worthless. They believed that there was some administrative or banking difficulty had led to the cheque not being met.[29] He also held that, on an objective basis, the dishonouring of the cheque the first time was not material "to that particular financial forecast statement in the form and context in which that statement is included in the prospectus". Accordingly, he held that the Crown had not proved that the particular statement as to expected income was untrue, even though the income from the licensee represented $500,000 out of the forecast $2,700,000.

Spear J made no attempt to define materiality, nor did he refer to earlier authorities on this point. His approach would appear to be inconsistent with Coleman v. Myers in that he concentrated on the directors' belief in determining materiality. In effect he substituted the "reasonable grounds for belief" defence under section 58(4) with the preliminary issue under section 55 as to whether or not the omission was material.[30] Given that an earlier payment by the licensee had been late and the first cheque had been dishonoured the use of the forecast without reference to these facts would arguably be material to a reasonable investor.[31] The directors' belief would only then become relevant to the defence under section 58(4). Spear J's focus on the directors' views rather than a reasonable investor's view is at odds with both Coleman v. Myers and Rada.

A third decision involving section 58 was District Registrar of Companies v. Heenan.[32] In this case the Registrar laid seven charges against Heenan, a director of a company which had issued two prospectuses. The second prospectus stated that $3,000 in fees had been paid to Heenan when in fact by the time the second prospectus was registered he had received $10,000. Callaghan J found there was an untrue statement and the issue was whether the defendant could successfully argue that the statement was "immaterial" under section 58(4).[33] Heenan led witnesses who stated that they had not taken the statement into account and argued that, as a result, it could not be material. Callaghan J referred to the "materiality" test in Coleman v. Myers and TSL Industries Inc v. Northway Inc and noted that these cases showed:

> . . . that there is an objective element in the ascertaining of whether an omitted fact is material or not. Thus it is the reasonable shareholder the Court is to consider, i.e. an objective approach.[34]

Callaghan J was of the view that Coleman v. Myers was not [30]Spear J held that in any event even if he had found that the statement was untrue he would have had no difficulty in finding that the statutory defense was met in that Witehira honestly held a belief that the company would receive that income. He also found the defendant was an impressive witness and that his position was supported by other members of the company including directors.

concerned with the relevant statutory provision when he came to consider "materiality" or "immateriality". As discussed earlier, it is true that Cooke J was dealing with an issue arising out of common law rather than statute but his reasoning would still appear to be very relevant given that he found that directors had a duty not to make misleading statements and had an obligation to disclose material matters and the common law position for promoters or directors of securities offering was similar to the obligations that Cooke J found for directors who purchase shares in a Coleman v. Myers situation.

Callaghan J turned to the dictionary definition of "immaterial" instead and stated:

> "Immaterial" in s. 58(4) is not related or compared to any particular circumstance or circumstances. I accept that it can be considered in relation to potential investors who are the people s58 is designed to protect.
> Whether the misstatement is "immaterial" is to be looked at not only from an actual investor standpoint but also from the reasonable investor's standpoint. "Immaterial" is defined in the Oxford Dictionary as meaning 'of no essential consequence, unimportant'.[35]

Callaghan J then went on to say:

> It was quite clear that none of the witnesses called for the informant had in fact turned their mind to this [statement]. While it is correct that the investors who gave evidence may not have altered their decision I cannot say viewed from the standpoint of a reasonable investor that the misstatement was immaterial. In my view it cannot be said that the difference between the $3,000 which was referred to in the second prospectus, and the $10,000 which was in fact the sum paid is unimportant or of no essential consequence. Here the difference between the two amounts is quite significant being $7,000. In considering this, the misstatement cannot be characterised as immaterial.[36]

Callaghan J's view that materiality is to be determined from a reasonable investor's view and that the views of actual investors are not decisive is consistent with earlier authority. Despite Callaghan J's views, the dictionary definition he relied upon would not appear to be inconsistent with the approach in Coleman v. Myers since reasonable investors would be unlikely to take into account information that was inconsequential or unimportant. It would merely appear to be another way of expressing the same approach.

A fourth decision on section 58 is R v. Baxter. Mr Baxter mounted an expedition to search for the wreck of the General Grant, a ship which founded on the west coast of the Auckland Islands in 1866.[37] The wreck was alleged to contain gold thought to be valued between $5 million and $50 million. Persons associated with Mr Baxter issued a prospectus but raised less than the amount required. The subscription monies were returned at the same time as investors were sent a letter inviting them to indicate their interest in investing in a further expedition on a smaller scale ($425,000 rather than $600,000). Baxter received around $80,000 which was initially put into a trust account and was later paid into his own account from which he paid for work to be done on the salvage ship which he now owned. On advice from his solicitor he registered a prospectus but did not advise his solicitor that he had already received funds. With those funds the refit went ahead and two unsuccessful attempts were made to recover the gold. The ship was finally seized for unpaid debts.

The Crown charged Baxter with having signed a registered prospectus which included an untrue statement and which was distributed. The untrue statement Baxter was said to have made was the statement required by clause 40 of the First Schedule of the Securities Regulations ("the clause 40 statement"). This clause requires a director to state that there are no "material matters" not already disclosed in the prospectus, when in fact in the Baxter case there were three undisclosed material matters. These matters were that the prospectus omitted to refer to the fact that prior to the distribution of the prospectus over $234,500.00 which had been raised from those investors had already been spent by Baxter on refitting his boat, purchasing equipment, personal expenditure and wages, that the prospectus implied that "almost all the funds raised from the shares issued would be applied to the actual conduct of the salvage expedition", and the prospectus omitted to refer to the fact that as 27 June 1995 the ship did not meet deep sea survey requirements and did not have the required certification for the expedition. The jury found that all three were untrue statements.

Blanchard J giving the judgment for the Court in upholding the convictions, stated that:

> The failure to mention that the Seafarer was still undergoing a refit and had not, only a few days before the commencement of the critical weather period of July/August obtained a deep sea certificate, was so obviously a material omission. The conviction almost seems to have been inevitable. That piece of information was one which the recipients of the prospectus certainly needed in order properly to be able to assess the risk of the investment. It was also going to be a highly speculative and hazardous investment. The investors understood that. But they also knew that the exploration licence would be expiring at the end of September and that there was a critical weather period. The risks relating to weather, expiry of exploration licence, the location of the wreck, the gold and the ownership of the gold were set out in the document. But there was a striking absence of any mention that on 27 June the vessel was not ready and, indeed, still at Westport. Mr Atkinson would attribute the unreadiness of the Seafearer until well into August to problems with electrical systems which emerged after 27 June. We are prepared to assume that it is debatable whether Mr Baxter was aware of them when he signed and registered the prospectus. However, he certainly knew that there was no marine certificate and still work to be done to obtain it. It was not necessary for the Crown to show that he acted dishonestly, merely that putting his signature to a statement that there were no other material matters, he was making an untrue statement. It was for him to > prove that the statement was immaterial or that he had reasonable grounds to believe that it was true (s58 (4)) and the jury was fully entitled to find that he had not done so. In our view it was open to them to make such findings also in relation to the other statement specified in particulars. The inaccuracies and omissions in them were important and glaring.[38]

Blanchard J's assessment of the materiality of the information was that it was information that "recipients of the prospectus certainly needed in order properly to be able to assess the risk of the investment". This statement supports the view that the information needed to be such that it "would" be taken into account, which is consistent with Cooke J's view in Coleman v. Myers, but that it is not necessary that the information is decisive or determinative in that process. It perhaps also indicates that information needed to assess the risks of an investment is by its nature material. At the end of the passage quoted above Blanchard J pointed out that the "accuracies and omissions were important and glaring" which is also consistent with Callaghan J's view of materiality as a matter which of important or consequence. Accordingly, the test, however expressed, requires the court to take the standpoint of the reasonable investor and assess the value of the information to the investor's decision-making process.

The global financial crisis on 2007-8 prompted a string of finance company collapses in New Zealand. The New Zealand regulator launched several prosecutions under s 58. Two decisions on section 58 were R v. Moses & Ors 8 July 2011, HC Auckland, CRI 2009-004-1388 and R v. Steigrad [2011] NZCA 304. Both of these cases concerned the collapse of finance companies following the global financial crisis. In Moses, three directors of Nathans Finance were held to be criminally liable for contravening s 58 of the 78 Act in relation to the distribution of prospectuses and advertisements containing untrue statements. In Steigrad, the Court of Appeal held that criminal liability under s 58 can arise where a statement becomes untrue due to a change in circumstance after the advertisement or registered prospectus is distributed. In R v Petricevic [2012] NZHC 665, three directors of Bridgecorp Limited and Bridgecorp Investments Limited were charged under s 58. Two directors (Petricevic and Roest) were found guilty on all charges and one (Steigrad) was acquitted on four charges but found guilty on six of the charges.

In Petricevic, Venning J considered the elements of the s 58 offence. His Honour began by stating that the accused were presumed innocent and the onus was on the Crown to prove beyond reasonable doubt the accused were guilty. Venning J remarked that proof beyond reasonable doubt is a very high standard of proof and that a reasonable doubt would be "an honest and reasonable uncertainty left in my mind about the guilt of the accused after I have given careful and impartial consideration to all of the evidence". As the charges under s 58 were strict liability offences, Venning J noted that the Crown must prove the statements were untrue "but it is not required to prove criminal intent on the part of the directors in relation to those offences." If the Crown successfully establishes that the statement is untrue then there is a defence available if the accused can "demonstrate, on the balance of probabilities, either that the statement was immaterial or that he had reasonable grounds to believe, and did believe, that the statement was true."

All directors were charged under s 58 for signing a registered prospectus, which was distributed and included an untrue statement. The court found the offer documents distributed contained the following untrue statements:

- The offer documents stated that a $76 million loan was made to an unrelated party, when that party was in fact ultimately owned and controlled by Bridgecorp and one of its directors.
- The offer documents stated that there had been no change in Bridgecorp's financial circumstances since June 2006, when in fact new investments had declined significantly, impaired loans had more than doubled and actual collections were 20% of forecast.
- The offer documents stated that Bridgecorp managed liquidity by maintaining a minimum cash reserve with a bank, when in fact no cash reserve was held.
- The offer documents failed to state that Bridgecorp's liquidity position had deteriorated since June 2006.
- The offer documents stated that Bridgecorp never missed an interest or principal payment to investors, but from February 2007 Bridgecorp regularly missed such payments. Although the offer documents were correct in this particular when first distributed in December 2006, they became untrue in February 2007, and should have been withdrawn.

Venning J noted that the word "statement" includes statements explicitly set out within the advertisement or prospectus. When considering the definition of what constitutes an untrue statement under s 55 of the Securities Act, the term "untrue" should be given a wider meaning than its popular use. As regards omissions, Venning J stated that while s 55 extends liability to cases of omission, the omission must be linked back to the statement as required by s 55(a)(ii). It is not an offence to omit something from the prospectus unless that omission makes a statement in the prospectus untrue. For example, the Bridgecorp prospectus contained under the heading "Liquidity Risk" a statement that Bridgecorp mitigated liquidity risks by having a policy of maintaining a minimum cash reserve held on bank deposit. Roest gave evidence that he believed there was such a policy but could not recall if it was documented and no evidence was provided at any stage to prove that a cash reserve was in place. Venning J held that even if the general evidence about Bridgecorp's intention "could be elevated to the status of a policy to maintain a cash reserve, the statement was untrue in that it was misleading in the form and context in which it was included in the prospectus."[39] Further his Honour held that:

> [A] notional investor would take from reading that statement that Bridgecorp had a structured policy of holding funds on bank deposit to manage the risk of difficulty in raising funds at short notice to meet its financial commitments as they fell due. The notional investor would take comfort from that. That was not, however, the true position. The true position, if outlined, would have been that Bridgecorp had stopped new lending, that it intended to set aside a fund to manage liquidity issues and build the fund to approximately $50 million before recommencing lending, but that figure had not been achieved.[40]

Venning J found Steigrad not guilty as he could establish on the balance of probabilities that he had reasonable grounds for believing the statements found to be untrue were true.

Materiality and Financial Statements

The New Zealand Society of Accountants ("NZSA") has also considered the issue of "materiality" in the context of financial statements. The Statement of Standard Accounting Practice No. 6 (SSAP6), "Materiality in Financial Statement" establishes the criteria for applying the materiality test to information for inclusion in the external financial statements of any reporting entity.[41] It provides that:

> A statement, fact, or item is material if, given full consideration of the surrounding circumstances at the time of completion of the financial statements, it is of such a nature that its disclosure, or the method of treating it, would be likely to influence the making of decisions by the users of the financial statements.[42]

This definition would appear to go beyond that established in the cases. It requires the item to "influence the making of decisions" whereas the New Zealand cases only require the item to be relevant to the investment decision or such that it would be taken into account by a reasonable investor.

SSAP6 also sets out factors which may assist in determining materiality. These include the surrounding circumstances, the likely users of the particular financial statements, and the information needs of those users, its nature and its amount.[43] It suggests as guidelines that a variation in amount by more than 10 percent is material (unless there is contrary evidence), a variation less than 5 percent is immaterial, and that a variation between 5 percent and 10 percent "is a matter of judgment and depends upon the particular circumstances of the case."[44] This is helpful for items that can be quantified (although SSAP6 points out that these percentages are not "magic numbers"), but obviously do not help for non-quantifiable matters such as whether or not the past business record of a director should be disclosed (for example, a bankruptcy twenty years ago).

Summary of the former law

In summary, the courts in determining whether information that has not been disclosed is material have, except for Witehira, focused on whether a reasonable investor would take into account that information in making an investment decision, although the information does not have to be decisive in making that decision. The failure to make any mention of an otherwise material matter will not save a director from making an untrue statement because of the requirement for the directors to make a clause 40 statement in the prospectus.

In New Zealand, matters which have been considered material include: the market value of assets as compared to book values (Coleman v. Myers), the fate of companies (liquidations, receiverships) for which a director of an issuer had been a director (Power NZ), the placement and timing of investments (Rada), the level of fees paid to a director/promoter (Heenan), the use of funds by a promoter, the state of preparations for a venture and the risks involved in a venture (Baxter), the valuation of assets (Agricola and Sovereign Mines), the existence of contrary valuations (Agricola), and the prior relationship of an issuer with a valuer (Agricola). As already noted, however, at the end of the day the application of the materiality test is highly case specific (and perhaps even court specific).

In the United States, matters such as the failure to disclose advanced negotiations for a merger, but not preliminary negotiations, the failure to disclose a substantial dividend reduction, the significant understatement of assets value, a substantial overstatement of revenue, and a mineral find by an exploration company have been considered material in the context of takeovers. For public offerings inadequate disclosure of potential tax and environmental liability have been held to be material, as was the failure to disclose that underwriters could purchase out of an offering.

§ NZ:68 Criminal liability under the FMC Act

Generally speaking, the FMC Act demonstrates a shift away from criminal liability in favor of civil liability orders. Criminal liability attaches to, inter alia:

- Making a regulated offer without preparing and lodging a PDS: s 48 (3);
- Giving a PDS if offer requires disclosure: s. 53;
- Supply of prescribed information in PDS: s 63 (3);
- Accepting an application in waiting period: s 65 (2);

- False or misleading statements, omissions, and new matters requiring disclosure: s 82 and s 510;
- Offering financial products of entity that does not exist: s 88 (4);
- Failure to update register of offers: s 95 (3);
- Request disclosure: s 96 (3);
- Failure to provide information to Registrar: s 98 (3);
- Defective ongoing disclosure: s 99 and s 511;
- Failure to provide confirmation: s 100 (5);
- Failure to lodge notice of change of supervisor of debt security: s 123 (2);
- Failure to lodge changes to governing document of registered scheme: s 141 (2);
- Failure to provide copy of actuarial report to supervisor or FMA in case of registered scheme: s 169 (4);
- Failure to lodge notice of change of supervisor of registered scheme: s 194 (2);

- Failure to retain copies of documents for 7 years: s 227 (3);
- the insider conduct prohibitions: section 244;
- false or misleading statement or information: section 262;
- false or misleading appearance of trading: section 269;
- failure to comply with directors' and officers' disclosure obligations: section 19ZD;
- failure to keep interests register: section 179;
- Failure to comply with a direction by the FMA to a licensed market operator: s 370;
- Knowingly or recklessly contravening prohibition on offers where defective disclosure in PDS or register entry: s 510;
- Knowingly or recklessly contravening other provisions relating to defective disclosure: s 511; and
- General offence for false or misleading statements: s 512.

§ NZ:69 Crimes Act 1961

Section 542 of the FMC Act states that nothing in the FMC Act shall limit or diminish any liability that any person may incur under any rule of law or other enactment. Some provisions of the Crimes Act 1961 may hence be relevant. The Crimes Act can be accessed online from the New Zealand legislation website.

As to jurisdiction: the relevant provisions are ss 5 and 7. Section 7 has the effect of extending the territorial reach of the Crimes Act by catching any act or omission that occurs in New Zealand. Thus, so long as part of the actus reus occurs in New Zealand, the Act applies.

As for substantive offences: the relevant provisions are s 240 and s 242. Section 240 catches an obtaining by deception or causing loss by deception. Section 242 catches false statements. As to punishment: s 241 provides for up to 7 years imprisonment for a violation of s 240.

V. NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ NZ:70 Fintech developments in New Zealand

There is no 'one stop" regulator for Fintech related matters. Regulation is dispersed across relevant subject areas and is technology neutral. Most Fintech businesses fall under the purview of the Financial Markets Authority (FMA) as involving a "financial product" or the offering of a "financial service" as defined in the Financial Markets Conduct Act, 2013 (FMC Act).

Equity Crowdfunding and Peer-to- Peer Lending: In 2013, New Zealand introduced two Fintech enabled fundraising innovations in the FMC Act: (1) equity crowd funding (ECF), and (2) peer-to-peer lending (P2PL). The FMC Act established a licensing regime for ECF and P2PL providers, with additional and more detailed requirements contained in the FMC Regulations, 2014. As a result of these legislative changes, companies can make offers through licensed ECF and P2PL intermediaries' facilities without having to comply with the full regulatory disclosure requirements under financial markets legislation. In turn, this reduces compliance costs and enables investors to invest in early start-up financing which provides funds for fledgling companies with significant potential to growth. However, the ECF regime cannot be used for initial coin offerings.

Cryptocurrency: Early research on cryptocurrencies in New Zealand appears in Sims, Kariyawasam and Mayes, Regulating Cryptocurrencies in New Zealand.[1] The use of cryptocurrencies is permitted in New Zealand, but the adoption of digital assets by persons in New Zealand is relatively low. In 2019, the New Zealand Tax Authority, the Inland Revenue Department (IRD), approved the use of crypto payments as part of employee remuneration agreements, subject to a strict framework.[2] The IRD treats cryptocurrency as property for tax purposes and ordinary rules apply.

Initial Coin Offerings: There do not appear to have been any successful initial coin offerings (ICOs) or other offerings of digital assets via the regulated offer procedure in the Financial Markets Conduct Act, 2013. Why is this the case? The compliance cost of a regulated primary market offer under the FMC Act is one deterrent. A second deterrent is the fair dealing provisions in the FMC Act (where a "financial product" is concerned) which catch misleading statements and representations. A third deterrent is the provisions of FairTrading Act 1986 which would apply to a Whitepaper where no financial product is involved. It is possible that some capital raising for Fintech businesses has occurred via the exemptions to the regulated offer regime in the FMC Act. The key commercial reason for little or no digital asset offerings appears to be the wide scope of the law regulating fundraising in the primary market in New Zealand and the vigilance of the regulator. As stated, the New Zealand equity crowdfunding regime in the FMC Act does not extend to digital assets. For these and other good reasons (such as the ease of international regulatory arbitrage), primary market activity for digital assets is minimal.

Abusive Market Practices: Of the scam complaints seen by the FMA from 2018–2020, the three most common subjects were cryptocurrencies, equity offers and foreign exchange.[3] If made aware of the scam, the FMA will issue a warning on its website.

Fintech Business: According to the industry group FinTech NZ, there are several FinTech businesses in New Zealand.[4] Most involve "financial services" and include digital asset exchanges such as the Digital Asset Exchange Limited (Dasset) and other businesses in payments (Thankyou Payroll), investing, crypto micro-saving, robo-advice, equity crowdfunding (ECF) and peer-to peer lending (P2PL) among others.[5] The bank-owned entity, Payments NZ, has been working towards a national switch since 2018. The government has initiated a Digital ID project known as the Digital Identity Transition Program led by the Department of Internal Affairs in collaboration with the private sector and released its Strategy for a Digital Public Service (March 2020), which would likely rely on blockchain technology.[6]

Financial Markets Regulator: The FMA supervises the offer of "financial products", the provision of "financial services", the licensing of financial advisers and enforces fair dealing rules. Whether a cryptoasset is a "financial product" will depend on the specific characteristics and economic substance of that cryptoasset; please see further below.

- the integrity of the financial system.

The Department of Internal Affairs (DIA) is responsible for anti-money laundering and counter terrorism financing legislation (AML/CTF) pursuant to the Anti-Money Laundering and Countering the Financing of Terrorism Act 2009. As such, the DIA is the lead AML contact for virtual asset service providers (VASPs). Financial services provided by VASPs fall within the existing definition of a 'financial institution' in the AML/CFT Act 2009. The definition includes: transferring money or value for, or on behalf of, a customer; issuing or managing the means of payment (for example, credit or debit cards, cheques, travelers' cheques, money orders, bankers' drafts, or electronic money) and money or currency changing.

The Commerce Commission is responsible for competition law under the Commerce Act 1986 and administers the Fair-Trading Act 1986. The latter Act contains prohibitions on misleading and deceptive conduct that extend to misrepresentations. In the result, the Fair-Trading Act could catch, for example, the Whitepaper of digital asset offerings or services that are not covered by the FMC Act.[7]

What is a "financial service": The term "financial service" is given the same meaning as in s 5 of the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 (NZ). An operator of a "financial service" must be registered. Section 5 defines the term expansively and includes:

> 5. Meaning of financial service
> (1) In this Act, financial service means any of the following financial services:
> (f) operating a money or value transfer service:
> (g) issuing and managing means of payment (for example, credit and debit cards, cheques, travellers' cheques, money orders, bankers' drafts, and electronic money):
> Section 5 (1)(f), "operating a money or value transfer service" has a wide ambit. The words "value transfer service" catch a digital asset exchange (fiat to crypto, crypto to crypto and crypto to fiat) and this term survives in Part 2A of the amending legislation, the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act, 2019 (NZ) which comes into force in March 2021. Similarly, the words "issuing and managing means of payment" in s 5 (1) (g) catch an ICO and the operation of a digital exchange.

Meaning of "Financial Product": Section 7 of the FMC Act states that a "financial product" means a debt security, an equity security, a managed investment product or a derivative. These terms are further defined in sections 8-9. FMA commentary on these terms appears below.

Offering a Financial Product: An offering of a financial product under the FMC Act must comply with Part 2 (Fair Dealing) and Part 3 (Disclosure of offers of financial products). Part 2 contains a set of provisions aimed at misleading and deceptive conduct and the making of unsubstantiated representations. Part 3 imposes disclosure obligations. Issuers of digital assets may seek to avoid the application of Parts 2 and 3 of the FMC Act for two reasons: the risks of non-compliance under Part 2 and the cost of compliance under Part 3.

Regulatory Approach: The FMA sees its role in facilitating innovation as central to its objective of promoting fair, efficient, and transparent markets. However, it states that new ideas and technologies often give rise to new risks, and investor interests still need safeguarding. The FMA considers it adopts a balanced approach when considering innovation. It recommends engaging early to determine if a product or service will be regulated and will consider scaling and modifying regulatory obligations to suit the proposal. This appears to be a less formalized take on the Regulatory Sandbox approach seen in other jurisdictions. The first formal Regulatory Sandbox is considered to have been created by the UK Financial Conduct Authority (FCA), which defines the sandbox as a 'safe space' in which businesses can test innovative products, services, business models and delivery mechanisms without immediately incurring all the normal regulatory consequences of engaging in the activity in question.[8] The concept was formally introduced in Australia by the equivalent regulator[9] and supported by an Innovation Hub.[10]

§ NZ:71 FMA guidance on cryptocurrency and cryptoasset services (March 2020)

Guidance from the FMA on primary and secondary market activity involving cryptoassets was issued in March 2020 and is available on the FMA website fma.govt.nz. To better understand the FMA's views, we reproduce portions of this guidance in a restructured and abridged form for clarity of exposition. The FMA uses the term, "cryptoasset" throughout its guidance. This term should be regarded as a portmanteau term covering the full spectrum of cryptocurrency and digital assets. Further, the guidance must be treated with caution in the absence of judicial consideration.

FMA Guidance on ICOs: The FMA has stated:

Cryptoassets, also known as virtual assets, cryptocurrencies, digital coins, or tokens, are available online, for example via exchanges, initial coin offers (ICOs) and token events.

Initial coin offers (ICOs) are a form of fundraising where you receive cryptoassets (also known as virtual assets, cryptocurrencies, digital coins or tokens) that carry certain rights, such as providing access to a new product or service, or an interest in an underlying asset or project.

- If your ICO is offering a cryptoasset that is a 'financial product' under the FMC Act, additional obligations will apply.
- ICOs may involve the financial service of 'operating a value transfer service.'
- ICOs may also involve the financial service of 'issuing and managing a means of payment.'

If you provide a 'financial service' related to cryptoassets, you must comply with the fair dealing provisions in Part 2 of the FMC Act. These are broad principles that prohibit you from engaging in misleading conduct or making false, deceptive, or unsubstantiated statements. If the overall impression on your website, social media sites and promotional material is misleading, it will be in breach of the fair dealing requirements.

How an ICO is regulated in New Zealand depends on whether:

- the cryptoasset you are offering is a 'financial product' under the Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013 (FMC Act). Cryptoassets that are financial products are also known as "security tokens". Whether a cryptoasset is a financial product will depend on the specific characteristics and economic substance of that cryptoasset. If your ICO is offering cryptoassets that are financial products, further obligations will apply
- you are in the business of providing a 'financial service' (this will depend on the specific structure and features of the ICO)
- the person buying the cryptoasset is a member of the public (known as a 'retail investor') or a very experienced investor (known as a 'wholesale investor')
- the investor is based in New Zealand or overseas.

Types of financial products

The Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013 (FMC Act) sets out four types of financial products—debt securities; equity securities; managed investment products and derivatives.

Debt securities

A cryptoasset is a debt security if investors have a right to be repaid money or paid interest on money lent to, deposited with, or owed by a person, company, or unincorporated entity making a cryptoasset offer. For example, a cryptoasset linked to the value of a dollar or commodity could be a debt security if:

- investors can purchase a cryptoasset with money
- investors holding the cryptoasset have the right to redeem that cryptoasset for money; and
- an investor holding the cryptoasset is not the beneficial owner of funds from which redemption proceeds are paid.

To make a regulated offer of debt securities, you must:

- register a product disclosure statement (PDS)
- appoint a licensed supervisor
- meet fair dealing requirements
- meet financial reporting obligations.

Equity securities

A cryptoasset is an equity security if investors buy, or have the option to buy, for example, a share in a New Zealand incorporated company or a body corporate incorporated outside New Zealand. A cryptoasset that provides an option to buy a share is an offer of both the cryptoasset and the equity share.

If you make a regulated offer of equity securities, you must:

- register a product disclosure statement (PDS)
- meet fair dealing requirements
- meet financial reporting obligations.

Investor interests and rights will be set out in the company's constitution. This means a trust deed is not required.

Managed investment products

For these products, an investor will:

- contribute money or cryptoassets to receive interests (cryptoassets) in a scheme (a structure or project that allows investors to pool their money).
- have a 'right to receive a financial benefit' (as defined in the FMC Act) from the scheme—such as money, rights to a share in profits, cryptoassets, additional cryptoassets, or changes in the cryptoassets' value and these benefits are principally produced by someone else, and
- not have day-to-day control over the project or business (even if they have the right to be consulted or to give directions).

The manager of a managed investment scheme must be licensed by us to make a regulated offer to retail investors in New Zealand. The manager is the person, company, or unincorporated entity issuing the cryptoassets.

What are utility tokens?

Utility tokens (sometimes called "application tokens") typically give investors the right to access and/or use a company's platform, product, or service. They often grant holders rights similar to pre-payment vouchers.

Are utility tokens financial products?

While each ICO must be looked at on an individual basis, utility tokens are not considered managed investment products simply because they can be traded on a cryptoasset exchange or other secondary market. This is because any profits an investor receives by trading those utility tokens on a cryptoasset exchange are not 'rights to receive a financial benefit' under a managed investment scheme.[1]

ICOs and wholesale or offshore offers

ICOs that offer cryptoassets that are financial products to wholesale investors, or to investors based outside New Zealand, will not be subject to full licensing, governance, and disclosure requirements under the FMC Act. However, fair dealing requirements under Part 2 of the FMC Act still apply.

ICOs and financial services

While each ICO must be looked at on an individual basis, most ICOs involve the financial service of 'operating a value transfer service'. ICOs may also involve the financial service of 'issuing and managing a means of payment'. If your ICO provides financial services, you must:

- Comply with the fair dealing requirements in Part 2 of the FMC Act. These requirements prohibit you from engaging in misleading conduct or making false, deceptive, or unsubstantiated statements in your white paper, website, or other promotional material.
- Register as a financial service provider if you are based in New Zealand. You must also pay the applicable fees and levies, for each category of financial service you are in the business of providing. If you offer financial services to retail clients, you must belong to a dispute resolution scheme.
- Comply with anti-money laundering obligations.

If you provide cryptoasset-related financial services in New Zealand in the ordinary course of your business, you will likely be captured as a 'financial institution' under the AML/CFT Act.

ICOs that do not involve financial products or financial services

Even if you are not providing a financial service or financial prod-

[Section NZ:71]

[1]Emphasis added. This statement by the FMA must be treated with caution. The relevant section—section 9 (1) (b) states "those interests are rights to participate in, or receive, financial benefits produced principally by the efforts of another person under the scheme . . ." Italics supplied. Suppose that utility tokens are issued, and the issuer subsequently arranges for the tokens to be quoted on a crypto exchange. The arrangement involves the efforts of another person (the issuer). Suppose further, the token appreciates in value on the exchange. The token holder now has the ability (right) to sell tokens. Is this ability to sell utility tokens at a profit, a right to "participate in, or receive, financial benefits produced principally by the efforts of another person under the scheme"? For an elaboration of this argument, see G. Walker, "Crowd-Sourced Funding, Cryptocurrency and Initial Coin Offerings in Australia and New Zealand" (2018) 36 (1) C&SLJ 111-119. ASIC Information Sheet 225, Initial Coin Offerings and Cryptoassets (May 2019) available at the website of the Australian Securities and Investment Commission (ASIC) provides support for this view.

uct, 'fair dealing' requirements still apply to white papers and other communications about your ICO under the Fair-Trading Act 1986.

We can designate cryptoassets to be a financial product if, based on their economic substance, this is necessary to promote fair and efficient financial markets in New Zealand or any of the other purposes of the FMC Act. For example, a cryptoasset giving investors voting rights and an interest in the company and its profits could be designated an equity security. A designation could be accompanied by an exemption to modify FMC Act disclosure and governance requirements.

Can cryptoassets be offered through crowdfunding platforms?

No, crowdfunding in the form of an ICO is not the same as crowdfunding covered by the FMC Act. We license crowdfunding platforms to provide an intermediary service via a facility, such as a website, where companies make offers of equity securities to retail investors. Equity crowdfunding under the FMC Act enables companies to raise up to $2 million in any 12-month period, without registering a PDS.

FMA guidance on financial services: The FMA has stated:

Exchanges

Exchanges issuing their own cryptoassets to facilitate trading fall within the financial service category of 'issuing and managing means of payment'. Exchanges allowing cryptoasset trading fall within the financial service category of 'operating a value transfer service'. If you allow trading of cryptoassets that are financial products under the FMC Act you need to consider whether you are operating a financial product market. If so, you may need to be licensed.

Wallets

If you are a wallet provider storing cryptoassets or money on behalf of others, and you facilitate exchanges between cryptoassets or between money and cryptoassets, your services fall within the category of 'operating a value transfer service'. If you hold money for depositors, you may be offering debt securities. However, if depositor funds are held in trust, your wallets may not be debt securities. Debt securities are financial products. They have additional regulatory requirements under the FMC Act.

Broking

If you arrange cryptoasset transactions, you are providing the financial service of 'operating a value transfer service'. If you are providing safe-keeping or administration services in relation to cryptoassets, you are providing the financial service of 'keeping, investing, administering, or managing money, securities, or investment portfolios on behalf of other persons. If you provide transaction services in relation to cryptoassets that are financial products you may have obligations as a broker under the Financial Advisers Act 2008.

Providing investment opportunities in cryptoassets

If you are providing investment opportunities in cryptoassets (e.g. via a derivatives issuer providing cryptoasset options or via a managed investment scheme investing in cryptoassets), you will be regulated in the same way as if you were providing investment opportunities in traditional assets or financial products.

AML/CFT obligations and cryptoasset related financial services

Cryptoassets are vulnerable to misuse by criminals to launder money and fund terrorism as they allow greater levels of anonymity and have global reach, making it easier for cross-border payments to be made, and they can be traded easily.

If you provide cryptoasset-related financial services in New Zealand in the ordinary course of your business, you will likely be captured as a 'financial institution' under the AML/CFT Act.

Judicial Interpretation

Various government and regulatory communications have outlined the New Zealand approach to cryptocurrency. In a common law jurisdiction, the application of these laws and regulations is rendered significantly stronger and clearer once judicially considered. As mentioned above, significant persuasive weight is given to judicial decisions in other common law jurisdictions such as Australia and the United Kingdom for these previously untested questions.

Cryptocurrency is property

The decision of the High Court of New Zealand in Ruscoe & Moore v. Cryptopia Limited 2020 (in liquidation) [2020] NZHC 728 considered the legal nature of cryptocurrencies for the first time in New Zealand. Cryptopia operated as a cryptocurrency trading exchange. All cryptocurrencies on the exchange were held in Cryptopia's hot wallets or cold wallets. Cryptopia's servers were hacked and about $30 million of cryptocurrencies were stolen. The company was put into liquidation in May 2019, at which point Cryptopia held cryptocurrencies worth around $170 million for itself and for its customers. The liquidators sought instructions from the Court as to the categorisation and distribution of Cryptopia's cryptocurrency assets.

The two issues were:

1. Is cryptocurrency "property" as defined in section 2 of the Companies Act 1993 and, as a related issue, can cryptocurrencies form the subject matter of a trust?
2. Was Cryptopia holding cryptocurrency on trust for account holders through the provision of its storage and exchange services?

The High Court relied on United Kingdom Jurisdiction Taskforce, Legal Statement on Cryptoassets and Smart Contracts (2019) and caselaw from other common law jurisdictions.[2] The Court endorsed the "classic statement" of the definition of "property" in the 1965 House of Lords case National Provincial Bank Limited v Ainsworth [1965] AC 1175 at 1247–1248 per Lord Wilberforce. The Court was satisfied that cryptocurrencies meet all four of the requirements for "property" established by that case, viz.: identifiable subject matter, identifiable by third parties, capable of assumption by third parties, and some degree of permanence or stability.

The Court dispensed with the "simplistic" argument that cryptocurrencies are mere information, primarily because "the whole purpose behind cryptocurrencies is to create an item of tradeable value not simply to record or to impart in confidence information or knowledge".

Cryptopia was found to be holding each type of cryptocurrency stored by it on a separate express trust for the relevant account holders. The Court reached this conclusion based on the inherent nature of the relationship between Cryptopia and each account holder. Account records, customer information, and marketing all strongly implied that Cryptopia was acting as a "custodian" for account holders. The subject matter of each trust was easily identifiable by reference to Cryptopia's structured query language (SQL) database, which recorded each account holder's details, including their account balance. The combined effect of the Court's decision on these two issues is that the cryptocurrencies stored by Cryptopia are held for the sole benefit of the relevant account holders and, so, are excluded from the pool of assets available to general creditors.

§ NZ:72 Crowd-Sourced Funding

As stated, New Zealand introduced a Crowd-Sourced Funding (CSF) regime in the Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013 (FMC Act) allowing the raising of up to NZD2 million in a 12-month period. The reported take-up of ECF and P2PL in New Zealand has been positive.[1] At first glance, however, an ICO is unlikely via CSF in either Australia or New Zealand since both regimes contemplate the issue of shares and ICO issuers typically eschew fund raising via share issuance.

§ NZ:73 Initial Coin Offerings (ICOs) of Digital Tokens

A research report published by Autonomous Next in 2017 and entitled #Token Mania describes ICOs as a ". . . new funding mechanism using distributed ledger technology that displaces both public markets (IPOs) and private investment (Venture Capital) with a billion of USD equivalent cryptocurrency".[1] The economics of ICOs are discussed in a useful paper by Sehra, Smith and Gomes[2] who also address ICO market dynamics including "ICO Lemons".[3] As far as issuers are concerned, an ICO offers several commercial advantages; there is no dilution of equity as might occur in a funding round with a venture capital firm or initial public offering and the compliance costs involved are lower than an IPO.[4] As stated, however, a key legal issue arising from the ICO phenomenon in New Zealand is whether the digital tokens issued in an ICO should be characterised as a Managed Investment Scheme (MIS) for the purposes of securities regulation.

To simplify the characterisation question, a digital or cryptocurrency represented by a digital token is not a security. At the other end of the spectrum, a digital utility token with purely functional use does not appear—at least initially—to be a security. For example, a digital utility token that simply enables the user to access a platform is not, prima facie, a security but is analogous to the purchase of subscription rights. If, however, the digital utility token is subsequently traded on an exchange then the status of the token is less clear.[5] On one view, a subsequent sale is analogous to the position of the seller of a car. The other view is that the initial purchase of the token and its subsequent sale on an exchange may be characterised together as part of a MIS.[6] Between these extremes lie digital tokens that may be susceptible to characterisation as a security from the outset.

Note the illuminating discussion of the Japanese game, Pachinko, and the analogy with utility tokens. The ball "token" in Pachinko is analogous to a laundry token but in Pachinko the token is part of a "work around" of Japanese gaming law. Similarly, digital tokens can be used to "work-around" securities regulation.

[3]The reference is to George Akerlof, "The Market for Lemons: Quality Uncertainty and the Market Mechanism" (1970) 84 QJ Econ 488. Recall that the thrust of Akerlof's analysis is concerned with the issue of national corruption. Query whether national blanket bans on digital currency (such as China, Indonesia and Vietnam) are largely driven by a concern to address corruption-related issues by denying a means of money laundering—a case of corruption concerns trumping technological innovation. As far as China is concerned, the prevention of capital outflows is another reason.

Generally speaking, digital tokens are neither shares nor debentures; however, they may be caught under the rubric of a MIS. Under the cognate U.S. law, an "investment contract' is a security and there are obvious parallels between the concept of an investment contract under U.S. law and a MIS in New Zealand. In both countries, the concept is given a wide interpretation.[7] For example, in the U.S. in Tcherepin v Knight, the court stated obiter that in analysing whether something is a security, "form should be disregard for substance";[8] in Forman it was said that "the emphasis should be on the economic realities underlying a transaction and not on the name appended thereto".[9] In 2017, the SEC opined that the digital tokens issued by "The DAO" were securities under the Securities Act 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.[10] The SEC applied the tests enunciated in Howey[11] to find that the tokens issued by the DAO amounted to an investment in an investment contract and were hence securities. In brief, the Howey test involves four factors: (1) the investment of money (glossed by the SEC as a "contribution of value"); (2) a common enterprise; (3) a reasonable expectation of profit and (4) profit derived from the managerial efforts of others.[12] Further SEC guidance as regards ICOs as investment contracts under U.S. law is contained in the Munchee cease-and-desist proceedings.[13]

[6]This proposition assumes that the subsequent sale occurs on a third-party exchange and the listing of the token is undertaken by the token issuer; that is, the listing was managed and arranged by the issuer. If the issuer promised such a listing, the issue is even clearer. Conversely, a listing arranged by the holder is not a matter managed by the issuer.

§ NZ:74 Managed Investment Scheme (MIS) in New Zealand

An MIS or Managed Investment Scheme is defined in § 9 of the FMC Act which is similar to the Australian definition. Under § 7 of the FMC Act, a "managed investment product" (defined in s 8 (3) by reference to § 9 as an interest in a MIS) is a financial product and hence the prohibition in § 39 applies (offer of financial products for issue requires disclosure to an investor unless an exclusion applies). In the result, an ICO offering in New Zealand that can be characterised as a MIS requires a product disclosure statement unless an exclusion under Part 1 of Schedule 1 of the FMC Act applies.

The FMA has stated:

> A token is a managed investment product . . . if:
> - investors contribute money or cryptocurrency to receive interests (tokens) in a scheme (a structure or project that allows investors to pool their money)
> - returns, income and rewards to investors from the scheme – such as money, cryptocurrency, additional tokens, or changes in the tokens' value – are principally produced by someone else, and
> - investors do not have any day-to-day control over the project or business.
> The manager of a managed investment scheme must be licensed by us in order to make offers to retail investors in New Zealand. The manager is the person, company, or unincorporated entity issuing the tokens. When you make a regulated offer on managed investment scheme products, you must also:
> - register a PDS
> - appoint a licensed supervisor
> - have a trust deed that sets out investor rights and the supervisor's role
> - meet financial reporting and fair dealing obligations.[1]

Further guidance was issued by the FMA in two Press Releases in 2019: FMA, "Cryptocurrencies" (14 March 2019) and "Cryptocurrency Services" (5 February 2019).

It should come as no surprise that persons seeking to raise money from the public in New Zealand should be required to make formal disclosures.[2] In New Zealand, the billions lost in the failure of listed

§ NZ:75 New Financial Advice Regime

The Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 is in effect. This Act introduced new Subparts 5A and 5B into the FMC Act together with a new Part 2 that amended the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008. Part 3 repealed the Financial Advisers Act 2008 and moved key provisions into the FMC Act.

§ NZ:76 Climate-related Disclosures

The Financial Sector (Climate-related Disclosures and Other Matters) Act 2021 amended the Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013 by introducing Part 7A titled, "Climate-related disclosures for certain FMC reporting entities with higher level of public accountability." The effect of the Act is to introduce obligations on "climate reporting entities" ("financial entities"), singled out by the Act for their large size, to keep proper records relating to their obligations to make climate-related disclosures, prepare climate statements, and lodge these statements. In general, climate statements must be prepared, signed off by directors of the financial entity and lodged within a deadline of four months from the balance date (ss.461W-461Z). A failure to prepare such a statement, lodge it, or include it in the financial entity's annual statement attracts fines. The Bill also applies to the New Zealand businesses of overseas companies that fall within the same definition (s.461Y). The Act is in full effect as of October 2022.

§ NZ:77 Corporate governance reform package scheduled for 2025

- Phase 1 focuses on changes to the Companies Act to better reflect the modern New Zealand business environment, simplify compliance, deter and detect poor business practices and increase uptake of the New Zealand Business Number. Phase 1 will be legislated for as part of the Corporate Governance Amendment Bill 2025.
- Phase 2 will follow an NZ Law Commission review of directors' duties and related issues of liability, penalties and offences, and enforcement. This review is expected to commence in 2025.

The key aspects of the Phase 1 corporate governance reforms are summarised in the table below which is extracted from the "Insights" series appearing on the website of the New Zealand law firm, Bell Gully; please see "Insights" dated 19 August 2024 on the Bell Gully website: www.bellgully.com.

None of the Phase 1 proposals represent significant shifts in policy of the overall scheme of the Companies Act. The proposals address a number of specific issues encountered in practice and are designed to make things easier for businesses, by saving time and money or clarifying provisions.

Topic	Summary of proposed change
Measures to modernise, simplify and digitise the Companies Act
Capital reductions	Allow capital to be returned to shareholders in a pro rata manner without having to go to the High Court for approval, subject to shareholder approval.
Major transaction approval – application to capital-related matters	Clarify that the major transaction rules do not capture share issues, buybacks, dividends or redemptions.
Major transaction approval – potential avoidance	Change the major transaction rules so they are not able to be subverted by structuring major transactions through a subsidiary or as a series of smaller transactions.
Unanimous approval	Extend the process to allow all entitled persons to agree to certain actions, by extending section 107 of the Act to issues of options and convertible securities, crediting unpaid share capital, and acquisitions of shares to be held as treasury stock.

Topic	Summary of proposed change
Unclaimed dividends	Allow unclaimed dividends to be retained by the company, after a period of two years and making reasonable efforts to contact the shareholder. The shareholder would retain a claim to the money should they subsequently come forward. Unclaimed dividends would become a contingent, rather than permanent, liability on a company's balance sheet.
Constitutions – change in certain default settings	Make certain provisions of the Companies Act 'opt out' rather than 'opt in'. Currently, certain actions by a company are only allowed if expressly permitted by its constitution. The reforms would allow share buy backs, the reissue of shares held as treasury stock, division of the share register, and director indemnification and insurance 'unless expressly prohibited by a company's constitution'.
Reversing the Directors' Duties Amendment Act	Repeal section 131(5) of the Act, which has only been in force since August 2023. That provision added an avoidance of doubt provision that, when considering the best interests of the company, a director may consider matters other than the maximisation of profit (for example, environmental, social and governance (ESG) matters). The repeal is proposed because the law already allows directors to take into account ESG factors and therefore this new subsection is redundant.
Notice requirements – public notices	With the increasing decline in newspaper distribution and the corresponding increasing reliance on online sources of information, remove the requirement for notification through newspaper. The same information is available online through The Gazette.
Notice requirements – by website	Introduce a 'notice of access' regime to permit companies to notify shareholders and creditors of a website where information (e.g., in relation to an annual report or an upcoming AGM) may be obtained, rather than having to send this information to each individual shareholder and/or creditor. Similar regimes have recently been introduced in Australia and the UK.
Share registers – trusts	Allow share registers to reflect that a shareholder is holding shares on behalf of a trust, in order to assist identification of different holdings held by the same person.

Introduction of unique identifier numbers for directors and shareholders

Topic	Summary of proposed change
Director and shareholder unique identifier numbers	Introduce unique identifier numbers for directors and shareholders. This proposal aims to deter and detect poor business practices (such as phoenixing) by making individuals readily identifiable and less likely to be confused with others of the same name or by registering under a variation of their name.
Address for service rather than home address	Currently, the residential addresses of company directors and individual shareholders are readily accessible on the Companies Office website. An existing Bill which is currently before a Select Committee, would allow directors to apply to the Registrar of Companies to have their home address removed from the register if disclosure is "likely to result in physical or mental harm" to the director or a person who lives with the director. The proposed reform would instead allow directors and shareholders to prevent their home addresses from being publicly disclosed by using a unique identification number which is linked to an address for service. The new proposal is therefore more comprehensive than the existing Bill. The member who proposed the existing Bill has said that she will withdraw her Bill if a more comprehensive solution is introduced.
Insolvency law improvements
Claw back period	Extend the claw back period to four years for transactions undertaken with related parties prior to liquidation.
Levy for the Insolvency and Trustee Service	Expand the levy making powers in the Act to help fund the Insolvency and Trustee Service, a business unit of MBIE responsible for performing the statutory function of the Official Assignee.
Improving the uptake of the New Zealand Business Number (NZBN)
NZBN as a condition of service	Make it easier for government agencies to require a NZBN as a condition of service (by removing a process that requires agencies to undertake a regulatory analysis, consult with the Office of the Privacy Commissioner and obtain Cabinet's approval for an Order in Council before doing so).
Public information default setting	Make more information public on the NZBN register by default, including unincorporated entities' legal and trading names, and the names of their owners and directors.

Topic	Summary of proposed change
Link to other registers	More closely link the NZBN register with other MBIE registers by enabling the NZBN to be used as a 'permitted business identifier' and for core business information held on the NZBN register to update other registers administered by MBIE (via direct exchange of information). Other MBIE registers include, among others, the Companies Register, the Financial Service Provider Register and the Limited Partnerships Register.

Next steps

The Corporate Governance Amendment Bill is expected to be introduced to Parliament in early 2025. Public submissions on the Bill will be invited as it progresses through the select committee stage.

Further background information (including Cabinet papers and other official Government documents related to the Phase 1 reforms) can be found on the MBIE website.

financial benefit means capital, earnings, or other financial returns managed investment scheme means a scheme to which each of the following applies:

(b) those interests are rights to participate in, or receive, financial benefits produced principally by the efforts of another person under the scheme (whether those rights are actual, prospective, or contingent, and whether they are enforceable or not); and

(c) the holders of those interests do not have day-to-day control over the operation of the scheme (whether or not they have the right to be consulted or to give directions).

(2) However, a managed investment scheme does not include—

Scheme only involves management of separate and direct interests in underlying property

(a) a scheme under which each participant takes part in the scheme only by holding 1 or more interests in property if, in respect of each interest,—

(i) it is an interest in separately identifiable underlying property; and

(ii) either the participant holds both the legal and beneficial interest in the property or the legal interest in the property is held on a bare trust for the participant; and

(iii) the value of the interest is not substantially dependent on contributions being made by other participants or the use of other participants' contributions:

(1) Section 8(4)(d) applies only to the extent that the agreement deals with the purchase and sale referred to in that paragraph.

(2) An agreement under which one party has an obligation to buy, and the other has an obligation to sell, property is not a derivative merely because the agreement provides for the consideration to be varied by reference to a general inflation index (for example, the Consumers Price Index (All Groups) published by Statistics New Zealand).

(3) Subsection (2) is subject to section 8(5)(a).

11 Definitions of issued and issuer

(iv) A engaging in conduct specified in regulations made for the purposes of this subparagraph in relation to a financial product already held by A.

(3) Despite subsection (1)(b), if a debt security is offered for the purposes of a managed investment scheme, the manager of the scheme is the issuer for the purposes of this Act.

(4) If each person that enters into a derivative is a derivatives issuer, each of those persons is the issuer.

Example

A and B enter into a futures contract.

Both A and B are derivatives issuers. Accordingly, both A and B are issuers of the futures contract.

Although both parties are issuers, whether any particular party has disclosure or other obligations will depend on the circumstances.

(7) Subsections (1) to (6) are subject to a declaration under section 562(1)(g).

(8) For the purposes of this Act, the issue of a financial product is not a sale of the financial product.

(9) If the terms of a financial product require or allow the person acquiring the product to pay separate amounts of money at different times, each of those payments must, for the purposes of this Act, be treated as payment for the same financial product as each of those other payments.

(1) If a notice is given under section 35 in relation to a financial product other than a derivative,—

(a) the offeror must ensure that the relevant money is repaid as soon as practicable; and

(b) if the relevant money is not repaid within 1 month after the notice is given, the offeror and the directors of the offeror are jointly and severally liable to repay the relevant money together with interest at a prescribed rate from the date on which the notice was given.

(2) If a notice is given under section 35 in relation to a derivative,—

(a) no party to the derivative is obliged or entitled to perform it further; and

(b) each party to the derivative must, as soon as practicable, repay any money, or return any other property, received by the party under the derivative to the party from whom it was received; and

(c) if money owed by the offeror is not repaid within 1 month after the notice is given, the offeror and the directors of the offeror are jointly and severally liable to repay the money together with interest at a prescribed rate from the date on which the notice was given.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2)(b), an amount of money due from one party must be set off against an amount due from the other party.

37 Director not liable if no misconduct or negligence

A director is not liable under section 36(1)(b) or (2)(c) if he or she proves that the default in the repayment of the money was not due to any misconduct or negligence on his or her part.

Civil liability

38 Civil liability for certain contraventions of this Part

(1) Sections 19 to 23, 34, and 36 are Part 2 fair dealing provisions.

(2) A contravention of any of sections 19 to 23 may give rise to civil liability (see subpart 3 of Part 8), including a pecuniary penalty not exceeding the greatest of the consideration for the relevant transaction, 3 times the amount of the gain made or the loss avoided, and $1 million in the case of an individual or $5 million in any other case.

(3) A contravention of section 34 or 36 may give rise to civil liability (see subpart 3 of Part 8), including a pecuniary penalty not exceeding $200,000 in the case of an individual or $600,000 in any other case.

Part 3
Disclosure of offers of financial products

Subpart 1—Application

39 Issue offers that need disclosure

An offer of financial products for issue requires disclosure to an investor under this Part unless an exclusion under Part 1 of Schedule 1 applies.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 706 (Aust)

40 Sale offers that need disclosure

An offer of financial products for sale requires disclosure to an investor under this Part only if disclosure is required under Part 2 of Schedule 1.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 707(1) (Aust)

41 Meaning of regulated offer and of regulated product

(1) In this Act, regulated offer—

(a) means an offer of financial products to 1 or more investors where the offer to at least 1 of those investors requires disclosure under this Part (regardless of whether or not an exclusion under Schedule 1 applies to an offer to 1 or more other investors); but

(b) does not include an offer of financial products to 1 or more investors if—

(i) the only investors who are able, under the terms of the offer, to acquire the products are investors to whom disclosure under this Part is not required; and

(ii) all of the investors who acquire the products under the offer are investors to whom disclosure under this Part is not required.

Example

ABC Limited makes an offer of its ordinary shares to 100 investors.

Of those investors, 5 are wholesale investors, 15 are relatives of directors of ABC Limited, and 20 are close business associates of ABC Limited. Exclusions under Schedule 1 apply and accordingly the offers to these investors do not require disclosure under this Part.

However, none of the exclusions in Schedule 1 apply to the remaining 60 investors. The offer to each of these investors requires disclosure. This means that a product disclosure statement must be given to each of the 60 investors under section 50 (subject to section 51).

The offer of ABC Limited's ordinary shares, as a whole, is a regulated offer because at least some of the offers to investors require disclosure.

Some obligations under this Act apply to the regulated offer as a whole. These obligations apply to all of the investors even if the offers to some of those investors do not require disclosure. For example, all money paid for the shares must be held in trust under section 87 (even if the money is paid by a wholesale investor, a relative, or a close business associate), ongoing disclosure under subpart 4 may be required to be made to a wholesale investor, a relative, or a close business associate, and registers of financial products kept under subpart 4 of Part 4 relate to products held by all product holders.

(2) In this Act, regulated product means—

(a) a financial product offered under a regulated offer; or

(b) a managed investment product in a registered scheme (whether or not there has been a regulated offer).

42 Regulated offers that need to meet additional governance requirements

(1) A regulated offer of debt securities must meet requirements under subpart 1 of Part 4.

(2) A regulated offer of managed investment products must meet requirements under subpart 2 of Part 4.

43 Options over financial products

(1) For the purposes of this Part and Schedule 1,—

(a) an offer of an option to acquire, by way of issue, a financial product is an offer both of the option and of the underlying financial product; and

(b) the grant of an option without an offer of the option is an offer of the option; and

(c) an offer to grant an option is an offer to issue the option.

(2) See clause 11 of Schedule 1 for an exclusion in relation to options.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 702 (Aust)

44 Treatment of offers of convertible financial products

For the purposes of this Part and Schedule 1, an offer of a financial product that will be converted, or is or may become convertible, into another financial product is an offer both of the financial product that is issued and of the financial product into which it converts.

45 Treatment of offers of renewals and variations

(1) For the purposes of this Part and Schedule 1, an offer of a renewal or variation of the terms or conditions of a financial product made by the issuer is an offer of the financial product as renewed or varied.

(2) A change to the terms or conditions of a financial product is not a variation for the purposes of this section if the change is made in accordance with the existing terms or conditions of the financial product (for example, if the issuer exercises a power under the terms or conditions to change an interest rate).

(3) See clause 24 of Schedule 1 for an exclusion in relation to renewals and variations (but limited disclosure may be required under clause 26 of that schedule).

46 Offers of financial products involving customised terms

(1) Offers of a type of financial product to 2 or more investors are not prevented from being part of the same regulated offer merely because the product involves terms that are customised for each investor.

(2) The PDS and register entry for a regulated offer are not required to include specific information about any customised terms that apply to a particular investor.

(3) Subsection (2) does not prevent the regulations from requiring a PDS or register entry to contain information about the kinds of terms that may be customised for each investor.

Example

A derivatives issuer makes an offer of a particular type of swap agreement to retail investors (where the offer to at least 1 of those investors requires disclosure under this Part).

These derivatives involve some standard or generic terms. They also involve customised terms that are negotiated with each retail investor (for example, terms relating to particular dates or amounts).

The offer of those derivatives to those investors is a regulated offer.

The PDS or register entry relates to the regulated offer as a whole. The PDS and register entry do not include specific information about the customised terms that apply to a particular investor. This does not prevent the regulations requiring the PDS or register entry to contain a description of the kinds of customised terms that may be negotiated (such as a range of dates or amounts).

47 Territorial scope of Part

(1) This Part applies to offers of financial products in New Zealand, regardless of—

(a) where any resulting issue or transfer occurs:

(b) where the issuer or offeror is resident, incorporated, or carries on business.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), financial products are offered in New Zealand if an offer of the financial products is received by a person in New Zealand, unless the offeror demonstrates that it has taken all reasonable steps to ensure that persons in New Zealand (other than persons referred to in subsection (3)) may not accept the offer.

(3) The persons referred to in this subsection are persons to whom disclosure under this Part is not required because of an exclusion under any of clauses 3 to 5 of Schedule 1.

Compare: 1978 No 103 s 7

Subpart 2—Procedure for making regulated offers

Product disclosure statement must be prepared and lodged

48 PDS must be prepared and lodged

(1) A person must not make a regulated offer, or distribute an application form for a regulated offer, unless the issuer of the financial products has—

(a) prepared a product disclosure statement (PDS) for the offer; and

(b) lodged the PDS with the Registrar; and

(c) supplied to the Registrar all of the information that the register entry (if any) is required to contain by this Act or the regulations.

(2) A person who contravenes subsection (1) commits an offence if the person knows that, or is reckless as to whether, the offer is a regulated offer.

(3) A person who commits an offence under subsection (2) is liable on conviction,—

(a) in the case of an individual, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 5 years, a fine not exceeding $500,000, or both; and

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 ss 709(1), 718, 727(1) (Aust)

49 Purpose of PDS

The purpose of a PDS is to provide certain information that is likely to assist a prudent but non-expert person to decide whether or not to acquire the financial products.

Disclosure to investors

50 PDS must be given if offer requires disclosure

(1) This section applies if an offer of financial products is made to a person (A) to whom disclosure under this Part is required.

(2) A person must not accept an application, or issue or transfer the financial products to A, if a PDS for the regulated offer was not given to A before the application was made.

(3) In this section, application means an application for the financial products that is made by A.

(4) See sections 39 and 40 and Schedule 1, which contain provisions relating to when an offer of financial products to a person requires disclosure under this Part.

51 Certain situations in which section 50 does not need to be complied with

(1) An offeror does not have to comply with section 50 in respect of an offer of financial products to a person (A)—

(a) if A has already been given a PDS (for the same or a different offer) that contains all of the information that the PDS referred to in section 50 would be required to contain; or

(b) if the offeror believes on reasonable grounds that paragraph (a) applies; or

(c) in any other prescribed circumstances.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1)(a), immaterial differences in the information that is contained in the PDS that has been given to A and the PDS referred to in section 50 may be disregarded.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 1012D(1) (Aust)

52 PDS treated as having been given if application form used was included in, or accompanied by, PDS

(1) An offeror must be treated as having complied with section 50 in respect of an offer of financial products to a person (A) if—

(a) the offeror issues or transfers the financial products to A in response to an application form; and

(b) the application form identifies the PDS to which it relates; and

(c) A confirms in the application form that A has received the PDS; and

(d) the offeror has reasonable grounds to believe that—

(i) the application form was included in, or accompanied by, the PDS when the form was distributed by or on behalf of the offeror; or

(ii) the form was copied, or directly derived, by the person making the application from a form referred to in subparagraph (i).

(2) The identification of the PDS under subsection (1)(b) must be reasonably prominent.

53 Offence to knowingly or recklessly contravene section 50

(1) A person who contravenes section 50 commits an offence if the person knows that, or is reckless as to whether, the offer of financial products to A requires disclosure under this Part.

(2) A person who commits an offence under subsection (1) is liable on conviction,—

(a) in the case of an individual, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 5 years, a fine not exceeding $500,000, or both; and

54 Right to withdraw

(1) If a person contravenes section 50 in respect of an offer of financial products to a person (A), A has the right to—

(a) withdraw from holding the financial products and to have the relevant money repaid (in any case other than a derivative); or

(b) in the case of a derivative, withdraw from the derivative.

(2) The right referred to in subsection (1) is exercisable by A giving to the offeror notice of the exercise of the right within the earlier of—

(a) 6 months after A knows, or ought reasonably to know, that section 50 has been contravened; and

(b) 12 months after the financial products are issued or transferred to A.

(3) Notice under this section may be expressed in any way (including oral or written) that shows the intention of A to withdraw from holding the financial product or from the derivative.

(4) This section and sections 55 and 56 do not limit any other liability that a person may have for a contravention of section 50.

55 Offeror obligations if notice of withdrawal given

(1) If a notice is given under section 54 in relation to a financial product other than a derivative,—

(a) the offeror must ensure that the relevant money is repaid as soon as practicable; and

(b) if the relevant money is not repaid within 1 month after the notice is given, the offeror and the directors of the offeror are jointly and severally liable to repay the relevant money together with interest at a prescribed rate from the date on which the notice was given.

(2) If a notice is given under section 54 in relation to a derivative,—

(a) no party to the derivative is obliged or entitled to perform it further; and

(b) each party to the derivative must, as soon as practicable, repay any money, or return any other property, received by the party under the derivative to the party from whom it was received; and

(c) if money owed by the offeror is not repaid within 1 month after the notice is given, the offeror and the directors of the offeror are jointly and severally liable to repay the money together with interest at a prescribed rate from the date on which the notice was given.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2)(b), an amount of money due from one party must be set off against an amount due from the other party.

56 Director not liable if no misconduct or negligence

A director is not liable under section 55(1)(b) or (2)(c) if he or she proves that the default in the repayment of the money was not due to any misconduct or negligence on his or her part.

Content and presentation of product disclosure statements and register entries

57 Disclosure of material information and content of PDS and register entry

(1) An issuer that prepares, or is required to prepare, a PDS must ensure that, as at the date on which the PDS is lodged with the Registrar,—

(a) the PDS—

(i) contains all of the information that it is required to contain by the regulations; and

(ii) is accompanied by all of the documents that the regulations require it to be accompanied by; and

(iii) complies with all other requirements of the regulations relating to the content of the PDS; and

(iv) is dated not later than the date on which it is lodged with the Registrar; and

(v) if applicable, specifies its expiry date (see section 84) and states that no financial products will be issued or sold on the basis of the PDS in relation to applications received after the expiry date; and

(vi) complies with section 60 (consent for expert statements or endorsements); and

(b) the register entry (if any)—

(i) contains all of the information that it is required to contain by the regulations; and

(ii) contains all material information relating to the regulated offer that is not contained in the PDS; and

(iii) complies with all other requirements of the regulations relating to the content of the register entry; and

(iv) complies with section 60 (consent for expert statements or endorsements).

(2) Subsection (1)(b)(ii) does not limit subsection (1)(a).

(3) Subsection (1)(b)(ii) does not apply in the prescribed circumstances (which may include, for example, certain offers to existing product holders or certain situations in which information about an offer is available by means of a continuous disclosure obligation).

58 Register entry not required in prescribed circumstances

A register entry for a regulated offer is not required in the prescribed circumstances.

59 Meaning of material information in this Part

(1) In this Part, material information, in relation to a regulated offer, means information that—

(a) a reasonable person would expect to, or to be likely to, influence persons who commonly invest in financial products in deciding whether to acquire the financial products on offer; and

(b) relates to the particular financial products on offer or the particular issuer, rather than to financial products generally or issuers generally.

(2) However, material information does not include—

(a) information about the specific terms of a financial product that have been customised for a particular investor; or

(b) information about an identifiable investor.

Example

A derivatives issuer makes an offer of a particular type of swap agreement to retail investors.

These derivatives involve some standard or generic terms. They also involve customised terms that are negotiated with the particular retail investor (for example, terms relating to particular dates or amounts).

The material information for the regulated offer as a whole does not include specific information about the customised terms that apply to a particular investor. This does not prevent the regulations requiring the PDS or register entry to contain a description of the kinds of customised terms that may be negotiated.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 ss 674, 677, 710, 1013E (Aust)

60 Consent of experts and persons who make endorsements

(1) An issuer that prepares, or is required to prepare, a PDS must ensure that the PDS and the register entry only include an expert statement or endorsement made by a person (A), or a statement said in the PDS or register entry to be based on an expert statement or endorsement made by a person (A), if—

(a) A has consented in writing to the statement being included in the PDS or register entry in the form and context in which it is included; and

(b) the PDS or register entry states that A has given the consent; and

(c) A has not withdrawn the consent before the PDS is lodged with the Registrar.

(2) Nothing in subsection (1) applies in relation to any statement given by an approved rating agency in connection with a rating given, or to be given, by it.

(3) In this section and section 83(3),— approved rating agency means a rating agency nominated or approved under section 80 of the Banking (Prudential Supervision) Act 1989, section 86 of the Non-bank Deposit Takers Act 2013, or section 62 of the Insurance (Prudential Supervision) Act 2010 endorsement means a statement that—

(a) may reasonably be regarded as encouraging or persuading persons to acquire the financial products on offer; and

(b) relates to the particular financial products on offer or the particular issuer, rather than to financial products generally or issuers generally expert—

(a) means a person who holds himself or herself out to be of a profession or calling that gives authority to a statement made by him or her; but

(b) does not include a person acting in his or her capacity as a director or senior manager of an entity expert statement means a statement purporting to be made by an expert.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 ss 716, 735(1) (Aust)

Section 60(3) approved rating agency: amended, on 1 July 2022, by section 300(1) of the Reserve Bank of New Zealand Act 2021 (2021 No 31).

Section 60(3) approved rating agency: amended, on 1 May 2014, by section 102 of the Non-bank Deposit Takers Act 2013 (2013 No 104).

61 PDS must be worded and presented in clear, concise, and effective manner

(1) An issuer that prepares, or is required to prepare, a PDS must ensure that the information in the PDS is worded and presented in a clear, concise, and effective manner.

(2) This section is not a civil liability provision for the purposes of subpart 3 of Part 8 (but see subpart 1 of Part 8, which allows the FMA to make a stop order if a PDS does not comply with this section).

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 715A (Aust)

62 PDS must comply with prescribed requirements relating to form and presentation

An issuer that prepares, or is required to prepare, a PDS must ensure that the PDS complies with all requirements of the regulations relating to the form and presentation of the PDS.

Other provisions relating to lodging of PDS and other documents

63 Supply of prescribed information

(1) An issuer that lodges a PDS or other document under this Part must supply the prescribed information to the Registrar when the PDS or document is lodged.

(2) Information referred to in subsection (1) may include, for example, a copy of the consent of a prescribed person to the lodgement.

(3) An issuer that contravenes this section commits an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $50,000.

64 Registrar must notify FMA of lodgement of PDS

(1) The Registrar must, immediately after a PDS is lodged, notify the FMA of the lodgement for the purpose of allowing the FMA an opportunity to consider the PDS, any governing document, and whether the offer, or intended offer, of financial products will be made in compliance with this Act.

(2) The nature and extent of the consideration under subsection (1) (if any) is at the FMA's discretion.

(3) Nothing in this section or any other provision of this Act limits the FMA's power to consider or reconsider at any time any of the matters referred to in subsection (1).

Compare: 1978 No 103 s 43C(1), (3), (4)

65 Waiting period after lodgement before processing applications for financial products

(1) An offeror must not accept an application for, or issue or transfer, financial products offered under a regulated offer until—

(a) the period of 5 working days after lodgement of the PDS has ended; or

(b) if the period is extended under section 66, the period as extended has ended.

(2) An offeror that contravenes this section commits an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $50,000.

(3) The offence in this section is an infringement offence (see subpart 5 of Part 8).

(4) This section does not prevent an offeror from receiving applications for financial products or money during the period that applies under this section.

Compare: 1978 No 103 s 43D; Corporations Act 2001 s 727(3) (Aust)

66 FMA may extend period

(1) The FMA may extend the period under section 65(1)(a) by notice in writing to the offeror.

(2) The period, as extended, must end no later than 10 working days after lodgement of the PDS with the Registrar.

(3) The FMA must give a copy of the notice under subsection (1) to the Registrar.

67 Waiting period restriction does not prevent offeror from acting under another PDS

If section 65 applies to a PDS that relates to a particular offer of financial products but another lodged PDS that is not or is no longer subject to section 65 also relates to the offer of those products, that section does not prevent an offeror, in accordance with this Act, from accepting applications for, or issuing or transferring, financial products in reliance upon the other PDS.

68 FMA may remove restrictions if its consideration complete or consideration or further consideration unnecessary

(1) This section applies if the FMA is satisfied that—

(a) its consideration as referred to in section 64 is complete; or

(b) consideration as referred to in section 64 is, in the circumstances, unnecessary.

(2) The FMA may give notice to the offeror that—

(a) the period that applies under section 65 ends at a particular time specified by the FMA (being an earlier time than that provided for under that section); or

(b) section 65 does not apply in respect of the PDS.

(3) Nothing in this section limits subpart 2 of Part 9 (which allows the FMA to grant exemptions in respect of compliance with section 65).

Compare: 1978 No 103 s 43E

69 Waiting period does not usually apply to continuous issue PDSs

(1) Section 65 applies to a continuous issue PDS only if it is of a class that is prescribed by the FMA in a notice issued under this section.

(2) The FMA may issue a notice that prescribes the class or classes of continuous issue PDSs to which section 65 applies.

(3) The FMA must, before issuing a notice in respect of a class of continuous issue PDSs, be satisfied that it is in the public interest for the FMA to have an opportunity to consider those PDSs before any person accepts applications for, or issues or transfers, financial products offered under those PDSs (for example, where in the circumstances, a particular risk relates to a particular class of offerors or financial products).

(4) Subpart 5 of Part 9 (general provisions relating to certain FMA instruments) applies to a notice under this section.

Compare: 1978 No 103 s 43EA

70 No guarantee or representation as to compliance

(1) Nothing done or omitted to be done under this Act or the regulations by the Registrar or the FMA guarantees or represents that—

(a) a PDS, register entry, or governing document—

(i) complies with this Act and the regulations:

(ii) does not contain any material misdescription or material error or any material matter that is not clearly legible:

(iii) is not false or misleading:

(b) the FMA has considered a PDS, register entry, or governing document with a view to determining whether it—

(i) complies with this Act and the regulations:

(ii) contains any material misdescription or material error or any material matter that is not clearly legible:

(iii) is false or misleading.

(2) This section does not limit section 22 of the Financial Markets Authority Act 2011 (which provides protection from liability for the FMA and its members and employees).

Compare: 1978 No 103 s 43M

71 When supplementary document or replacement PDS may be lodged

(1) An issuer that lodges a PDS with the Registrar may lodge a supplementary document or replacement PDS with the Registrar to—

(a) correct a false or misleading statement in the PDS; or

(b) correct an omission from the PDS of information that it is required to contain by this Act or the regulations; or

(c) correct the PDS because it is not worded and presented in a clear, concise, and effective manner; or

(d) update, or add to, the information contained in the PDS.

(2) However, a supplementary document must not be lodged with the Registrar in the prescribed circumstances.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 1014A (Aust)

72 Supplementary document

(1) If a supplementary document is lodged with the Registrar, the PDS together with the supplementary document is taken to be the PDS for the purposes of the application of this Act or the regulations to events that occur after the lodgement.

(2) The issuer must ensure that, at the beginning of a supplementary document, there is—

(a) a statement that it is a supplementary document; and

(b) an identification of the PDS that it supplements; and

(c) an identification of all previous supplementary documents lodged with the Registrar in relation to the regulated offer; and

(d) a statement that it is to be read together with the PDS that it supplements and the previous supplementary documents.

(3) The supplementary document must be dated with the date on which it is lodged with the Registrar.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 719(2), (4) (Aust)

73 Replacement PDS

(1) If a replacement PDS is lodged with the Registrar, the PDS is taken to be the replacement PDS for the purposes of the application of this Act or the regulations to events that occur after the lodgement.

(2) The issuer must ensure that, at the beginning of a replacement PDS, there is—

(a) a statement that it is a replacement PDS; and

(b) an identification of the PDS that it replaces.

(3) The replacement PDS must be dated with the date on which it is lodged with the Registrar.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 719(3), (5) (Aust)

74 Registrar must notify FMA of lodgement of supplementary document or replacement PDS

(1) The Registrar must, immediately after a supplementary document or replacement PDS is lodged, notify the FMA of the lodgement for the purpose of allowing the FMA an opportunity to consider the supplementary document or replacement PDS.

(2) The nature and extent of the consideration (if any) that the FMA gives to a supplementary document or replacement PDS are at the FMA's discretion.

Compare: 1978 No 103 s 43C(1), (3)

75 Publication of lodgement

(1) If a PDS, supplementary document, or replacement PDS is lodged by an issuer under this Part, the issuer must, as soon as practicable after it receives the certificate of lodgement from the Registrar, ensure that an Internet site maintained by or on behalf of the issuer—

(a) contains a reasonably prominent statement—

(i) to the effect that the PDS, supplementary document, or replacement PDS has been lodged; and

(ii) describing where and how a copy of the PDS, supplementary document, or replacement PDS can be obtained; or

(b) contains a reasonably prominent link to such a statement.

(2) The statement or link referred to in subsection (1) may be removed from the Internet site maintained by or on behalf of the issuer on or after the date that the offeror ceases to offer financial products in reliance upon the PDS.

Amending register entry

76 When register entry may be amended

An issuer of financial products offered under a regulated offer may give notice to the Registrar to amend the register entry in order to—

(a) correct a false or misleading statement in the register entry; or

(b) correct an omission from the register entry of information it is required to contain by this Act or the regulations; or

(c) update, or add to, the information contained in the register entry.

Conditions referred to in PDS

77 Minimum number or amount condition must be fulfilled before issue or transfer

(1) This section applies if a PDS states that the financial products will not be issued or transferred unless—

(a) applications for a minimum number of the financial products are received; or

(b) a minimum amount is raised.

(2) The offeror must not issue or transfer any of the financial products under the regulated offer until the condition referred to in subsection (1) is satisfied.

(3) For the purpose of working out whether a condition referred to in this section or section 79(2)(a) has been satisfied, a person who has agreed to acquire financial products as an underwriter is taken to have applied for those products.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 723(2) (Aust)

78 Issue or transfer void if quotation condition not fulfilled

(1) This section applies if—

(a) a PDS states or implies that the financial products are to be quoted on a financial market (whether in New Zealand or elsewhere); and

(b) the financial products are not admitted to quotation within—

(i) the period specified in, or determined in accordance with, the PDS; or

(ii) if there is no such period, 3 months after the date of the PDS.

(2) An issue or a transfer of financial products under the regulated offer is void.

(3) The offeror must deal under section 80 with the application for financial products that relates to the issue or transfer referred to in subsection (2).

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 723(3) (Aust)

Dealing with applications where condition referred to in PDS not met or disclosure defective

79 Application of section 80

(1) An offeror must, if any of subsections (2) to (5) apply, deal under section 80 with any applications for the financial products offered under the regulated offer that have not resulted in an issue or a transfer of the products.

(2) This subsection applies if—

(a) a PDS states that the financial products will not be issued or transferred unless—

(i) applications for a minimum number of the financial products are received; or

Subpart 2—Governance of managed investment products

124 Overview

(1) This subpart—

(a) sets out when managed investment schemes need to be registered; and

(b) requires registered schemes, irrespective of legal form, to meet key common governance and reporting requirements; and

(c) provides for the manager and independent supervisor of a registered scheme to owe statutory duties of care to investors; and

(d) provides for the custodianship of scheme property of a registered scheme to be independent from the manager.

(2) This section is only a guide to the general scheme and effect of this subpart.

Need to register

125 Need to register managed investment scheme for regulated offer of managed investment product

(1) A person must not make a regulated offer of a managed investment product, or accept further contributions if there has been a regulated offer of a managed investment product, unless the managed investment scheme is registered.

(2) However, a managed investment scheme may be registered even if there is no regulated offer of a managed investment product in the scheme but, in this case,—

(a) the managed investment products in the scheme are regulated products under section 41; and

(b) this Act applies accordingly (for example, in addition to this subpart, see section 87 (money for financial products must be held in trust) and subpart 4 of Part 3 (ongoing disclosure)).

(3) A scheme that is approved as a Schedule 3 scheme under Schedule 3 may not be registered under this subpart.

(e) if the application is for registration as a particular type of scheme under sections 128 to 132,—

(i) state that fact; and

(ii) comply with any additional prescribed requirements for applications for that type of registration; and

(iii) contain a certificate from the FMA that it is satisfied that the scheme complies with any additional registration requirements for that type of scheme that apply to it under those sections.

(3) The Registrar must register a managed investment scheme if satisfied that the application meets the requirements of this section and section 127(1)(a) (subject to clause 7 of Schedule 2).

127 Initial and ongoing registration requirements for all managed investment schemes

(1) Every registered scheme must meet the following registration requirements:

(a) it must not have a name that, in the opinion of the Registrar, is misleading or offensive or the use of which would contravene an enactment; and

(b) its governing document must comply with sections 135 to 137; and

(c) it must have a licensed manager designated or appointed under the governing document (or this Act) whose licence covers management of the scheme; and

(d) it must have a licensed supervisor designated or appointed under the governing document (or the Financial Markets Supervisors Act 2011) whose licence covers supervision of the scheme; and

(b) its purpose must be to provide retirement benefits directly to individuals; and

(c) it must, accordingly, restrict redemptions, withdrawals, and the provision of benefits in respect of a member's accumulation (including in the way the trust deed is applied) to those permitted under the KiwiSaver scheme rules under the KiwiSaver Act 2006; and

(d) it must admit as members (both in its conditions of entry of scheme participants and in the way those conditions are applied on entry) only persons who meet the New Zealand criteria set out in subsection (2) or (3); and

(e) it must be a scheme under which contributions are allocated to scheme participants on an individual basis; and

(f) the benefits provided by the scheme must be fully funded as they accrue; and

(g) its manager must have at least 1 director who is a New Zealand resident for tax purposes; and

(4) If the KiwiSaver scheme is a restricted scheme,—

(a) subsection (1)(g) does not apply; but

(b) at least 1 of the trustees or 1 of the directors of the corporate trustee of the scheme must be a New Zealand resident for tax purposes.

Compare: 2006 No 40 s 116

(g) it must not be registered as a KiwiSaver scheme.

(3) Subsection (1)(b), (c), and (f) do not apply to a scheme, or a section of a scheme, that is closed to new members at the time of its registration (a legacy scheme), and instead it must meet the following registration requirements:

(a) its principal purpose must be to provide retirement benefits directly or indirectly to individuals; and

(a) the FMA gives the manager of the scheme no less than 10 working days' written notice of the following matters before it exercises the power:

(i) that the FMA may direct removal; and

(ii) the reasons why it may exercise that power; and

(b) the FMA gives the manager or the manager's representative an opportunity to make written submissions on the matter within that notice period.

(2) A manager that contravenes this section commits an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $50,000.

167 Action that must be taken on limit breaks

(1) This section applies to a registered scheme if, under the scheme's statement of investment policy and objectives, there is a material breach of any limits on either of the following (a limit break):

(a) the nature or type of investments that may be made; or

(b) the proportion of each type of assets that may be invested in.

(2) If this section applies, the manager of the registered scheme must report the limit break to the supervisor or to the FMA (if there is no supervisor) in the prescribed circumstances and in the prescribed manner.

(3) Whether or not a limit break is material must be determined in accordance with the frameworks and methodologies specified in notices issued by the FMA under subpart 4 of Part 9 (if any).

168 Action that must be taken on pricing errors and failure to comply with pricing methodologies

(1) This section applies to a registered scheme if—

(a) the managed investment products under the scheme are transferable or redeemable; and

(b) the manager (or any person to whom the manager has contracted some or all of its functions as a manager)—

(i) makes or includes an error in the calculation of the price at which the managed investment products are issued or redeemed; or

(ii) fails to comply with the methodology for pricing the managed investment products as set out in the governing document or notices issued by the FMA under subpart 4 of Part 9; and

(c) the pricing error or non-compliance is material.

(2) If this section applies, the manager must ensure that—

(a) the pricing error or non-compliance is corrected; and

(b) the pricing error or non-compliance is reported to the supervisor (or to the FMA if there is no supervisor) in the prescribed manner; and

(c) the prescribed steps are taken (which may include steps to remedy the pricing error or non-compliance and to inform current or former scheme participants).

(3) Whether or not a pricing error or non-compliance is material must be determined in accordance with the frameworks and methodologies specified in notices issued by the FMA under subpart 4 of Part 9 (if any).

Section 168(1)(b)(i): amended, on 9 August 2017, by section 58 of the Regulatory Systems (Commercial Matters) Amendment Act 2017 (2017 No 12).

169 Actuarial examination of defined benefit scheme or life benefit scheme

(1) This section applies to a registered scheme that—

(a) is a defined benefit scheme; or

(b) provides benefits that provide for the payment of money on the happening of a contingency dependent on the termination or continuance of human life, and the risks associated with those benefits are not fully insured with a life insurer within the meaning of section 6(1) of the Insurance (Prudential Supervision) Act 2010 (a life benefit scheme).

(2) The manager of a defined benefit scheme or a life benefit scheme must ensure that a suitably qualified actuary examines the financial position of the scheme as at dates that are no more than 3 years apart.

(3) The manager must ensure that—

(a) the report of the actuary is received no later than 7 months after the date as at which the financial position of the scheme was examined; and

(b) the manager gives a copy of the report, as soon as practicable, to the supervisor (or, if there is no supervisor, to the FMA); and

(c) if there is a supervisor, the manager also gives a copy of the report to the FMA within 20 working days after its receipt by the supervisor.

(4) A manager that contravenes subsection (3)(b) or (c) commits an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $50,000.

(5) The offence in subsection (4) is an infringement offence (see subpart 5 of Part 8).

171 Limits on reversion of scheme property in certain schemes to non-scheme participant contributor

(1) Neither the manager nor the supervisor of a registered scheme may permit any part of the scheme property of a KiwiSaver scheme, superannuation scheme, or workplace savings scheme to revert to a contributor who is not a scheme participant under the governing document without the prior written consent of the FMA.

(2) The FMA must not give consent to the reversion of any assets of the scheme to a person under this section unless satisfied that—

(a) sufficient assets will remain to support the interests of all of the scheme participants; and

(b) the reversion is fair and equitable to the scheme participants, taking into account the manner in which the scheme acquired those assets.

Related party transactions

172 Definition of related party benefit

(1) A related party benefit, in relation to a registered scheme, is a benefit—

(a) that either is given out of scheme property or creates an exposure to loss for scheme property; and

(b) that is given to, or received by, a related party of the scheme; but

(c) does not include fees or expenses that are paid or reimbursed to the manager in accordance with this Act or the governing document of the scheme.

(2) A related party of the scheme is—

(a) any of the following persons (a scheme-connected person):

(i) the manager of the scheme or any trustee of a restricted scheme; and

(ii) any investment manager, administration manager, or other person to whom the manager has contracted out some or all of its functions as a manager; and

(iii) for a restricted scheme that is identified on the register of managed investment schemes as an employer-related scheme, any contributor to the scheme who is not a scheme participant (other than the Crown); or

(b) an associated person of a scheme-connected person.

(3) A person is also a related party of the scheme at a particular time if—

(a) the person was a related party of the scheme under subsection (2) at any time within the previous 6 months; or

173 General prohibition on transactions giving related party benefits

(1) A manager of a registered scheme (and any investment manager, administration manager, or other person to whom the manager has contracted out some or all of its functions as a manager) must not enter into a transaction that provides for a related party benefit to be given.

(2) However, subsection (1) does not apply to a transaction or series of transactions if the manager notifies the supervisor of the transaction or transactions, including the related party benefits given under the transaction or transactions, and the key terms of the transaction or transactions and either—

(a) the manager obtains the supervisor's consent to the transaction or transactions; or

(b) section 174 applies to the transaction or transactions or all related party benefits to be given and the manager certifies to that effect.

(3) The supervisor must not consent to a transaction or transactions under this section unless 1 of the following applies and the supervisor certifies to that effect:

(a) the supervisor considers that the transaction or transactions are in the best interests of the scheme participants; or

(b) the transaction or transactions are approved by, or contingent on approval by, a special resolution of the class of scheme participants affected, or potentially affected, by the transaction or transactions.

(4) However, if the registered scheme does not have a supervisor, subsection (1) does not apply to a transaction or series of transactions if 1 of the following applies and the manager certifies to that effect:

(a) the transaction or transactions are in the best interests of the scheme participants; or

(b) section 174 applies to the transaction or transactions or all related party benefits to be given; or

(c) the transaction or transactions are approved by, or contingent on approval by, a special resolution of the class of scheme participants affected, or potentially affected, by the transaction or transactions.

(5) The manager may not certify under subsection (4) unless the licensed independent trustee has consented to the certification.

(6) However, a failure to comply with this section does not affect the validity of any transaction (subject to any court order under Part 8).

(7) See also section 126 of the KiwiSaver Act 2006 for an additional prohibition on loans and financial assistance to members of KiwiSaver schemes that have fewer than 20 members.

This section applies to—

(i) would be reasonable in the circumstances if the parties were connected or related only by the transaction in question, each acting independently, and each acting in its own best interests; or

(ii) are less favourable to the related party than the terms referred to in subparagraph (i):

Investments in other registered schemes

(b) an acquisition or a disposal of a managed investment product in another registered scheme or of a prescribed interest in a prescribed overseas scheme:

175 Requirements for certificates as to related party benefits

(a) states the specific grounds on which it is given under section 173 and (if relevant) section 174, and the basis for relying on those grounds; and

(b) complies with the prescribed requirements (if any) as to its form, content, or the manner in which it is given.

(2) Nothing in section 173 requires a new certificate if there is an existing certificate that applies (whether specifically or in general terms) to the transaction or transactions.

176 Additional restrictions on acquisitions by restricted schemes of in-house assets

(1) A manager of a restricted scheme (or any person to whom the manager has contracted some or all of its functions as a manager) must not acquire any new in-house asset if, as a result of the acquisition, the restricted scheme would have, or increase, an in-house assets ratio of 5% or more in relation to any related party or scheme participant (A).

(2) The in-house assets ratio of a scheme, in relation to A, must be calculated as the ratio, expressed as a percentage, of paragraph (a) to paragraph (b):

(a) the sum of the net asset values of—

(i) the in-house assets of A; and

(ii) the in-house assets of any other related parties of the scheme, or scheme participants, that are associated with A; and

(b) the net asset value of the scheme property.

(3) In this section,—

(a) means, in relation to a related party or scheme participant (A), an asset of the scheme that is a loan to, or an investment in, A (or an associate of A) or an asset of the scheme that is subject to a lease or lease arrangement with A (or an associate of A); but

(b) excludes investments referred to in section 174(b) or (c)

(4) The in-house assets ratio of a scheme must be calculated under this section in accordance with the frameworks and methodologies specified in notices issued by the FMA under subpart 4 of Part 9 (if any).

Compare: Superannuation Industry (Supervision) Act 1993 s 83 (Aust)

177 General duties not affected

The fact that a transaction is consented to, approved by scheme participants, or otherwise permitted under sections 172 to 176 does not affect the manager's or supervisor's obligations to comply with its duties under this Act and otherwise in connection with the transaction.

Scheme participant transfer rules for KiwiSaver, superannuation, and workplace savings schemes

178 Application of scheme participant transfer rules

(1) Sections 179 to 182 apply to both of the following types of transfer (a transfer):

(a) the transfer of a scheme participant from one KiwiSaver scheme or superannuation scheme or workplace savings scheme to another KiwiSaver scheme or superannuation scheme or workplace savings scheme:

(b) the transfer of a scheme participant from one section of a KiwiSaver scheme to another section of the same scheme:

(c) the transfer of a scheme participant from one section of a superannuation scheme or workplace savings scheme to another section of the same scheme (but only if the scheme is registered as a superannuation scheme or workplace savings scheme in respect of both sections).

(2) In sections 179 to 182,—

(a) a person proposed to be transferred is a proposed transferee:

(b) the scheme, or section of the scheme, from which the person is proposed to be transferred is the old scheme:

(c) the scheme, or section of the scheme, into which the person is proposed to be transferred is the new scheme.

(3) Sections 179 to 182 do not apply to transfers to which subpart 3 of Part 2 of the KiwiSaver Act 2006, or any other power to transfer scheme participants under an enactment, applies.

Compare: 1989 No 10 s 9B; 2006 No 40 ss 119B, 119D(6)

Section 178(1)(c): amended, on 9 August 2017, by section 60 of the Regulatory Systems (Commercial Matters) Amendment Act 2017 (2017 No 12).

179 Methods of transfer of scheme participants to another scheme or another section of scheme

(1) No scheme participant may be transferred from one registered scheme to another registered scheme, or to another section of the same scheme, except in accordance with this section.

(2) A scheme participant may be transferred—

(a) with the scheme participant's written consent (which must be obtained in accordance with section 180, if that section applies), if authorised by a governing document; or

(b) in accordance with the FMA's consent under section 181 (despite anything to the contrary in the governing document); or

(c) in accordance with regulations made under section 230 of the KiwiSaver Act 2006 (despite anything to the contrary in the governing document), if the old scheme is a default KiwiSaver scheme that is subject to a terminating event under section 138 of the KiwiSaver Act 2006.

(3) However, the FMA may permit a transfer to occur under subsection (2)(a) without the scheme participant's consent if the FMA is satisfied that—

(a) the manager of the old scheme has taken all reasonable steps to contact all of the relevant scheme participants, but has not been able to do so; and

(b) the proposed action is not unreasonable in relation to the best interests of any of those scheme participants who have not been contacted.

(4) No scheme participant may be transferred from a KiwiSaver scheme into another scheme that is not a KiwiSaver scheme under this section.

Compare: 1989 No 10 ss 9B, 9BAA(1), 9BA; 2006 No 40 ss 119C, 119G(1), 119I

180 Transfer of substantial numbers of scheme participants with scheme participant consent

(1) This section applies to a transfer (whether at the same time or over an extended period) of all, or a substantial number, of the scheme participants from an old scheme to a new scheme.

(2) The manager of the old scheme and the manager of the new scheme must each consult their own scheme's supervisor about the proposed transfer and give notice of the proposed transfer in accordance with this section.

(3) The notice must—

(a) be given to the FMA and every scheme participant of the old scheme and the new scheme, other than scheme participants who, in the opinion of the FMA, are not likely to be affected by the proposed transfer; and

(b) set out—

(i) the proposal and its implications for the proposed transferees; and

(ii) the date of the proposed transfer; and

(iii) the date on which the proposed transferees' written consent must be received by the manager or the trustees; and

(iv) the fact that the notice has also been sent to the FMA; and

(c) be given at least 1 month before the date on which, under the notice, the proposed transferees' written consent must be received by the manager or the trustees.

(4) Giving notice under this section does not derogate from the need to comply with any other requirement of the KiwiSaver Act 2006 (in relation to a KiwiSaver scheme).

Compare: 1989 No 10 s 9B; 2006 No 40 s 119D

181 Transfer with FMA consent

(1) The FMA may consent to a transfer if the FMA is satisfied that—

(a) the terms and conditions of the new scheme are no less favourable to the proposed transferees than the terms and conditions of the old scheme; and

(b) the transfer is otherwise reasonable in all the circumstances (including having regard to the value of the assets transferred from the old scheme to the new scheme); and

(c) the person applying for the transfer is the manager of the old or new scheme, a relevant employer, or another person who the FMA considers has an appropriate interest in the transfer; and

(d) the applicant has given notice to every proposed transferee that—

(i) the applicant has applied for the FMA's consent to transfer the person without the person's written consent; and

(ii) the person may make submissions to the FMA about the transfer.

(2) The FMA must have regard to any submissions received by proposed transferees before deciding whether or not to give its consent.

(3) The FMA may give its consent subject to any terms and conditions that the FMA sets out in the written notice of consent.

(4) The transfer must be carried out in accordance with those terms and conditions.

Compare: 1989 No 10 s 9BAA; 2006 No 40 ss 119G, 119H

182 Transfers from KiwiSaver scheme

(1) This section applies to an old scheme if it was a KiwiSaver scheme.

(2) The provider of the old scheme must give the following information to the provider of the new scheme in respect of a scheme participant (A) who transfers under sections 179 to 181:

(a) A's name, address, and date of birth; and

(b) A's tax file number; and

(c) the date on which A first became a member of a KiwiSaver scheme and (if known and different) the date on which A first contributed to a KiwiSaver scheme; and

(d) (if known) the aggregate amounts of each of—

(i) A's contributions to the old scheme; and

(ii) the Crown contribution to the old scheme in respect of A; and

(iii) any employer contributions to the old scheme in respect of A; and

(e) the name, address, and tax file number of both the provider and the old scheme; and

(f) any other information that the Commissioner of Inland Revenue requires the provider of the old scheme to give to the provider of the new scheme.

Provisions as to deferred benefits for superannuation schemes and workplace savings schemes

183 Deferred benefits

(1) A scheme participant in respect of a superannuation scheme or workplace savings scheme who continues to be employed by an employer after the participant's expected age or date of retirement (as defined in the governing document of the scheme) may elect to defer the receipt of any benefit that the participant is eligible to receive under the scheme until the date on which the participant ceases to be employed by that employer.

(2) Subsection (1) applies despite anything to the contrary contained in the governing document of the scheme.

(3) Nothing in subsection (1) or in the Human Rights Act 1993 has the effect of requiring either an employer or a scheme participant to continue to contribute, or to cease to contribute, to the scheme after the participant's expected age or date of retirement, as defined in the governing document of the scheme.

(4) If a scheme participant has the right, under subsection (1), to elect to defer receipt of any benefit that the participant is eligible to receive under the scheme, the manager must inform the participant in writing of that right.

Compare: 1989 No 10 s 9C

Change of manager

184 Application of sections 185 to 192

Sections 185 to 192 apply to—

(a) the manager of a registered scheme (other than a restricted scheme); or

185 Removal of manager of registered scheme

(1) A manager of a registered scheme ceases to hold that office if—

(a) the manager is removed by written direction of the supervisor after the supervisor certifies that it is in the best interests of scheme participants that the manager be removed; or

(b) the manager is removed by a special resolution of the scheme participants; or

(c) in the case of an independent trustee of a restricted scheme,—

(i) the trustee's licence expires or is cancelled under Part 6; or

(ii) the trustee is removed by the FMA if it is satisfied that the trustee no longer meets the requirements in section 131(1)(d); or

(d) the manager is substituted by the court under section 209; or

(2) Subsection (1)(a) and (b) do not apply to a restricted scheme.

(3) However, a licensed independent trustee may not—

(a) be removed or resign under subsection (1)(e) unless—

(i) all functions and duties of the position have been performed; or

(ii) another licensed independent trustee has been appointed, and accepted the appointment, in its place; or

(iii) the court consents:

(b) (despite anything in the governing document) be removed under subsection (1)(e) without the FMA's consent.

(4) If a manager ceases to hold office under subsection (1), the manager and any delegate of the manager must immediately desist from all activities relating to the registered scheme unless the supervisor agrees to the contrary.

Compare: 1960 No 99 s 19

186 Supervisor or FMA may make temporary appointment

(1) This section applies if a registered scheme does not, for any reason, have a manager or (in the case of a restricted scheme) a licensed independent trustee.

(2) The supervisor or the FMA must appoint a person (the temporary manager) to fill the vacancy in the office until a substitute appointment may be made under the governing document.

(3) That person must be,—

(a) if the appointment is by the supervisor, a person who meets the requirements in section 127(1)(c) and (e):

(b) if the appointment is by the FMA, a person whom the FMA considers appropriate (but who need not be a person who meets the requirements in section 127(1)(c) and (e) or (in the case of an independent trustee) section 131(1)(d)).

(4) However, the FMA may act under this section only if—

(a) it is satisfied that the supervisor has had a reasonable opportunity to act under this section but has not done so; or

(b) it is satisfied that it is necessary as a matter of urgency for the FMA to do so and it is not reasonably practicable to wait for the supervisor to do so; or

(c) the supervisor requests the FMA to act; or

(d) there is no supervisor.

(5) If the FMA appoints a person who does not meet the requirements of section 127(1)(c) and (e) or 131(1)(d), that person does not contravene section 388, and the scheme does not fail to meet those registration requirements, as a result of that appointment.

Compare: 1960 No 99 s 23

187 Term, powers, and duties of temporary manager

(1) A temporary manager may hold the appointment until a substitute manager is appointed—

(a) under the governing document; or

(2) The temporary manager has all of the powers and duties of the manager of the registered scheme and (if applicable) of the independent trustee that are conferred or imposed by the governing document or by law.

(3) However, the FMA may, in the prescribed manner (if any), amend a governing document, in so far as it applies to a temporary manager appointed by the FMA, if—

(a) the supervisor consents; and

(b) the FMA is satisfied that the change will have no material adverse effect on the interests of scheme participants.

(4) An amendment made under this section must be treated for all purposes as if it were made in accordance with the governing document.

(5) Section 141 (lodging of changes to governing document) applies to an amendment to the governing document under this section.

188 FMA's costs must be reimbursed from scheme

(1) The FMA's costs and expenses incurred in connection with the holding of the appointment by a temporary manager appointed by the FMA must be reimbursed out of scheme property of the registered scheme.

(2) An amount payable under subsection (1) is recoverable by the FMA in any court of competent jurisdiction as a debt due to the FMA.

189 Supervisor or FMA must take reasonable steps to arrange for new appointment

(1) The supervisor of a registered scheme or the FMA (if there is no supervisor) must take all reasonable steps to secure, in accordance with the governing document, the appointment of a person as a permanent manager in place of the temporary manager (other than a temporary independent trustee).

(2) The trustees of a restricted scheme must take all reasonable steps to secure, in accordance with the governing document, the appointment of a person as a permanent licensed independent trustee in place of the temporary independent trustee.

(3) The temporary manager may be appointed to hold the office as a permanent manager, but in this case—

(a) if the person was appointed by the FMA, the person ceases to be appointed by the FMA for the purposes of sections 186 to 188; and

(b) must meet the requirements in section 127(1)(c) and (e) or 131(1)(d) (if applicable).

(4) The supervisor or trustees must, when acting under this section, comply with the prescribed requirements (if any).

190 Former manager must hand over records and give reasonable assistance

(1) If the person who holds an appointment as a manager of a registered scheme changes, the person who previously held the appointment (the former manager) must,—

(a) as soon as practicable, give the person that currently holds the appointment (the current manager) all of the information held or controlled by the former manager that is reasonably necessary to allow the current manager to hold the office; and

(b) give the current manager all reasonable assistance to facilitate the change.

(2) The former manager may withhold information, or retain a copy of information,—

(a) with the FMA's written consent; or

(b) otherwise in the prescribed circumstances.

(3) If a temporary manager has been appointed to an office, for the purposes of this section, former manager includes the person who held the office immediately before the temporary manager and current manager includes the person who held the office immediately after the temporary manager.

191 Statutory novation of rights, obligations, and liabilities of former manager

(1) If the manager of a registered scheme changes, the rights, obligations, and liabilities of the former manager in relation to the scheme become the rights, obligations, and liabilities of the new manager.

(2) Despite subsection (1), the following rights, obligations, and liabilities remain rights, obligations, and liabilities of the former manager:

(a) any right of the former manager to be paid fees for the performance of its functions, or to be indemnified for liabilities or expenses it incurred, before it ceased to be the manager of the scheme; and

(b) any right, obligation, or liability that the former manager had as a scheme participant; and

(c) any liability for which the former manager could not have been indemnified out of the scheme property if it had remained the scheme's manager.

(3) This section is subject to any order of the court under section 209.

192 Lodging of notice of changes to manager

(1) Within 5 working days after a change to the manager of a registered scheme, the new manager must ensure that notice of the change is lodged with the Registrar.

(2) A manager that contravenes this section commits an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $50,000.

(3) The offence in this section is an infringement offence (see subpart 5 of Part 8).

Change of supervisor

193 Change of supervisor

(1) The supervisor of a registered scheme ceases to hold that appointment (subject to subsection (2)) if the supervisor—

(a) is removed by the FMA if it is satisfied that the manager and the supervisor no longer meet the requirements in section 127(1)(e) (registration requirements); or

(b) is removed by the FMA or the issuer under Part 2 of the Financial Markets Supervisors Act 2011; or

(c) is removed by a special resolution of the scheme participants; or

(d) is removed or resigns in accordance with the governing document.

(2) However, a supervisor may not—

(a) be removed or resign under subsection (1)(c) or (d) unless—

(i) all functions and duties of the position have been performed; or

(ii) another licensed supervisor has been appointed, and accepted the appointment, in its place; or

(iii) the court consents:

(b) (despite anything in the governing document) be removed by the manager under subsection (1)(d) without the FMA's consent.

Compare: 1960 No 99 s 10; 1978 No 103 s 48; 2006 No 40 s 116E(2)

194 Lodging of notice of change of supervisor

(1) Within 5 working days after a change of supervisor of a registered scheme, the manager must ensure that notice of the change is lodged with the Registrar.

(2) A manager that contravenes this section commits an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $50,000.

(3) The offence in this section is an infringement offence (see subpart 5 of Part 8).

Cancellation of registration

195 Cancellation of registration

(1) The FMA may direct that the registration of a registered scheme be cancelled—

(a) if satisfied on reasonable grounds that the scheme does not meet the registration requirements under section 127; or

(b) if the FMA has reasonable cause to believe that the scheme has no scheme participants; or

(c) on the written request of the manager of the scheme (subject to subsection (4)), if the supervisor certifies or, if there is no supervisor, the manager certifies that—

(i) the cancellation has been approved by a special resolution of the scheme participants (subject to any restriction in the governing document); or

(ii) there is no material adverse effect on the scheme participants from the cancellation; or

(d) if the scheme has been wound up or dissolved or has otherwise ceased to exist.

(2) The FMA must not direct cancellation under subsection (1)(a) or (b) unless—

(a) the FMA gives the manager of the scheme no less than 20 working days' written notice of the following matters before it exercises the power:

(i) that the FMA may direct cancellation; and

(ii) the reasons why it may exercise that power; and

(b) the FMA gives the manager or the manager's representative an opportunity to make written submissions on the matter within that notice period.

(3) If the FMA makes a direction under this section,—

(a) the FMA must notify the manager and the supervisor of the registered scheme of the direction; and

(b) have adequate arrangements for operating its licensed markets, including arrangements—

(i) for notifying disclosures made to it under a disclosure obligation and for continuing to make those disclosures available; and

Issue of licence

315 Application for licence

(1) A person may apply for a licence to operate a financial product market in the manner that is specified by the FMA.

(2) The applicant must provide to the FMA or the Minister the information that is required by the FMA or the Minister to assist in determining the application (for example, the draft market rules).

(3) The FMA must, within a reasonable time, give the application to the Minister with advice about the application.

316 When licence may be issued

The Minister, after receiving an application under section 315, may issue a financial product market licence, by written notice to the applicant, if the Minister is satisfied that—

(a) the applicant is capable of operating a financial product market in accordance with the general obligations under section 314 (having regard to the proposed conditions of the licence); and

(b) there is no reason to believe that the applicant will not comply with the market operator obligations that will apply if the licence is granted; and

(c) the applicant is a body corporate and is, or will be, registered under the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 on and from commencing to operate the financial product market.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 795B(1) (Aust)

317 When licence may be issued for overseas-regulated market

(1) If an applicant is authorised to operate a financial product market in an overseas jurisdiction in which its principal place of business is located, the Minister, after receiving an application under section 315, may issue a licence authorising the applicant to operate the same market in New Zealand, by written notice to the applicant, if the Minister is satisfied that—

(a) there is no reason to believe that the applicant will not comply with the market operator obligations that will apply if the licence is granted; and

(b) the operation of the market in that jurisdiction is subject to requirements and supervision that are sufficiently equivalent, in relation to the degree of investor protection and market integrity they achieve, to the requirements and supervision to which financial product markets are subject under this Act in relation to those matters; and

(c) the applicant undertakes to co-operate with the FMA by sharing information and in other appropriate ways; and

(d) no director, senior manager, or controlling owner of the applicant—

(i) would be disqualified under section 14(2) of the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 (if the applicant were a provider to which that Act applied); or

(ii) has been disqualified from managing a body corporate under the laws of any other jurisdiction.

(2) In considering an application for a licence under this section or exercising another power under this subpart in relation to a market licensed under this section, the Minister must have regard to the following matters (in addition to the matters in section 308):

(a) the criteria that the licensed market operator or applicant satisfied to obtain an authorisation to operate the same market in the overseas jurisdiction in which its principal place of business is located; and

(b) the obligations the licensed market operator or applicant must continue to satisfy to keep the authorisation; and

(c) the level of supervision to which the operation of the market in that jurisdiction is subject; and

(d) whether adequate arrangements exist for co-operation between the FMA and the authority that is responsible for that supervision.

(3) Nothing in this section prevents the Minister from issuing a licence under section 316 to an applicant that is authorised to operate a financial product market in an overseas jurisdiction.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 795B(2) (Aust)

318 Conditions of licence

(1) A financial product market licence is subject to the following conditions:

(a) a condition that the licensed market operator may, under the licence, operate only the financial product market covered by the licence (as described in the licence); and

(b) a condition that specifies the clearing and settlement arrangements that must be followed or the type of settlement arrangements that may be used for the financial product markets covered by the licence; and

(c) a condition that specifies the arrangements for enforcing breaches of the market rules; and

(d) any other conditions imposed by the Minister that the Minister thinks fit.

(2) The Minister may only impose those conditions on issue of the licence or by varying the conditions under section 322.

(3) The licensed market operator must comply with the conditions of the licence.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 796A (Aust)

319 Procedural requirements

(1) The Minister must not refuse to issue a licence, or include conditions that are materially more restrictive than those requested in the application, unless—

(a) the Minister gives the applicant no less than 10 working days' written notice of the following matters before he or she exercises the power:

(i) that the Minister may refuse to issue the licence or may include conditions that are materially more restrictive than those requested in the application; and

(ii) the reasons why he or she may do so; and

(b) the Minister gives the applicant or the applicant's representative an opportunity to make written submissions on the matter within that notice period.

(2) The FMA must give written notice of the Minister's decision under section 316 or 317 to the applicant.

320 Licence may cover more than 1 financial product market

(1) The same financial product market licence may cover 2 or more financial product markets.

(2) In that case,—

(a) a reference in this Act to the financial product market to which a licence covers is taken instead to be a reference to each of those financial product markets severally; and

(b) the decision to add another financial product market to a licence must be made on the same basis as a decision to issue a licence; and

(c) a financial product market licence may be varied, suspended, or cancelled in respect of 1 of those markets only, as if each of those markets were separately licensed.

321 FMA must maintain list of licensed markets on Internet site

(1) The FMA must maintain a list of licensed markets on its Internet site.

(2) The list must include, for each licensed market,—

(a) the financial product market that the licence covers; and

(b) the name of the licensed market operator; and

(c) when the licence was issued; and

(d) the conditions of the licence; and

(e) a reference to the market rules for the financial product market that have been approved under this subpart (but the list need not incorporate them); and

(f) if it is a market to which regulations apply under section 351, which regulations apply to it; and

(g) if the licence is issued under section 317, that it is an overseas-regulated market for the purposes of this Act; and

(h) if the licence has been suspended or cancelled, that fact and the date on which that action took effect.

(3) The FMA must update the list if it becomes aware that there is a change, or error, in the information on the list (for example, the approval of the market rules or a change in the name of the licensed market operator).

Changes to licences

322 Variation of conditions

(1) The Minister may, on his or her own initiative under subsection (2) or on the application of a licensed market operator, vary the conditions of the licence at any time after the licence is issued by written notice to the licensed market operator.

(2) The Minister may vary the conditions of the licence on his or her own initiative only—

(a) in 1 of the following circumstances:

(i) if there is a significant change in market circumstances that the Minister is satisfied makes it necessary to vary the conditions, having regard to the market operator obligations and the matters referred to in section 308; or

(ii) in accordance with section 343; and

(b) after following the procedure set out in section 324(1).

(3) A licensed market operator may apply, in the manner that is specified by the FMA, for the Minister to vary the conditions of the licence.

(4) A licensed market operator must provide to the FMA or the Minister the information that is required by the FMA or the Minister to assist it in determining the application.

(5) For the purposes of this subpart, vary, in relation to the conditions of a licence, includes to vary, revoke, add to, or substitute any of those conditions.

323 Minister may suspend or cancel licence

The Minister may, by written notice to the licensed market operator, suspend (for a specified period or until a specified requirement is met) or cancel a licence—

(a) if the licensed market operator, by written notice, requests the Minister to do so; or

(b) if the Minister is satisfied that the licensed market operator has ceased to carry on the business of operating the financial product market; or

(c) if—

(i) the licensed market operator has ceased to be registered under the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 (in the case of a licence issued under section 316); or

(ii) the Minister is satisfied that the licensed market operator has ceased to meet the requirement in section 317(1)(d) (in the case of a licence issued under section 317 (overseas-regulated markets)); or

(d) if the licensed market operator has become subject to an insolvency event; or

(e) in accordance with section 343; or

(f) in the case of a licence issued under section 317 (overseas-regulated markets), if—

(i) the licensed market operator ceases to be authorised to operate a financial product market in the overseas jurisdiction in which the licensed market operator's principal place of business is located; or

(ii) there is a change to the regulatory regime applying in relation to the market to which the licence relates in the jurisdiction in which the licensed market operator's principal place of business is located and, because of that change, the Minister is not satisfied as to the matters in section 317(1)(b).

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 797B (Aust)

324 Procedure for varying of conditions or suspension or cancellation of licence

(1) The Minister must not vary the conditions of a licence on his or her own initiative under section 322(1), refuse an application for a variation under section 322, or suspend or cancel a licence under section 323 unless—

(a) the Minister gives the licensed market operator no less than 10 working days' written notice of the following matters before he or she exercises the power:

(i) that the Minister may exercise the power; and

(ii) the reasons why he or she may exercise the power; and

(b) the Minister gives the licensed market operator or the licensed market operator's representative an opportunity to make written submissions on the matter within that notice period.

(2) The FMA must give written notice of the Minister's decision under section 322 or 323 to the licensed market operator.

325 Effect of suspension

(1) A person whose financial product market licence is suspended is taken not to hold that licence while it is suspended.

(2) However, the Minister may specify in the written notice to the licensed market operator that subsection (1) does not apply for specified purposes.

Compare: Corporations Act 2001 s 797D (Aust)

(3) Listing rules must include rules that—

(a) relate to the approval of persons for the purpose of enabling financial products issued by those persons to be traded on the market; and

(b) require those persons to be party to a listing agreement with the licensed market operator and that relate to the entry into, and revocation of, listing agreements; and

329 When market rules have effect

A market rule, or change to a market rule, for a licensed market has no effect, either in contract or for the purposes of section 327, until it has been approved under section 331.

330 Approval process for proposed market rules and rule changes

(1) If a person applies for the approval of any proposed market rules or proposed rule change by the FMA, the FMA must, within the approval period,—

(a) approve the market rules or rule change; or

(b) extend the approval period; or

(c) decline to approve the market rules or rule change.

(2) An application under this section must be made in the manner specified by the FMA.

(4) If, during the approval period, the applicant revises and resubmits the proposed market rules or rule change, then this does not result in the commencement of a new approval period under this section if the revision—

(a) is made in response to comments by the FMA; or

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36K

(i) the purposes of this Part (and the main and additional purposes of the Act stated in sections 3 and 4); and

(ii) the consistency of the rules or the rule change with the obligations under section 314; or

(b) (if subpart 4 would apply to the rules once approved) the rules, or the rules as changed, for the financial product market will not provide appropriate continuous disclosure by listed issuers of material information that is not generally available to the market, after having regard to—

(i) the purposes of this Part (and the main and additional purposes of the Act stated in sections 3 and 4); and

(ii) any other matters that the FMA considers relevant.

(2) The FMA must, in considering whether to approve proposed market rules for a new market, take into account any previously approved market rules that the applicant proposes to also apply to the relevant market.

(3) An approval under this section is secondary legislation (see Part 3 of the Legislation Act 2019 for publication requirements).

(4) However, the approval does not need to incorporate the market rules or rule change that have been approved.

(iii) suggests alternative ways (if any) by which the matter or matters are being or may be dealt with; and

(iv) sets out if, when, and how the licensed market operator proposes to provide for the matter or matters (if at all).

(4) This section does not allow the FMA to request a draft market rule or change on a matter that is not within the matters set out in section 328.

(a) is available for public inspection, free of charge and during normal office hours, at the head office of that licensed market operator; and

(b) is published on an Internet site maintained by, or on behalf of, the licensed market operator at all reasonable times.

(2) A licensed market operator that fails to comply with subsection (1) commits an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $50,000.

Monitoring of market operator obligations

337 Licensed market operator must give report on compliance with market operator obligations to FMA

(1) A licensed market operator must, within 3 months after the end of its reporting period, give a report to the FMA and the Minister on the extent to which it has complied with its market operator obligations in the preceding reporting period.

(2) The report must contain, or be accompanied by, the information (if any) in relation to the licensed market operator's performance against its market operator obligations specified by the FMA before the commencement of the relevant reporting period.

(3) The reporting period for the purposes of this subpart is the financial year of the licensed market operator or any longer reporting period set in the conditions of the licence.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36YA

338 FMA to carry out market operator obligations reviews

(1) The FMA may, at any time, carry out a review of how well a licensed market operator is meeting any or all of its market operator obligations.

(2) The FMA must carry out a review of how well a licensed market operator is meeting all of its market operator obligations at least once in respect of each reporting period of the licensed market operator.

(3) The FMA—

(a) may, in carrying out the review, take into account the most recent report and other information provided under section 337 and any other information it considers appropriate; and

(b) must, after carrying out the review, provide a draft written report on its review to the licensed market operator and take into account any submissions made by the licensed market operator within the reasonable period for submissions specified by the FMA.

(4) The FMA must not carry out a review of a designated FMI (as defined in section 5 of the Financial Market Infrastructures Act 2021) of a licensed market operator under this section (but nothing in this subsection prevents a review under that Act being carried out in conjunction with a review under this section).

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36YB

Section 338(4): amended, on 1 March 2024, by section 163(1) of the Financial Market Infrastructures Act 2021 (2021 No 13).

339 FMA must make written report on market operator obligations review

(1) The FMA must give a written report on a review under section 338 to the Minister and the licensed market operator—

(a) as soon as practicable after carrying out the review; and

(b) in any case, within 3 months after the licensed market operator has provided its report to the FMA under section 337.

(2) The FMA must also publish the written report on the review on an Internet site maintained by or on behalf of the FMA.

(3) However, the FMA may, in publishing the written report of its review, omit from the published report any information for which it considers there would be a good reason for withholding under the Official Information Act 1982 if a request for that information were made under that Act.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36YC

340 FMA may require licensed market operator to submit action plan on failure to meet market operator obligations

(1) If the FMA considers, after carrying out a review under section 338(1) or (2), that a licensed market operator has failed or is failing to meet any 1 or more of its market operator obligations, it may, by written notice, require the licensed market operator to submit an action plan to the FMA.

(2) The notice must—

(a) set out the details of the failure; and

(b) specify the date by which the action plan must be submitted to the FMA.

(3) The licensed market operator must, as soon as practicable but in any case before the date specified by the FMA, do either or both of the following things:

(a) provide an action plan that addresses the failure and specifies—

(i) the actions that the licensed market operator proposes to take to remedy the failure or to avoid any further failure; and

(ii) the timetable for taking those actions:

(b) provide the FMA with a written report that—

(i) identifies any matter that has not been addressed by an action plan; and

(ii) explains why the licensed market operator does not consider that matter to be a failure or gives any other reasons why the licensed market operator has not provided an action plan on the matter.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36YD

341 Approval, amendment, or rejection of action plan

(1) If a licensed market operator submits an action plan, the FMA may—

(a) approve the action plan; or

(b) require the licensed market operator to amend the action plan and resubmit it to the FMA by a specified date for approval or rejection; or

(c) reject the action plan.

(2) If the FMA requires the licensed market operator to amend an action plan provided to the FMA, the licensed market operator must do either or both of the following things:

(a) provide an amended action plan that addresses the matter required to be amended:

(b) provide the FMA with a written report that—

(i) identifies any matter that has not been addressed by an amendment to the action plan first provided; and

(ii) explains why the licensed market operator does not consider that the matter needs amending or gives any other reasons why the licensed market operator has not provided an amendment addressing the matter.

(3) If the FMA approves the action plan (whether as first provided or after amendment), the licensed market operator must comply with the action plan.

(4) An action plan that has been approved by the FMA may be varied at any time by agreement between the licensed market operator and the FMA.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36YE

342 Minister may give market operator obligations direction to licensed market operator

(1) The Minister may, after having regard to any advice of the FMA, give a written direction to a licensed market operator if—

(a) the Minister considers that the licensed market operator has failed or is failing to meet any 1 or more of its market operator obligations; and

(b) any of the following has occurred:

(i) the licensed market operator has not provided an action plan when required under section 340; or

(ii) the licensed market operator has not provided an amended action plan when required under section 341; or

(iii) the FMA has rejected a licensed market operator's action plan; or

(iv) the licensed market operator has not complied with an approved action plan.

(2) The direction may specify—

(a) the actions that the licensed market operator must take to remedy any failure or to avoid any further failure to meet any 1 or more of its market operator obligations; and

(b) the timetable for taking those actions.

(3) The licensed market operator must comply with the direction.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36YF

343 Minister may vary, suspend, or cancel licence

(1) If the Minister could give a direction under section 342, the Minister may also, by written notice to the licensed market operator, vary the conditions of the licence (following the procedure set out in section 324).

(2) If the Minister could give a direction under section 342 and the Minister is satisfied that the licensed market operator does not meet the requirements referred to in section 316 or 317, the Minister may also, by written notice to the licensed market operator, suspend or cancel the licence (following the procedure set out in section 324).

Control limits on licensed market operators

344 Power to impose control limits on licensed market operators

(1) The Governor-General may, by Order in Council made on the recommendation of the Minister, make regulations imposing, altering, or revoking a control limit (which is the highest percentage of voting rights in the body corporate that may be held or controlled by any person) for a body corporate that—

(a) is, or may be, a licensed market operator; or

(b) is a holding company of a body corporate referred to in paragraph (a).

(2) A control limit does not apply to a body corporate before its licence as a licensed market operator takes effect.

(3) The Minister must not make a recommendation for the purposes of subsection (1) unless he or she has consulted the body corporate and is satisfied that it is in the public interest to make the recommendation.

(4) For the purposes of this section and the rest of this subpart,— control, in relation to a voting right, means having, directly or indirectly, effective control of the voting right voting right means a currently exercisable right to cast a vote at meetings of members or shareholders of a body corporate, not being a right to vote that is exercisable only in 1 or more of the following circumstances:

(a) during a period in which a payment or distribution (or part of a payment or distribution) in respect of the financial product that confers the voting right is in arrears or some other default exists:

(b) on a proposal that affects rights attached to the financial product that confers the voting right:

(c) during the liquidation of the body corporate:

(d) in respect of a special, immaterial, or remote matter that is inconsequential to control of the body corporate.

345 Control limit not to be exceeded

(1) No person may hold or control voting rights in a body corporate that exceed any control limit for that body corporate that applies under regulations made under section 344, except in accordance with an approval under section 347.

(2) For the purposes of this section, voting rights held or controlled by an associated person of a person must be treated as voting rights held or controlled by that person.

(3) Subsection (1) does not apply to any voting rights in a body corporate held or controlled by a person to the extent that those rights were held or controlled by that person before the control limit was imposed or decreased, as the case may be.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36T

346 Effect of exceeding control limit

(1) Every person who contravenes section 345—

(a) must take the steps that are necessary to ensure that the person is no longer in contravention of that section at the end of 60 working days after the date of first contravention; and

(b) must not exercise or control the exercise of any voting rights that exceed the control limit while the person contravenes that section.

(2) An exercise of voting rights in a body corporate by or under the control of a person in contravention of subsection (1)(b) is of no effect, and must be disregarded in counting the votes concerned.

(3) However, subsections (1)(b) and (2) do not invalidate a resolution if the votes concerned were counted by the body corporate in good faith and without knowledge that the voting rights were exercised in contravention of subsection (1)(b).

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36U

347 Application for approval to exceed control limit

(1) A person may apply to the FMA for approval for any person or class of persons to exceed a control limit for a body corporate that applies under regulations made under section 344.

(2) The FMA must, within a reasonable time, give the application to the Minister with advice about the application.

(3) The Governor-General may, by Order in Council made on the recommendation of the Minister, approve an application under subsection (1) and specify the terms and conditions (if any) applying to the approval.

(4) The Minister may not make a recommendation for the purposes of subsection (3) unless,—

(a) if the body corporate is not the applicant or 1 of the applicants for the approval, he or she has consulted the body corporate on the application; and

(b) he or she is satisfied that it is in the public interest to make the recommendation.

(5) An approval granted under subsection (3)—

(a) may have retrospective effect; but

(b) is of no effect if any term or condition of the approval has not been complied with.

(6) An approval granted under subsection (3) is for the purposes of the control limit only, and not for the purposes of any other enactment.

(7) An order under this section—

(a) is secondary legislation (see Part 3 of the Legislation Act 2019 for publication requirements); but

(b) may commence in accordance with subsection (5)(a), even if it is not yet published.

(1) The Governor-General may, by Order in Council made on the recommendation of the Minister,—

(a) revoke an approval granted under section 347; or

(b) vary, revoke, or suspend any term or condition of such an approval.

(2) The Minister may not make a recommendation for the purposes of subsection (1) unless—

(a) he or she has consulted the person to whom the approval was granted and the body corporate concerned; and

Other provisions relating to licensing of financial product markets

349 FMA may give advice to Minister

(1) The FMA may give advice to the Minister in relation to any matter in respect of which the Minister has a discretion under this subpart or any other matter concerning financial product markets.

(2) If the Minister has delegated a function or power to the FMA under this subpart, any obligation under this subpart for the FMA to give advice to the Minister, or for the Minister to have regard to the advice of the FMA, in connection with that matter does not apply.

350 Delegation of Minister's licensing functions and powers to FMA

(1) The Minister may, either generally or particularly, delegate to the FMA all or any of the Minister's functions or powers under this subpart in connection with the licensing of financial product markets.

(2) A delegation under this section must be in writing.

(3) The FMA must not delegate any functions or powers delegated to it under this section except in accordance with the terms of the delegation.

(4) The power of the Minister to delegate under this section—

(a) is subject to any prohibitions, restrictions, or conditions contained in any other Act in relation to the delegation of the Minister's functions or powers; but

(b) does not limit any power of delegation conferred on the Minister by any other Act.

(5) The FMA may perform or exercise any functions or powers delegated to it under this section in the same manner and with the same effect as if they had been conferred on the FMA directly (subject to any restrictions or conditions imposed under the delegation).

(6) If the FMA purports to act under a delegation under this section, the FMA must, in the absence of proof to the contrary, be presumed to be acting in accordance with the terms of the delegation.

(7) No delegation affects or prevents the performance or exercise of any function or power by the Minister or affects the responsibility of the Minister for the actions of a person acting under the delegation.

351 Regulations modifying this Part or Part 7 or 7A for licensed markets

(1) The Governor-General may, on the recommendation of the Minister in accordance with subsection (3), make regulations for any 1 or more of the following purposes:

(a) providing that any 1 or more of the provisions in subparts 2 to 8 of this Part (including any definitions in this Act as they apply in the relevant provisions, but excluding the obligations in section 314) do not apply in respect of a licensed market or class of licensed markets (and accordingly do not apply in relation to any issuers listed or financial products quoted on those markets):

(ab) providing that section 451(1)(d) does not apply in respect of persons that are listed issuers only in respect of a licensed market or class of licensed markets, and providing for replacement or modified requirements to apply relating to—

(ii) CRD records and climate-related disclosures (for those listed issuers that would otherwise be climate reporting entities under section 461O(1)(a)):

(b) providing for replacement or modified provisions to apply in respect of the licensed market or class of licensed markets (for example, instead of having continuous disclosure provisions in the listing rules and requiring listed issuers to comply with those provisions, having periodic or event-based disclosure or some other way of dealing with any information asymmetries in the market):

(c) stating which provisions of the regulations (if any) are Part 5 market provisions for the purposes of this Act and, if so, whether the provisions give rise to civil liability under section 385(3) or (4) (see Part 8, in which Part 5 market provisions are specified to be civil liability provisions), including which provisions are alternative disclosure obligations for the purposes of section 314:

(d) providing that a financial product market must not be treated as a licensed market for the purposes of any provision or provisions of this Act or any other specified enactment:

(e) providing that issuers of a specified class must not be treated as listed issuers for the purposes of any provision or provisions of this Act or any other specified enactment:

(f) providing that, in specified circumstances, financial products must not be treated as quoted financial products for the purposes of any provision or provisions of this Act or any other specified enactment.

(2) Any regulations made under subsection (1) must specify the licensed market or class of licensed market to which they apply.

(3) The Minister must, in relation to a recommendation under this section,—

(a) have regard to the matters set out in section 308; and

(b) be satisfied, in relation to any recommendation relating to subsection (1)(a) or (d), that the extent to which the regulations disapply any enactment to a licensed market is not broader than is reasonably necessary to address the matters that gave rise to the regulations; and

(c) be satisfied, in relation to any recommendation relating to subsection (1)(e) or (f), that the extent to which the regulations disapply any enactment to issuers or financial products is not broader than is reasonably necessary to address the matters that gave rise to the regulations.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36ZFA

356 Waiver of notification and disclosure obligations

(b) agrees with the licensed market operator a different time, form, or method of notification or disclosure.

(2) A waiver or an agreement under this section must be in writing.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36ZJ

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36ZL

359 Licensed market operator must give notice and have regard to submissions on continuous disclosure determinations

(1) This section and section 360 apply to a determination by a licensed market operator if—

(a) the determination exempts from, waives, or determines the meaning of a continuous disclosure provision of its listing rules for a licensed market (or varies or revokes a determination of that kind); and

(b) that continuous disclosure provision relates to material information that is not generally available to the market.

(2) The licensed market operator must—

(a) give the FMA no less than 2 trading days' written notice, before making the determination, of—

(i) the proposed terms of the determination; and

(ii) the reasons for the proposed determination; and

(b) have regard to any written submissions made to it by the FMA within that notice period; and

(c) must, as soon as is reasonably practicable after making the determination, give written notice to the FMA of—

(i) the terms of the determination; and

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36ZM

360 Limited notice and submissions for urgent determinations

If a licensed market operator thinks it is necessary or desirable in the public interest for a determination to be made more urgently than section 359(2) permits,—

(a) it may give less than 2 trading days' notice before it makes the determination, and the notice and submissions may be oral rather than written; but

(b) it must include in that notice the reasons for acting urgently and must otherwise comply with that subsection.

361 FMA may give directions to licensed market operators

(1) The FMA may give a direction under subsection (2) in accordance with sections 362 to 366 in relation to a licensed market.

(c) direct a licensed market operator to suspend participation by a participant or class of participants in the licensed market.

(3) To avoid doubt, the FMA may not use its power to direct the licensed market operator to amend the market rules or to direct the licensed market operator on the making of a determination on the market rules.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36ZO

362 Grounds for continuous disclosure direction

(1) A direction on the grounds in this section is a continuous disclosure direction.

(2) A direction may be given under section 361 in accordance with sections 364 to 366 if the FMA—

(a) has regard to the purpose of this Part (and the main and additional purposes of the Act stated in sections 3 and 4) and any other matters it considers relevant; and

(b) is satisfied that 1 of the following grounds applies:

(i) a listed issuer has contravened a continuous disclosure obligation or a term or condition of a continuous disclosure exemption; or

(ii) a determination by a licensed market operator to which section 359 applies does not achieve appropriate continuous disclosure by a listed issuer of material information that is not generally available to the market; or

(iii) the licensed market operator's administration of the continuous disclosure provisions of its listing rules does not achieve appropriate continuous disclosure by a listed issuer of material information that is not generally available to the market; and

(c) is also satisfied that the direction is necessary or desirable to protect people who are trading the quoted financial products or the class of quoted financial products and that there is no more appropriate course of action to address the situation.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36ZP

363 Grounds for other directions

A direction may also be given under section 361 in accordance with sections 364 to 366 if the FMA is satisfied that—

(a) the direction is necessary or desirable to protect people who are trading the quoted financial products, or the class of quoted financial products, of 1 or more listed issuers; but

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 36ZQ

364 Notice, opportunity for licensed market operator to act, and submissions before FMA gives directions

(a) the FMA has given written notice to the licensed market operator and listed issuer or issuers concerned of—

(i) its opinion that the requirements of section 362 or 363 are satisfied; and

(ii) the proposed terms of the direction; and

(iii) the reasons for its opinion; and

(b) after receiving the FMA's notice, the licensed market operator does not take, within the reasonable period stated in the notice,—

(i) in the case of a proposed direction to suspend trading of the quoted financial products, action to prevent that trading; or

(ii) in any other case, any other action that, in the FMA's view, is adequate to address the situation raised in the notice; and

(c) the FMA has had regard to any written submissions made to it by the licensed market operator and the listed issuer or issuers concerned within that notice period; and

(d) the FMA still considers that it is appropriate to give the direction to the licensed market operator.

(2) A reasonable period in subsection (1)(b) is, in the case of a continuous disclosure direction, 2 trading days (or any longer time the FMA wishes to allow) and, in the case of any other direction, any longer time that is reasonable in the circumstances.

(c) the applicant is capable of effectively performing that service (having regard to the proposed conditions of licence); and

(d) there is no reason to believe that the applicant is likely to contravene the market services licensee obligations; and

(e) the applicant is, or will be, registered under the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 on and from commencing to provide that service; and

(f) in the case of an applicant for a licence to act as a manager of a registered scheme or to be a DIMS licensee, the applicant or any authorised body under section 400 does not have in its constitution any provision under which directors of the applicant or authorised body (as the case may be) may, when exercising powers or performing duties as a director, act otherwise than in the best interests of the applicant or authorised body; and

(g) in the case of an application for a licence to act as an administrator of a financial benchmark, the issue of a licence is necessary or desirable in order to promote either or both of the additional purposes set out in section 448B.

Section 396(g): inserted, on 14 March 2021, by section 39 of the Financial Markets (Derivatives Margin and Benchmarking) Reform Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 46).

397 Procedural requirements

(1) The FMA must, before making a decision under section 396,—

(a) have regard to the prescribed matters; and

(b) have regard to whether the applicant, or 1 or more of the applicant's directors or senior managers, is a licensed provider (within the meaning of section 4 of the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008); and

(c) have regard to whether the provision of the market service to which the application relates is merely incidental to the provision of another market service that is or will be covered by a licence; and

(d) consult all prescribed persons or classes of prescribed persons (if any).

(1A) The FMA must make a decision under section 396 in the prescribed manner (if any).

(2) The FMA must not refuse to issue a licence, or include limits, restrictions, or other conditions under section 403(3)(a) or (4) that are materially more restrictive than those requested in the application, unless—

(a) the FMA gives the applicant no less than 10 working days' written notice of the following matters before it exercises the power:

(i) that the FMA may refuse to issue the licence or impose the limits, restrictions, or other conditions; and

(ii) the reasons why it may exercise that power; and

(b) the FMA gives the applicant or the applicant's representative an opportunity to make written submissions on the matter within that notice period.

398 Notice of decision

(1) The FMA must give written notice of its decision under section 396 to—

(a) the applicant; and

(b) every other prescribed person.

(2) If the FMA refuses to issue a licence or includes limits, restrictions, or other conditions under section 403(3)(a) or (4) that are materially more restrictive than those requested in the application, the written notice under subsection (1) must include a statement of the FMA's reasons for exercising the power.

Section 398(2): amended, on 15 March 2021, by section 22 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

399 Licence must be issued for particular market services

(1) If the FMA decides to issue a licence, it must ensure that it specifies the particular market services, or class of market services, that it covers.

(2) The same licence may cover more than 1 type of market services.

(3) In that case,—

(a) a reference in this Act to the market services that a licence covers is taken instead to be a reference to each of those market services severally; and

(b) the decision to add another market service or class of market services to a licence must be made on the same basis as a decision to issue a licence; and

(c) a licence may be varied, suspended, or cancelled in respect of 1 of those market services or classes only, as if each were separately licensed.

400 Licence may cover authorised bodies

(1) A licence may, in its conditions, authorise 1 or more named related bodies corporate of the licensee to provide a market service covered by the licence if the FMA is satisfied that—

(a) arrangements are or will be in place to ensure that the licensee will maintain appropriate control or supervision over the provision of that service by the related body corporate under the licence; and

(b) the related body corporate is capable of effectively performing that service (having regard to the proposed conditions of licence); and

(c) there is no reason to believe that the related body corporate is likely to contravene the market services licensee obligations; and

(d) the related body corporate is, or will be, registered under the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 on and from commencing to provide that service; and

(e) the related body corporate meets the eligibility criteria and other requirements prescribed by the regulations for the purposes of this section (if any).

(1A) A licence may also, in its conditions, authorise 1 or more named entities to provide a financial advice service covered by the licence if the FMA is satisfied that—

(a) arrangements are or will be in place to ensure that the licensee will maintain appropriate control or supervision over the provision of that service by the entity under the licence; and

(b) the entity is capable of effectively providing that service (having regard to the proposed conditions of the licence); and

(c) there is no reason to believe that the entity is likely to contravene the market services licensee obligations; and

(d) the entity is, or will be, registered under the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 on and from commencing to provide that service; and

(e) the entity meets the eligibility criteria and other requirements prescribed by the regulations for the purposes of this section (if any).

(1B) However, subsections (1) and (1A) do not apply if the licensee is an individual.

(2) The licence may also, in its conditions, determine that, for the purposes of 1 or more provisions of this Part, notices or reports need to be given to or by, or powers or duties may be exercised or performed by, only—

(a) the licensee (and in this case the relevant action must be treated, for that purpose, as being given to or by, or exercised or performed by, the 1 or more bodies authorised under subsection (1) or (1A)); or

(b) 1 or more bodies authorised under subsection (1) or (1A) (and in this case the relevant action must be treated, for that purpose, as being given to or by, or exercised or performed by, the licensee).

(3) If an authorised body contravenes any market services licensee obligation, the licensee must be treated as also having contravened that market services licensee obligation.

401 FMA must send licence details to Registrar

(1) The FMA must send the details specified in subsection (2) to the Registrar.

(2) The details, for each licence, are—

(d) the authorised bodies (if any); and

(e) any other prescribed information.

(3) The FMA may publicly notify any details about a licence as it thinks fit.

Conditions of licence

402 Conditions of licence

(1) The licence is subject to—

(a) a condition that the licensee or authorised body may, under the licence, provide only the market services or class of market services to which the licence relates and for which each person is authorised under the licence; and

(b) the conditions imposed by the FMA under section 403; and

(c) the conditions imposed by regulations (if any).

(2) The condition in subsection (1)(a) is subject to the limits and restrictions imposed under section 403(3)(a).

(3) The licensee and every authorised body must comply with the conditions imposed on the licensee's licence.

403 When FMA may impose permitted conditions

(1) The FMA may, by written notice to the applicant or licensee,—

(a) impose conditions on a licence when the licence is issued; and

(b) vary, revoke, add to, or substitute any conditions of licence imposed under this section at any time after the licence is issued.

(2) A condition referred to in subsection (1) may only be of a prescribed kind or relate to a prescribed matter (except as set out in subsections (3) to (5)).

(3) A condition referred to in subsection (1) may—

(a) impose limits or restrictions on the services that are covered by the licence (for example, by reference to particular financial products or other financial advice products, issuers, investors, or clients, or classes of financial products or other financial advice products, issuers, investors, or clients, or by reference to any other matters):

(b) impose conditions relating to the requirements referred to in section 396 or 400 (for example, to ensure that those requirements continue to be satisfied and to require verification that those requirements continue to be satisfied):

(c) specify the date of expiry of the licence (the expiry date).

(4) In the case of a licence relating to a financial advice service, a condition referred to in subsection (1) may also—

(a) state which types of financial advice may, or may not, be given by the following on behalf of the licensee or an authorised body:

(i) financial advisers in general, a class or classes of financial advisers, or 1 or more particular financial advisers:

(ii) nominated representatives in general, a class or classes of nominated representatives, or 1 or more particular nominated representatives:

(b) authorise the licensee or an authorised body (P) to do either or both of the following:

(ii) engage an individual through 1 or more interposed persons (as described in section 431E(b)) to give advice to P's retail clients on P's behalf:

(c) if the licence includes an authorisation under paragraph (b), impose limits or restrictions on that authorisation (including, for example, by requiring the entity or an interposed person to be authorised by a licence (whether as licensee or an authorised body) to provide a financial advice service, or to be registered under the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008, or both):

(d) prohibit (whether absolutely, in specified circumstances, or unless specified requirements are met) P from engaging a financial adviser to give regulated financial advice on P's behalf if P knows or ought to know that the financial adviser is also engaged by another financial advice provider to give regulated financial advice on that other provider's behalf.

(5) In the case of a licence to act as an administrator of a financial benchmark, a condition referred to in subsection (1) may also impose conditions to achieve the purposes set out in section 448B (for example, to ensure that the benchmark complies with applicable international requirements).

Section 403(2): amended, on 14 March 2021, by section 40(1) of the Financial Markets (Derivatives Margin and Benchmarking) Reform Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 46).

404 Licensee may apply for variation of conditions

(1) A licensee may apply, in the manner that is specified by the FMA, for the FMA to exercise a power under section 403(1)(b) (for example, to vary a condition that imposes restrictions on the services that can be provided under the licence or to vary the authorised bodies or the market services or class of services that those bodies may provide).

(2) A licensee must provide to the FMA the information that is required by the FMA to assist it in determining the application.

405 Procedure for variation of conditions

The FMA must not exercise a power under section 403(1)(b) (except on an application under section 404), or refuse an application for a variation under section 404, unless—

(a) the FMA gives the licensee no less than 10 working days' written notice of the following matters before it exercises the power:

(i) that the FMA may exercise the power; and

(ii) the reasons why it may exercise the power; and

(b) the FMA gives the licensee or the licensee's representative an opportunity to make written submissions on the matter within that notice period.

406 Consequences of contravening conditions

(1) If a licensee or an authorised body contravenes a condition of a licence, the FMA may exercise a power under subpart 3 (for example, it may require the licensee or authorised body to submit an action plan).

(2) Subsection (1) does not limit subpart 3 of Part 8 (which provides for civil liability that may be imposed in relation to a contravention of a condition imposed by regulations).

406A Effect of condition requiring giver of advice or interposed person to be authorised by licence or registered

(1) This section applies if, under section 403(4)(b) and (c), a licence relating to a financial advice service—

(a) authorises the licensee or an authorised body (P) to do either or both of the following:

(i) engage an entity (E) to give regulated financial advice to P's retail clients on P's behalf:

(ii) engage an individual through 1 or more interposed persons (F) to give advice to P's retail clients on P's behalf; and

(b) includes either or both of the following conditions:

(i) a condition requiring E or F to be authorised by a licence to provide a financial advice service (a licensing condition):

(ii) a condition requiring E or F to be registered under the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 (FSP Act) (a registration condition).

(2) If the licence includes a licensing condition, for the purpose of enabling compliance with that condition, this Part applies,—

(a) in relation to E, as if E, in giving regulated financial advice on behalf of P, were providing a financial advice service; and

(b) in relation to F, as if F, in engaging individuals to give regulated financial advice on behalf of P, were providing a financial advice service.

(3) If the licence includes a registration condition, for the purpose of enabling compliance with that condition, the FSP Act applies,—

(a) in relation to E, as if E, in giving regulated financial advice on behalf of P, were providing a financial advice service; and

(b) in relation to F, as if F, in engaging individuals to give regulated financial advice on behalf of P, were providing a financial advice service.

(4) This section does not affect the application of this Part or the FSP Act to P.

Section 406A: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 25 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

Expiry, suspension, or cancellation of licences

407 Duration of licence

(1) A licence continues in force until the close of its expiry date unless sooner cancelled.

(2) If a licensee applies for a new licence no later than 2 months before the expiry date of an existing licence that the new licence is intended to supersede, and the application is not disposed of before the expiry date, the existing licence continues in force until the application is disposed of.

408 When FMA may suspend or cancel licence

The FMA may suspend (for a specified period or until a specified requirement is met and in relation to the licensee, any authorised body or bodies, or all of them) or cancel a licence—

(a) if the licensee, by written notice, requests the FMA to do so; or

(b) if the FMA is satisfied that the licensee or an authorised body has died, is incapacitated, has ceased to exist, or has become subject to an insolvency event; or

(c) in accordance with subpart 3.

409 Effect of expiry, suspension, or cancellation of licence on appointments

(1) The expiry or cancellation of a licence does not, of itself, terminate an appointment held by the licensee or any authorised body (but, if the person continues to hold the appointment and does not obtain a licence, or authorisation under a licence, that covers the appointment, the person may contravene section 388).

(2) If a licence is suspended, the person or persons to whom the suspension relates are taken not to hold, or be authorised by, that licence while the suspension is in effect.

Subpart 3—Monitoring and enforcement of licences

410 Meaning of material change of circumstances

In this subpart, material change of circumstances, in relation to a licence, means—

(a) a change that adversely affects the licensee's or an authorised body's capacity to perform the market services covered by the licence in an effective manner; or

(b) a change that means that the requirements referred to in section 396(a) to (g) or 400(1)(a) to (e) or (1A)(a) to (e) are not, or are no longer, satisfied

(where those provisions are applied with all necessary modifications as if references to the applicant or body corporate (or entity) were references to the licensee or authorised body respectively).

Section 410(b): replaced, on 15 March 2021, by section 26 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

Reports

411 Licensee must deliver reports to FMA

Every licensee must, at the prescribed times or on the occurrence of the prescribed events and otherwise in the prescribed manner, send to the FMA reports that contain the prescribed information.

412 Licensee must report certain matters

(1) Every licensee must ensure that there are in place effective methods for—

(a) monitoring the licensee's and every authorised body's compliance with the market services licensee obligations; and

(b) identifying material changes in circumstances.

(2) Subsection (3) applies if a licensee believes that—

(a) the licensee or an authorised body has contravened, may have contravened, or is likely to contravene a market services licensee obligation in a material respect; or

(b) a material change of circumstances has occurred, may have occurred, or is likely to occur in relation to the licence; or

(c) the information provided under section 395 or 404 is false or misleading in a material particular.

(3) The licensee must, as soon as practicable after the licensee forms the belief referred to in subsection (2), send a report containing details of the belief, the licensee's grounds for the belief, and all other prescribed information—

(a) to the FMA; or

(b) if the licensee is a manager of a registered scheme (other than a restricted scheme),—

(i) to the FMA and the supervisor, if the report is of a contravention or possible contravention of a market services licensee obligation imposed by a condition of the licence; or

(ii) to the supervisor, if the report is of a contravention or possible contravention of any other market services licensee obligation.

413 Restriction on use of report

A report provided by a licensee under section 412 is not admissible as evidence in a criminal proceeding against the licensee, except in a criminal proceeding that concerns the falsity of the report.

FMA's powers in case of contravention of market services licensee obligation, material change, etc

414 FMA's powers in case of contravention of market services licensee obligation, material change, etc

(1) The FMA may exercise a power under subsection (2) if it is satisfied that—

(a) a licensee or an authorised body has materially contravened a market services licensee obligation; or

(b) a material change of circumstances has occurred in relation to a licence; or

(c) the information provided under section 395 or 404 by a licensee is false or misleading in a material particular; or

(d) a licensee or an authorised body is likely to materially contravene a market services licensee obligation or a material change of circumstances is likely to occur in relation to a licence.

(2) The FMA may, by written notice to the licensee or an authorised body and otherwise in the prescribed manner, do 1 or more of the following:

(a) censure the licensee or authorised body (or both):

(b) require the licensee or authorised body (or both) to submit an action plan to the FMA within the time and in the manner specified by the FMA:

(c) give a direction to the licensee or authorised body (or both).

(3) The FMA may also, by written notice to the licensee and otherwise in the prescribed manner, suspend (for a specified period or until a specified requirement is met and in relation to the licensee, any authorised body or bodies, or all of them) or cancel the licence of the licensee if it is satisfied that—

(a) subsection (1)(a), (b), or (c) applies; and

(b) the licensee or an authorised body does not meet, or no longer meets, the requirements referred to in section 396(a) to (g) or 400(1)(a) to (e) or (1A)(a) to (e) (where those provisions are applied with all necessary modifications as if references to the applicant or body corporate (or entity) were references to the licensee or authorised body respectively).

(4) Section 403 also provides for the FMA to vary, revoke, add to, or substitute any conditions of a licence (for example, by removing an authorisation for an authorised body).

Section 414(3)(b): replaced, on 15 March 2021, by section 27 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

415 Procedure for exercising powers

(1) The FMA must not exercise a power under section 414 unless—

(a) the FMA gives the licensee or an authorised body no less than 10 working days' written notice of the following matters before it exercises the power:

(i) that the FMA may exercise the power; and

(ii) the reasons why it may exercise the power; and

(b) the FMA gives the licensee or authorised body or the licensee's or authorised body's representative an opportunity to make written submissions on the matter within that notice period.

(2) The FMA must, before exercising a power under section 414(3), consider whether, in the circumstances, it would be more appropriate to exercise a power under section 414(2).

416 Notice requirements

(1) A notice under section 414(2) or (3) must—

(a) state the FMA's reasons for giving the notice; and

(b) in the case of section 414(3), specify the date on which the suspension or cancellation takes effect.

(2) The FMA must give a copy of the notice to every prescribed person (if any).

Action plan

417 Action plan

If a notice under section 414 requires a person to submit an action plan to the FMA, the person must, as soon as practicable but in any case within the time specified by the FMA and otherwise in the manner specified by the FMA, submit to the FMA an action plan that specifies—

(a) the actions, as the case may be, that the person proposes to take to—

(i) remedy or avoid the contravention or likely contravention of the market services licensee obligation; or

(ii) avoid any further contravention of the market services licensee obligation; or

(iii) mitigate or avoid any adverse effects or changes arising, or likely to arise, from the material change of circumstances; or

(iv) correct the false or misleading information or mitigate the adverse consequences of providing the false or misleading information (or both); and

(b) the date by which each step will be taken.

418 Approval, amendment, or rejection of action plan

(1) If a person submits an action plan, the FMA may—

(a) approve the action plan; or

(b) require the person to amend the action plan and resubmit it to the FMA by a specified date for approval or rejection; or

(c) reject the action plan.

(2) If the FMA requires the person to amend an action plan provided to the FMA, the person must, within the time specified by the FMA, provide an amended action plan that addresses the matter required to be amended.

(3) If the FMA approves the action plan (whether as first provided or after amendment), the person must comply with the action plan.

(4) An action plan that has been approved by the FMA may be varied at any time by agreement between the person and the FMA.

419 Consequences of failure to submit action plan, rejection of action plan, or failure to comply with action plan

(1) The FMA may exercise a power under section 414(2)(a) or (c) or (3) if—

(a) a person fails to submit an action plan or amended action plan within the time and in the manner specified by the FMA; or

(b) the FMA rejects an action plan; or

(c) the FMA is satisfied that an action plan has not been complied with.

(2) A contravention of section 417 or 418 may also give rise to civil liability (see subpart 3 of Part 8).

Directions

420 Directions

(1) If a notice under section 414 gives a direction to a person, the notice must specify—

(a) the actions, as the case may be, that the person must take to—

(i) remedy or avoid the contravention or likely contravention of the market services licensee obligation; or

(ii) avoid any further contravention of the market services licensee obligation; or

(iv) correct the false or misleading information or mitigate the adverse consequences of providing the false or misleading information (or both); and

(b) the date by which each step must be taken.

(2) The person to whom the direction is given must comply with the direction.

421 Consequences of failure to comply with directions

(1) A person that refuses or fails, without reasonable excuse, to comply with a direction under section 414(2)(c) commits an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $300,000.

(2) If the FMA is satisfied that a direction under section 414(2)(c) has not been complied with, the FMA may (without limitation) exercise a power under section 414(2)(a) or (3).

(3) A contravention of section 420 may also give rise to civil liability (see subpart 3 of Part 8).

(b) to change any instruction in relation to the provision of that service by the licensee or authorised body.

426 Disclosure statement

Subpart 5A—Additional regulation of financial advice and financial advice services

Subpart 5A: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 29 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

Preliminary matters

Heading: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 29 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

431A Overview of financial advice and financial advice services regime

(1) This subpart and other parts of this Act regulate financial advice and financial advice services as follows:

(a) a person gives financial advice if the person makes a recommendation, gives an opinion, or provides financial planning of a kind described in section 431C(1). The advice is regulated financial advice if it is given in the ordinary course of a business and is not excluded under clauses 8 to 18 of Schedule 5 (see section 431C(3)):

(b) a person must not carry on a business of giving regulated financial advice unless the person is authorised by a market services licence or exempt from the licensing requirement (see sections 388(ba), 389(2), and 431D). A person may be authorised as a licensee or as an authorised body (see section 400):

(c) there are limitations on who can give regulated financial advice on behalf of a financial advice provider to a retail client (see section 431F). This section is a Part 6 services provision, contravention of which may give rise to civil liability (see section 449):

(d) conditions of the provider's licence may also limit the types of advice that may be given by financial advisers or nominated representatives (see sections 403(4)(a) and 546(1)(d)(iv)):

(e) people who give financial advice, financial advice providers, and any interposed persons are subject to the duties set out in sections 431I to 431R:

(f) section 431H sets out who is responsible if those duties are contravened and the nature of the person's liability. Sections 431I to 431R are also Part 6 services provisions under section 449.

(2) This section is a guide only to the general scheme and effect of this Act in relation to financial advice and financial advice services.

Section 431A: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 29 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

431B Additional purpose of subpart

(1) This subpart has the additional purpose (in addition to those set out in sections 3 and 4) of regulating the giving of financial advice and provision of financial advice services with a view to ensuring—

(a) the availability of financial advice for persons seeking that advice; and

(b) the quality of financial advice and financial advice services.

(2) This section does not limit section 3 or 4.

Section 431B: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 29 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

Interpretation

Heading: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 29 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

431C Meaning of financial advice and regulated financial advice

(1) A person gives financial advice if the person—

(a) makes a recommendation or gives an opinion about acquiring or disposing of (or not acquiring or disposing of) a financial advice product; or

(b) makes a recommendation or gives an opinion about switching funds within a managed investment scheme; or

(c) designs an investment plan for a person that—

(i) purports to be based on—

(A) an analysis of the person's current and future overall financial situation (including investment needs); and

(B) the identification of the person's investment goals; and

(ii) includes 1 or more recommendations or opinions on how to realise 1 or more of those goals; or

(d) provides financial planning of a kind prescribed by the regulations.

(2) However, a person does not give financial advice merely by doing 1 or more of the things set out in clause 7 of Schedule 5.

(3) Financial advice is regulated financial advice if—

(a) it is given in the ordinary course of a business; and

(b) it is not excluded under any of clauses 8 to 18 of Schedule 5.

(4) Subsections (1) and (3) are subject to a declaration under section 562(1)(gb).

Section 431C: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 29 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

431D When financial advice service is provided

(1) A person (P) provides a financial advice service if, in the ordinary course of P's business,—

(a) P engages 1 or more other persons to give regulated financial advice to P's clients on P's behalf; or

(b) P gives regulated financial advice to P's clients on P's own account.

(2) Subsection (1) is subject to a declaration under section 562(1)(gc).

Example

ABC Limited (ABC) is a firm that gives a range of investment advice to its clients. Some of this advice is given through its employees. Some of this advice is given through its Internet site. ABC provides a financial advice service (and must be licensed or be an authorised body under a licence (see section 388(ba))). ABC is also required to be registered under the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 (the FSP Act).

As part of ABC's business, Susan is employed by ABC to give financial advice to ABC's clients on its behalf. Although Susan is giving advice, she is not giving it on her own account, so she is not providing a financial advice service (and does not need to hold a licence).

Under the conditions of ABC's licence, the type of service that Susan gives may not be given by a nominated representative. The type of service can be given only by a financial adviser (that is, a person who is registered under the FSP Act in relation to a financial advice service). See section 22C of the FSP Act, which allows Susan to register even though, as an employee, she is not in the business of providing financial advice services.

If Susan were to leave ABC and set up business giving financial advice on her own account, she would be providing a financial advice service and would therefore be a financial advice provider (who must, therefore, hold a licence).

Section 431D: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 29 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

(a) A is engaged directly by P (for example, if A is an employee or a contractor of P); or

(b) A is engaged indirectly through 1 or more interposed persons (for example, if A is an employee of another person who is a contractor of P).

Section 431E: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 29 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

Section 431F: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 29 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

(i) the manager was not the manager of the scheme at the start of that accounting period of the scheme; and

(ii) the manager at the start of that accounting period of the scheme was a climate reporting entity in respect of the scheme.

(5) If the manager was a large manager in respect of an accounting period (AP3) but ceases to be a large manager in the next accounting period (AP4), the manager must be treated as a large manager in respect of the scheme in relation to the accounting period of the scheme that starts in AP3 and ends in AP4.

(a) as reported in the most recent audited financial statements, prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting practice, for the scheme; or

(b) if there are no such statements, as calculated—

(a) ceased to be a climate reporting entity under section 461O(1); and

(b) records required to be kept by A up to the date that A ceased to be a climate reporting entity under section 461O(1) are CRD records for the purposes of sections 461W to 461Y.

(4) In any case where a person is, or was, the manager of a registered scheme (and a climate reporting entity under section 461O(2) in respect of the scheme), subsection (1) does not limit—

Section 475(3): inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 37 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

476 FMA may shorten steps for specified orders

If the FMA thinks it necessary or desirable in the public interest for any order to be made more urgently than section 475 permits,—

(a) it may give less than 5 working days' notice before it makes the order, and the submissions may be oral rather than written; but

(b) it must include in that notice the reasons for acting urgently and must otherwise comply with that section.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 42G

477 FMA must give notice after making orders

(1) If the FMA makes an order under this Part, the FMA—

(a) must, as soon as is reasonably practicable, give written notice to the person to whom the order is directed of—

(i) the terms and conditions of the order; and

(ii) the reasons for the order; and

(iii) any other information the FMA thinks relevant in the circumstances; and

(b) must also give the written notice referred to in paragraph (a) to the Registrar and make the notice available on its Internet site, in the case of a stop order, an interim stop order, or an order under section 470; and

(c) in the case of an order other than a stop order or an interim stop order, may also give the written notice referred to in paragraph (a) to the Registrar and make the notice available on its Internet site; and

(d) must also give the written notice referred to in paragraph (a) to the relevant licensed market operator, in the case of a direction order for a contravention of a continuous disclosure obligation or exemption or an order under section 470 or 474; and

(e) may also give notice to any other person of those matters.

(2) In the case of a stop order of the kind referred to in section 463(c), the FMA does not have to give the notice referred to in subsection (1)(a) to any associated persons of the issuer, offeror, or service provider (but the issuer, offeror, or service provider may be required to do so).

481 When court may grant injunctions and interim injunctions

(1) The court may grant an injunction restraining a person from engaging in conduct of a particular kind if—

(b) it appears to the court that, if an injunction is not granted, it is likely that the person will engage in conduct of that kind.

(2) The court may grant an interim injunction restraining a person from engaging in conduct of a particular kind if in its opinion it is desirable to do so.

(3) Subsections (1)(a) and (2) apply whether or not it appears to the court that the person intends to engage again, or to continue to engage, in conduct of that kind.

Declarations of contravention and pecuniary penalty orders

486 When court may make declarations of contravention

(1) The court may, on the application of the FMA or any other person, make a declaration of contravention if it is satisfied that a person has—

(a) contravened a civil liability provision; or

(b) been involved in a contravention of a civil liability provision.

(2) The court may also make a declaration of contravention under section 489(2)(b).

487 Purpose and effect of declarations of contravention

(1) The purpose of a declaration of contravention is to enable an applicant for a compensatory order or other civil liability order under section 497 to rely on the declaration of contravention in the proceedings for that order, and not be required to prove the contravention or involvement in the contravention.

(2) Accordingly, a declaration of contravention is conclusive evidence of the matters that must be stated in it under section 488.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 42U

488 What declarations of contravention must state

A declaration of contravention must state the following:

(a) the civil liability provision to which the contravention or involvement in the contravention relates; and

(b) the person who engaged in the contravention or was involved in the contravention; and

(c) the conduct that constituted the contravention or the involvement in the contravention and, if a transaction constituted the contravention, the transaction; and

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 42V

489 When court may make pecuniary penalty orders

(1) The FMA may apply for a pecuniary penalty order against a person under this Act.

(2) If the FMA applies for a pecuniary penalty order against a person under this Act, the court—

(a) must determine whether the person has contravened, or been involved in a contravention of, a civil liability provision; and

(b) must make a declaration of contravention if it is satisfied that the person has contravened, or been involved in a contravention of, a civil liability provision; and

(c) may order the person to pay to the Crown a pecuniary penalty that the court considers appropriate if it is satisfied that the person has contravened, or been involved in a contravention of, a civil liability provision.

(3) However, a pecuniary penalty order may not be made—

(a) for a contravention, or involvement in a contravention, of section 19:

(b) in the circumstances referred to in section 431U, 461C, or 461ZF.

(4) The court may make a pecuniary penalty order against a director who is treated as contravening a civil liability provision under section 534 (but only if the FMA has applied for the order against the director).

Section 489(3)(b): amended, on 15 March 2021, by section 38 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

490 Maximum amount of pecuniary penalty

(1) The maximum amount of a pecuniary penalty for a contravention, or involvement in a contravention, of a civil liability provision referred to in subsection (2) is the greatest of—

(a) the consideration for the transaction that constituted the contravention (if any); and

(b) if it can be readily ascertained, 3 times the amount of the gain made, or the loss avoided, by the person who contravened the civil liability provision; and

(c) $1 million in the case of a contravention, or involvement in a contravention, by an individual or $5 million in any other case.

(2) The civil liability provisions to which subsection (1) applies are—

(a) a Part 2 fair dealing provision (other than a provision specified in section 38(3)):

(b) a Part 3 offer provision (other than a provision specified in section 101(4)):

(c) a Part 4 governance provision (other than a provision specified in section 228(4)):

(d) a Part 5 market provision (other than a provision specified in section 385(4)):

(e) a Part 6 services provision (other than a provision specified in section 449(4)):

(f) a Part 7 financial reporting provision (other than a provision specified in section 461M(4)):

(fa) a Part 7A climate-related disclosure provision (other than section 461X):

(g) an unsolicited offer provision:

(h) clause 21, 22(1)(b) or (c), or 25 of Schedule 4 (transitional requirements).

(3) The maximum amount of a pecuniary penalty for a contravention, or involvement in a contravention, of any other civil liability provision is—

(a) $200,000 in the case of a contravention, or involvement in a contravention, by an individual; or

(b) $600,000 in any other case.

Section 490(2)(fa): inserted, on 27 October 2022, by section 15 of the Financial Sector (Climate-related Disclosures and Other Matters) Amendment Act 2021 (2021 No 39).

491 Guidance for court on how to determine gains made or losses avoided for purposes of maximum amount

(1) For the purposes of section 490(1)(b), a person must be treated as—

(a) making a gain if the person acquires a financial product for less than its value:

(b) avoiding a loss if the person disposes of a financial product for more than its value.

(2) In this case, the gain made or loss avoided is the difference between the consideration paid or received (as the case may be) and the value the financial product would have had at the time of the issue or sale if,—

(a) in the case of a contravention of any of sections 241 to 243, the material information had been generally available to the market; or

(b) in the case of a contravention of section 262 or 265, the conduct, statement, or information had not been misleading, deceptive, or false; or

(c) in any other case, the contravention had not occurred.

(3) This section does not—

(a) limit the circumstances in which the court may find that a person has made a gain or avoided a loss; or

(b) prevent the court from finding that the amount of the gain made, or the loss avoided, by a person exceeds an amount calculated under this section.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 42X

492 Considerations for court in determining pecuniary penalty

In determining an appropriate pecuniary penalty, the court must have regard to all relevant matters, including—

(a) the purposes stated in sections 3 and 4 and any other purpose stated in this Act that applies to the civil liability provision; and

(b) the nature and extent of the contravention or involvement in the contravention; and

(c) the nature and extent of any loss or damage suffered by any person, or gains made or losses avoided by the person in contravention or who was involved in the contravention, because of the contravention or involvement in the contravention; and

(d) whether or not a person has paid an amount of compensation, reparation, or restitution, or taken other steps to avoid or mitigate any actual or potential adverse effects of the contravention; and

(e) the circumstances in which the contravention, or involvement in the contravention, took place; and

(f) whether or not the person in contravention, or who was involved in the contravention, has previously been found by the court in proceedings under this Act, or any other enactment, to have engaged in any similar conduct; and

(g) in the case of section 534 (directors treated as having contravened), the circumstances connected with the director's appointment (for example, whether the director is a non-executive or an independent director); and

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 42Y

493 Court must order that recovery from pecuniary penalty be applied to FMA's actual costs

If the court orders that a person pay a pecuniary penalty, the court must also order that the penalty must be applied first to pay the FMA's actual costs in bringing the proceedings.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 42Z

Compensatory orders

494 When court may make compensatory orders

(1) The court may make a compensatory order, on application by the FMA or any other person, if the court is satisfied that—

(a) there is a contravention of a civil liability provision; and

(b) a person (the aggrieved person) has suffered, or is likely to suffer, loss or damage because of the contravention.

(2) The court may make a compensatory order whether or not the aggrieved person is a party to the proceedings.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 42ZA

495 Terms of compensatory orders

(1) If section 494 applies, the court may make any order it thinks just to compensate an aggrieved person in whole or in part for the loss or damage, or to prevent or reduce the loss or damage, referred to in that section.

(2) An order under this section may include an order to direct a relevant person to pay to the aggrieved person the amount of the loss or damage (in whole or in part).

(3) Subsection (2) does not limit subsection (1).

(4) In this section, relevant person means—

(a) any person in contravention (including any director who is treated as contravening the civil liability provision under section 534); or

(b) any person involved in the contravention.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 42ZB

496 Person treated as suffering loss or damage in case of defective disclosure

(1) The purpose of this section is to provide that certain contraventions must be treated as causing a person to suffer loss or damage unless the contrary is proved.

(2) This section applies if—

(a) a person (A)—

(i) acquires financial products under an offer that contravenes section 82; or

(ii) acquires financial products, or makes further contributions, investments, or deposits in respect of financial products, after the issuer of the financial products contravenes section 99; or

(iii) acquires financial products under an offer where a person contravenes clause 27 of Schedule 1 in relation to that offer; and

(b) the financial products, contributions, investments, or deposits referred to in paragraph (a) have declined in value after the contravention referred to in paragraph (a).

(3) A must be treated as having suffered loss or damage because of the contravention unless it is proved that the decline in value was caused by a matter other than the relevant statement, omission, or circumstance.

(4) In this section, the relevant statement, omission, or circumstance is, as the case may be,—

(a) the statement that is false or misleading or is likely to be misleading referred to in section 82(1)(a)(i) or 99(1)(a)(i) or clause 27(1)(a)(i) of Schedule 1; or

(b) the omission referred to in section 82(1)(a)(ii) or 99(1)(a)(ii) or clause 27(1)(a)(ii) of Schedule 1; or

(c) the circumstance referred to in section 82(1)(a)(iii).

(5) This section does not limit section 495 (which provides for the court to make any order it thinks just to compensate an aggrieved person for the loss or damage in whole or in part).

Other civil liability orders

497 When court may make other civil liability orders

The court may, on application by the FMA or any other person, make a civil liability order described in section 498 if the court is satisfied that a person has contravened, intends to contravene, or was involved in a contravention of a civil liability provision.

Compare: 1988 No 234 s 42ZE

498 Terms of other civil liability orders

A civil liability order under section 497 may—

(a) direct the person in contravention, or the person involved in the contravention, to refund money or return property to a person who has suffered, or is likely to suffer, loss or damage because of the contravention (the aggrieved person):

(b) if an agreement has been entered into between the person in contravention, a person involved in the contravention, or an associated person of either of those persons (A), and the aggrieved person,—

(i) vary the agreement or any collateral arrangement as specified in the order and, if the court thinks fit, declare the agreement or arrangement to have had effect as so varied on and after a date before the order was made, as specified in the order:

(ii) cancel the agreement and, if the court thinks fit, declare the cancellation to have had effect on and after a date before the order was made, as specified in the order:

(iii) require A to take any action the court thinks fit to reinstate the parties as near as may be possible to their former positions:

(c) restrain the exercise of rights attaching to financial products, or the exercise of relevant interests, or declare an exercise of those rights or relevant interests to be void and of no effect:

(d) restrain the issue or transfer of financial products or restrain any distribution due in relation to financial products:

(e) restrain the acquisition or disposal of financial products or of relevant interests, or restrain the registration of any transfer of that kind:

(f) direct the disposal of financial products or of relevant interests (including the person or class of persons to which the products or interests must, or must not, be disposed of) and direct the payment of the proceeds of any disposal:

(g) require financial products to be forfeited and require the issuer to cancel the forfeited financial products:

(h) cancel an agreement for the acquisition or disposal of financial products or relevant interests.

(3) Nothing in subpart 6 or 7 limits subsection (1).

(3A) The FMA may, on the terms and conditions (if any) that it thinks fit, exempt any trust or class of trusts (or any person or class of persons in respect of a trust or class of trusts) from any provision or provisions of the Trusts Act 2019 if—

(b) the extent of the exemption is not broader than is reasonably necessary to address the matters that gave rise to the exemption.

(2) An offer of financial products that would, but for this subsection, be a regulated offer is not a regulated offer if the terms of an exemption granted under this subpart state that the offer is not a regulated offer.

(3) A statement under subsection (2) may be in respect of an offer or a class of offers.

561A Financial reporting and climate-related disclosure exemptions

(1) An exemption granted under this subpart in relation to any provision of Part 7 may, if the FMA thinks fit, apply to an accounting period that commenced before the exemption is granted (including an accounting period that ended before the exemption is granted) if the exemption is granted before the financial statements or group financial statements for that period are required to be lodged under that Part.

(1A) An exemption granted under this subpart in relation to any provision of Part 7A may, if the FMA thinks fit, apply to an accounting period that commenced before the exemption is granted (including an accounting period that ended before the exemption is granted) if the exemption is granted before the climate statements or group climate statements for that period are required to be lodged under that Part.

Subpart 3—FMA's designation power

562 FMA's designation power

(1) The FMA may—

(a) declare that a security that would not otherwise be a financial product is a financial product of a particular kind:

(b) declare that a financial product is, or is to become, a financial product of a particular kind (whether or not it was previously a financial product of a different kind):

Example

A share is normally an equity security.

However, a particular type of share may have terms that mean that, in substance, the share is similar to a debt security.

The FMA may declare that a share of that kind is a debt security.

(c) declare that a security that would otherwise be a financial product of a particular kind is not a financial product:

(d) declare that an offer of financial products that would not otherwise require disclosure under Part 3 because of an exclusion under Part 1 of Schedule 1 does require disclosure under Part 3:

Example

A small offer is generally excluded from requiring disclosure (see clause 12 of Schedule 1).

However, an offer of a particular kind may involve significant risks for investors that may otherwise be undisclosed to investors.

The FMA may declare that disclosure under Part 3 is required despite the exclusion (and, accordingly, the offer is a regulated offer).

(e) declare that an offer of financial products for sale that would not otherwise require disclosure under Part 3 does require disclosure under Part 3 (see section 563(1)(c)):

Example

Offers of financial products for sale generally require disclosure only in limited circumstances (see Part 2 of Schedule 1).

However, an issuer could structure an offer with a view to circumventing, evading, or defeating the disclosure provisions of this Act.

The FMA may declare that disclosure of the offer under Part 3 is required despite the fact that the provisions in Part 2 of Schedule 1 do not apply.

(f) declare, in relation to a managed investment product or if a declaration is made under paragraph (a) or (b) declaring that a security or financial product is a managed investment product, that a scheme is, or is to become, a managed investment scheme in relation to that managed investment product:

(g) if a declaration is made under paragraph (a), (b), or (f), declare that a person or class of person is, or is to become, the issuer or offeror of the relevant financial products:

(ga) declare that a person or class of person that would otherwise be a wholesale investor or a wholesale client is, or is to become, a retail investor or a retail client:

(gb) declare that advice—

(i) that would not otherwise be financial advice is financial advice; or

(ii) that would otherwise be financial advice is not financial advice; or

(iii) that would not otherwise be regulated financial advice is regulated financial advice; or

(iv) that would otherwise be regulated financial advice is not regulated financial advice:

(gc) declare that a service—

(i) that would not otherwise be a financial advice service is a financial advice service; or

(ii) that would otherwise be a financial advice service is not a financial advice service:

(h) declare a person, service, or conduct to be not exempt under any exemption that would otherwise apply under any of the following provisions (and accordingly the licensing requirement under this Act applies):

(i) section 389(2):

(ii) section 389(3):

(i) declare a person, service, or conduct to be not exempt under any exemption or exclusion that would otherwise apply under section 238(1)(a) to (h) (in relation to either subpart 5 or 6 of Part 5), or under section 285, 287, or 309.

(2) A declaration may specify terms and conditions relating to—

(a) the circumstances in which the declaration applies, including (without limitation) by reference to any person or class of persons or any transaction or class of transactions:

(b) transitional matters.

(3) Nothing in this section prevents the FMA from granting an exemption under subpart 2 that applies to an offer, a financial product, or any other matter that is the subject of a declaration under this section.

Example

The FMA declares that a particular type of share (which would otherwise be an equity security) is a debt security.

However, some of the regulatory requirements that relate to debt securities are inappropriate in respect of these shares.

Accordingly, the FMA grants an exemption (on terms and conditions) from those requirements in order to customise the regulatory requirements that will apply.

(4) The provisions of this Act apply subject to a declaration under this subpart.

(5) Subpart 5 (general provisions relating to certain FMA instruments) applies to a declaration under this section.

563 Procedural requirements

(1) The FMA must not make a declaration under this subpart unless—

(a) it is satisfied that the declaration is necessary or desirable in order to promote either or both of the main purposes of this Act specified in section 3 or any of the additional purposes specified in section 4; and

(b) in the case of section 562(1)(a) to (d), it has had regard to the economic substance of the relevant security; and

2 Transitional provisions subject to transitional regulations and exemptions

This schedule is subject to—

(a) any regulations made under section 547:

(b) any exemption granted under subpart 2 of Part 9 of this Act.

3 Interpretation

In this schedule, this Act means the Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013 and includes the Financial Markets (Repeals and Amendments) Act 2013.

Part 1
Transitional provisions on enactment of this Act for offers of financial products

4 Act applies to offer unless former enactments continue to apply

(1) This Act applies to an offer of financial products unless the former enactments apply in accordance with this Part.

(2) In this Part,—

1978 Act means the Securities Act 1978

12-month date means the date that is 12 months after the commencement of this clause

2-year date means the date that is 2 years after the commencement of this clause continuous issue securities means debt securities or managed investment products that are of a kind that were, before the commencement of this clause, continuously offered by a continuous issuer to the public for subscription continuous issuer means an issuer that in the ordinary course of its business before the commencement of this clause continuously offered debt securities or managed investment products to the public for subscription former enactments means each of the following:

(a) the 1978 Act (as in force immediately before the commencement of this clause):

(b) the Securities Regulations 2009 and any other regulations made under the 1978 Act (as in force immediately before the commencement of this clause):

(c) exemptions granted under the 1978 Act (to the extent that those exemptions apply to the relevant offer of securities)—

(i) as in force immediately before the commencement of this clause (but subject to any variation or revocation under clause 11); or

(ii) as in force after being granted by the FMA under clause 11.

(3) In this Part, issuer, prospectus, registered prospectus, and securities have the same meanings as in the 1978 Act.

(4) In this Part, a reference to an offer of securities to the public has the same meaning as in section 3 of the 1978 Act.

5 Former enactments continue to apply if prospectus registered before commencement

If securities are offered in a prospectus that is registered under the 1978 Act before the commencement of this clause, the former enactments continue to apply to the offer and allotment of those securities under that prospectus as if this Act had not been enacted.

6 Issuer may elect to comply with former enactments instead of this Act if prospectus registered within 12 months or 2 years of commencement

(1) Despite the repeal of the 1978 Act, an issuer of securities may register a prospectus in respect of the securities in accordance with the former enactments on or before—

(a) the 2-year date in the case of continuous issue securities; or

(b) the 12-month date in any other case.

(2) If securities are offered in a prospectus that is registered under subclause (1) and the issuer makes an election under subclause (3), the former enactments apply, as if this Act had not been enacted, to the offer and allotment of those securities under that prospectus.

(3) For the purposes of subclause (2), an issuer may elect for the former enactments to apply to an offer of securities by including a statement in the prospectus to the effect that the Securities Act 1978 applies to the offer.

(4) The statement referred to in subclause (3) may include additional information about an applicable exemption granted under the 1978 Act that is necessary to ensure that the statement is not misleading.

7 Former enactments apply if no prospectus required unless issuer elects otherwise

(1) If, under the 1978 Act or an exemption granted under that Act, no registered prospectus is required for an offer of securities to the public in New Zealand, the former enactments apply, as if this Act had not been enacted, to any offer and allotment of those securities that is made before the close of the 2-year date unless the issuer makes an election, under subclause (3), for this Act to apply.

(2) However,—

(a) subclause (1) does not permit an offer to be made in reliance upon section 5(2CB) or (2CBA) of the 1978 Act:

(b) subclause (1) does not apply in the prescribed circumstances.

(3) For the purposes of subclause (1), an issuer may elect for this Act to apply to an offer of securities made after a particular date by—

(a) giving to the FMA, before that date, a notice to the effect that this Act applies to the offer of the securities made after that date; and

(b) including a copy of that notice on an Internet site maintained by, or on behalf of, the issuer at all reasonable times during the period between that date and the earlier of the close of the offer or the close of the 2-year date.

8 This Act and 1978 Act are (on transitional basis) alternative means of compliance

If, in accordance with this Part,—

(a) this Act applies to an offer of securities, the former enactments do not apply to the offer:

(b) the former enactments apply to an offer of securities, this Act does not apply to the offer.

9 All offers and allotments under old law must cease after scheme registered

Despite clauses 4 to 8, no offer or allotment of managed investment products may be made under the former enactments after the date on which the managed investment scheme to which the products relate becomes a registered scheme (or is treated as being a registered scheme under Part 2 of this schedule).

10 All offers and allotments under old law must cease within 2 years of commencement

Despite clauses 4 to 8, no offer or allotment of securities may be made under the former enactments after the 2-year date (and this Act applies to all offers and acquisitions of financial products made after that date).

10A Banks' regulatory capital

(1) This clause applies in respect of convertible securities offered and allotted before the close of the 2-year date (unless the issuer makes an election as referred to in clause 7(3)).

(2) Despite clauses 7 and 10,—

(a) the former enactments apply, as if this Act had not been enacted, to any offer and allotment of the convertible securities and the specified equity securities to which the convertible securities relate; and

(b) an allotment of those specified equity securities may be made before, on, or after the 2-year date; and

(c) in the case of a specified equity security that is allotted after the 2-year date, clause 20 applies to the security on and after its allotment.

(3) In this clause, convertible security and specified equity security have the same meanings as in the Securities Act (Banks' Regulatory Capital) Exemption Notice 2014 (as in force before its revocation).

(4) In this clause, former enactments—

(a) has the same meaning as in clause 4(2); and

(b) includes the Securities Act (Banks' Regulatory Capital) Exemption Notice 2014 and the Securities Act (Heartland Bank Regulatory Capital) Exemption Notice (No 3) 2016 as in force on 30 November 2016 (as if those notices continued in force after their revocation).

Schedule 4 clause 10A: inserted, on 9 August 2017, by section 97(2) of the Regulatory Systems (Commercial Matters) Amendment Act 2017 (2017 No 12).

11 FMA may continue to perform and exercise functions, duties, and powers

If the former enactments continue to apply to an offer of securities, the FMA may continue to perform and exercise all of its functions, duties, and powers conferred or imposed on it by or under the former enactments as if this Act had not been enacted (for example, it may grant, vary, or revoke an exemption under section 70B of the 1978 Act).

12 Part does not prevent PDS from being lodged

Nothing in this Part prevents an issuer from lodging a PDS in preparation for making an offer of financial products under Part 3 of this Act.

13 Part 2 applies even if former enactments apply to offer

(1) Despite clause 8, Part 2 of this Act (and any other provision of this Act relating to the enforcement, application, or effect of that Part) applies to an offer of securities to which the former enactments apply.

(2) However, conduct that contravenes, or leads to liability under, sections 55A to 57 (in respect of an untrue statement) or 58 of the 1978 Act does not contravene sections 19 to 23 of this Act.

(3) For the purpose of this section, conduct must be treated as contravening, or leading to liability under, sections 55A to 57 or 58 of the 1978 Act even if the conduct does not constitute an offence, or does not lead to any liability, because of the availability of a defence.

Compare: Australian Securities and Investments Commission Act 2001 ss 12DA(1A), 12DB(2) (Aust)

14 Unsubstantiated representations prohibitions do not apply to prospectuses and investment statements

(1) Section 23 and the provision of the Fair Trading Act 1986 that corresponds to section 23 do not apply to a representation made in a registered prospectus or an investment statement (within the meaning of the 1978 Act).

(2) Subclause (1) applies despite clause 13(1).

Part 2
Transitional provisions on enactment of this Act relating to securities allotted under Securities Act 1978

15 Part applies to securities allotted under Securities Act 1978

(1) This Part applies to an allotted security offered pursuant to an offer for which, or for which but for an exemption granted by the FMA or the Securities Commission under the 1978 Act, an investment statement or a registered prospectus, or both, is or was required under that Act.

(2) However, this Part does not apply to a security if, before the commencement of this clause, the security was cancelled, redeemed, or forfeited, or all of the obligations owing under the security had been discharged.

(3) A security referred to in subclause (1) includes a security allotted under an offer to which the 1978 Act applies under Part 1 of this schedule.

16 Interpretation in this Part

(1) In this Part,—

1978 Act means the Securities Act 1978

effective date, in relation to a particular security, means the earlier of the dates set out in clause 19(1)

former enactments—

(a) means the 1978 Act, the Securities Regulations 2009, exemptions granted under the 1978 Act, and any other enactments made under the 1978 Act; and

(b) includes,—

(i) in relation to an interest in a KiwiSaver scheme, the KiwiSaver Act 2006:

(ii) in relation to an interest in a superannuation scheme (other than a KiwiSaver scheme), the Superannuation Schemes Act 1989:

(iii) in relation to a unit in a unit trust, the Unit Trusts Act 1960:

(iv) the Securities Trustees and Statutory Supervisors Act 2011

issuer, in relation to a security, means,—

(a) before the effective date, the issuer within the meaning of the 1978 Act:

(b) on and after the effective date, the issuer within the meaning of section 11

KiwiSaver schemes register means the KiwiSaver schemes register established under the KiwiSaver Act 2006 transition period has the meaning set out in clause 19(1).

(2) In this Part, investment statement, registered prospectus, and securities have the same meanings as in the 1978 Act (as in force immediately before the commencement of this clause).

(3) In this clause and clause 18, KiwiSaver scheme, scheme, superannuation scheme, unit, and unit trust have the same meanings as in section 2(1) of the 1978 Act (as in force immediately before the commencement of this clause).

Until effective date

17 Former enactments continue to apply until effective date in accordance with regulations

(1) If a former enactment would apply (but for its repeal, revocation, or amendment by this Act) to a security to which this Part applies (or to any scheme to which the security relates), that enactment continues to apply during the transition period in accordance with regulations made under section 547 (if any).

(2) See section 547, under which regulations may provide for former enactments to continue to apply (or to apply with modifications or additions), or for provisions of this Act or the Financial Markets (Repeals and Amendments) Act 2013 to apply with modifications or additions, as set out in the regulations.

(3) Despite subclauses (1) and (2), the provisions of the KiwiSaver Act 2006 amended by sections 101, 105, and 107 of the Financial Markets (Repeals and Amendments) Act 2013 apply as amended to an interest in a KiwiSaver scheme to which this Part applies and to that KiwiSaver scheme.

18 KiwiSaver schemes, superannuation schemes, and unit trusts continue under former enactments until effective date

(1) If a security to which this Part applies is—

(a) an interest in a KiwiSaver scheme, the KiwiSaver scheme continues to be registered in the KiwiSaver schemes register during the transition period as if this Act had not been enacted:

(b) an interest in a superannuation scheme (other than a KiwiSaver scheme), the superannuation scheme continues to be registered under the Superannuation Schemes Act 1989 during the transition period as if this Act had not been enacted:

(c) a unit in a unit trust, the unit trust continues to be subject to the Unit Trusts Act 1960 during the transition period as if this Act had not been enacted.

(2) This clause does not limit clause 17.

19 Transition period

(1) In this Part, the transition period for a particular security is the period beginning on the date on which this clause comes into force and ending on the close of the day before the earlier of the following dates:

(a) the date that the issuer of the security elects; or

(b) the date that is 2 years after the commencement of this clause.

(2) If the issuer elects an effective date that is earlier than 2 years after the commencement of this clause, the issuer must notify the FMA and the Registrar of the elected date at least 20 working days before that date.

Transitional provisions on and after effective date

20 Ongoing requirements of this Act apply on and after effective date

(1) On and after the effective date for a particular security to which this Part applies, the following apply to the security (and, in the case of a managed investment product, to the managed investment scheme to which it relates):

(a) subpart 4 of Part 3 of this Act (ongoing disclosure) other than section 95:

(b) Part 4 of this Act (governance of financial products):

(c) Part 7 of this Act (financial reporting):

(d) any regulations made for the purposes of subpart 4 of Part 3, Part 4, or Part 7 of this Act:

(e) any other provision of this Act relating to the enforcement, application, or effect of subpart 4 of Part 3, Part 4, or Part 7 of this Act.

(2) The provisions referred to in subclause (1) apply with all necessary modifications as if the security had been offered and allotted under a regulated offer under this Act.

(2A) For the purposes of subclause (1), the security must, on and after the effective date, be treated as being a regulated product under section 451(1)(a) and,

accordingly, the issuer must be treated as being an FMC reporting entity (unless section 452 applies).

(2B) See section 56 of the Financial Reporting Act 2013 (which provides for the former law to generally continue to apply to accounting periods that commence before the commencement of that Act).

(3) However, subclause (1) and clauses 21, 22, and 30 (obligations relating to registration of a scheme under this Act) do not apply to a security if,—

(a) before the effective date, the security is cancelled, redeemed, or forfeited, or all of the obligations owing under the security have been discharged; or

(b) on the effective date, the security is not a financial product within the meaning of section 7 (but see clause 33); or

(c) under the 1978 Act, the security was a debt security but, as a result of section 5(2C) or (3) of that Act, section 33(2) of that Act did not apply to the security; or

(d) under the 1978 Act, the security was a participatory security but, as a result of section 5(3) of that Act, section 33(3) of that Act did not apply to the security.

21 Issuer of debt security must lodge trust deed and supply information

(1) If a security to which this Part applies is a debt security (within the meaning of section 8), the issuer must—

(a) ensure that a copy of the trust deed that complies with sections 104 to 106 is lodged with the Registrar before the effective date; and

(b) supply to the Registrar and the FMA, before the effective date,—

(i) the names and addresses of the persons who, on the effective date, will be the issuer and the licensed supervisor; and

(ii) all other prescribed information relating to the debt security.

(2) See subpart 3 of Part 8 of this Act, which provides for civil liability for a contravention of subclause (1).

22 Managed investment scheme treated as being registered and issuer must supply information

(1) If a security to which this Part applies is a managed investment product,—

(a) the managed investment scheme to which the product relates (the scheme) must, on and after the effective date, be treated as being a registered scheme; and

(b) the issuer must ensure that a copy of the governing document for the scheme that complies with sections 135 to 137 is lodged with the Registrar before the effective date; and

(c) the issuer must supply to the Registrar and the FMA, before the effective date,—

(i) the name and address of the person who, on the effective date, will be the manager; and

(ii) the name and address of the person who, on the effective date, will be the licensed supervisor (unless the scheme is a restricted scheme); and

(iii) all other prescribed information relating to the managed investment product and the scheme.

(2) See subpart 3 of Part 8 of this Act, which provides for civil liability for a contravention of subclause (1)(b) or (c).

(3) Nothing in this clause or clause 23 prevents the FMA from—

(a) directing that the registration of a scheme to which this clause applies be cancelled under section 195; or

(b) exercising any other power in respect of such a scheme.

23 Type of registration

(1) A managed investment scheme that is treated as being registered under clause 22 must be treated as being registered on the register of managed investment schemes as the 1 or more of the following types of scheme that apply to it:

(a) a KiwiSaver scheme if, immediately before the effective date, the scheme was registered as a KiwiSaver scheme in the KiwiSaver schemes register:

(b) a KiwiSaver scheme that is a restricted scheme if paragraph (a) applies and, immediately before the effective date, the scheme was identified as a restricted scheme on the KiwiSaver schemes register:

(h) a restricted scheme that is an employer-related scheme if paragraph (b), (d), or (g) applies and an Order in Council under subclause (2) has designated the scheme as an employer-related scheme:

(i) a complying superannuation fund if paragraph (c) applies and, immediately before the effective date, the scheme was approved as a complying superannuation fund under section 35 of the Superannuation Schemes Act 1989.

(2) The Governor-General may, by Order in Council, on the advice of the Minister given in accordance with a recommendation of the FMA,—

(a) designate a scheme as a restricted scheme for the purposes of subclause (1)(d) or (g):

(b) designate a scheme as a legacy scheme for the purposes of subclause (1)(e):

(c) designate a scheme as a workplace savings scheme for the purposes of subclause (1)(f):

(d) designate any scheme that will be a restricted scheme under this section as being an employer-related scheme for the purposes of section 172.

(3) A scheme may be designated under subclause (2)(b) or (c) as a type of scheme in respect of a section of the scheme only and, in that case, subclause (1) treats the scheme as being on the register of managed investment schemes as that type in respect of that section of the scheme.

(4) Section 131(1)(c) (which prevents certain changes without the FMA's consent to the conditions of entry of scheme participants) applies to a restricted scheme on and after the date on which a designation by Order in Council comes into force under subclause (2) in all cases as if that date of designation were the date of the scheme's registration under this Part.

(5) An order under this clause is secondary legislation (see Part 3 of the Legislation Act 2019 for publication requirements).

24 Registrar to amend register

(1) The Registrar must, on or as soon as practicable after the effective date for a managed investment scheme to which clause 22(1)(a) applies, amend the register of managed investment schemes to include an entry relating to the scheme.

(2) The Registrar is not required to act under subclause (1) before clause 22(1)(b) and (c) have been complied with.

25 Restriction on making regulated offers and accepting contributions if requirements have not been complied with

(1) This clause applies if an issuer contravenes clause 22(1)(b) or (c) in respect of a managed investment scheme that is treated as being a registered scheme under clause 22(1)(a).

(2) The issuer must not, on and after the effective date, make a regulated offer of a managed investment product, or accept further contributions, in respect of that managed investment scheme.

(3) Subclause (2) ceases to apply if—

(a) the issuer lodges with the Registrar a copy of the governing document for the scheme that complies with sections 135 to 137; and

(b) the issuer supplies to the Registrar and the FMA the prescribed information; and

(c) the register of managed investment schemes includes an entry relating to the scheme.

(4) See subpart 3 of Part 8 of this Act, which provides for civil liability for a contravention of this clause.

26 Issuer may amend or replace governing document with FMA's consent

(1) This clause applies—

(a) to a governing document that, immediately before the commencement of this clause, relates to a debt security or constitutes or governs a scheme; and

(b) despite anything to the contrary in the governing document or in any enactment, rule of law, or agreement, including anything relating to the consent of any person to the making of amendments to the governing document.

(2) The issuer of the debt security or the manager of the scheme (as the case may be) may amend or replace the governing document with the FMA's consent if the FMA is satisfied that—

(a) the amendment or replacement is necessary or desirable to ensure, or in connection with ensuring, that the governing document complies with the requirements of this Act; or

(b) (for any amendments or differences in the replaced governing document to which paragraph (a) does not apply) the procedures of the existing governing document for amendments have been complied with.

(3) An amendment or a replacement made under this clause must be treated for all purposes as if it were made in accordance with the governing document.

(4) On the amendment or replacement under this clause of a governing document that constitutes or governs a scheme,—

(a) the scheme must be treated as the same scheme as it was immediately before the amendment or replacement of the existing governing document; and

(b) the persons who were members of the scheme immediately before the amendment or replacement of the existing governing document continue to be members of the same scheme; and

(c) the assets or liabilities of a scheme or fund must be treated as if they vested in the scheme or fund immediately after the amendment or replacement of the existing governing document, but for the purposes of the Inland Revenue Acts this must be treated as if it is not a transfer (as defined in section YA 1 of the Income Tax Act 2007).

(5) In this clause and clauses 27 and 28, scheme has the same meaning as in section 2(1) of the 1978 Act (as in force immediately before the commencement of this clause).

(6) To avoid doubt, this clause does not limit the ways in which a governing document may be amended or replaced in accordance with its terms or any enactment or rule of law.

(7) The FMA's discretion to set preconditions for requests to it includes (without limitation) a discretion to set preconditions that satisfy the FMA that it is appropriate for the amendment or replacement to be done under this section rather than by means of another power or process.

(2) See section 547, under which regulations may provide for an enactment that is amended by this Act to continue to apply (or to apply with modifications or additions), or for provisions of this Act or the Financial Markets (Repeals and Amendments) Act 2013 to apply with modifications or additions, as set out in the regulations.

(3) Subclause (1) must be treated as applying to a security offered under the 1978 Act in accordance with Part 1 of this schedule.

30 Issuer must send notification to security holders

(b) the names and addresses of the issuer, the supervisor (if any), and the custodian (if any):

(c) in the case of a debt security or managed investment product,—

(i) a statement to the effect that the holder may obtain a copy of the governing document by electronic means; and

(ii) a statement to the effect that the holder has a right to receive from the issuer, free of charge, a copy of the governing document if the holder, within 15 working days of receiving the notice, makes a request to the issuer to receive a copy of the governing document:

(d) if a PDS has been lodged for an offer of financial products of the same class as the security, a statement to the effect that the holder may obtain a copy of the PDS by electronic means:

(f) if the notice contains a statement to the effect that the holder may obtain a copy of a document by electronic means, a statement as to how the holder may obtain a copy of the document by electronic means (for example, from a specified Internet site address):

(g) any other prescribed information.

(2) This section does not apply to a security referred to in clause 20(3).

(3) If a security holder, within 15 working days of receiving the notice, makes a request to the issuer to receive a copy of the governing document, the issuer must, as soon as practicable, send to the holder, free of charge, a copy of that document.

(4) A person who contravenes this clause commits an offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding $50,000.

(5) The offence in this clause is an infringement offence (see subpart 5 of Part 8 of this Act).

(6) In this clause and clause 31, security holder means,—

(a) in the case of a security to which section 215(1) does not apply, the holder of that security on the date that the notice is sent under subclause (1); or

(b) in the case of any other security, the person who is registered as the holder of the security in a register kept under subpart 4 of Part 4 of this Act on the date that the notice is sent under subclause (1).

31 PDS treated as having been given

(1) This clause applies if—

(a) a notice is sent to a security holder under clause 30 before the effective date; and

(b) a PDS has, before the effective date, been lodged for an offer of financial products of the same class as the security held by the security holder; and

(c) a statement is included in the notice referred to in paragraph (a) as required by clause 30(1)(d); and

(b) ceases to apply to a security (and the scheme to which it relates) if the participatory security holders in the scheme opt out of this clause by way of a resolution approved by those holders holding no less than 75% of the value of the participatory securities.

(3) The following enactments continue to apply on and after the effective date (as if this Act had not been enacted) to a security to which this clause applies, the scheme to which the security relates, and the statutory supervisor of the security:

(2) This clause applies despite clause 8(4) of Schedule 1 of the Regulations, but nothing in this clause affects the duration of the licence under section 12 of the Financial Markets Supervisors Act 2011 or prevents the FMA from exercising any power in relation to the licence.

68 Extension of licences to cover substantially the same matters under new law

(1) If, immediately before the revocation of clause 9 of Schedule 1 of the Regulations, that clause applies to a licence, the following apply on and after that revocation:

(a) if, immediately before that revocation, the licence is subject to a variation under clause 9(3) of that schedule, the licence continues to be subject to the variation; and

(b) if the licence continues to be subject to conditions, limitations, or restrictions under clause 9(4) of that schedule, the licence must be treated as continuing to be subject to the conditions, limitations, or restrictions.

(2) This clause applies despite clause 9(7) of Schedule 1 of the Regulations, but nothing in this clause prevents the FMA from exercising any power in relation to the licence.

69 Governance requirements for PIE call fund units, PIE term fund units, and bank notice products that are specified units

(1) This clause applies to a security if, immediately before the commencement of this clause, clause 19 of Schedule 1 of the Regulations applies to the security.

(2) Clauses 20(1), 21, 22, and 30 of this schedule do not apply to the security if clause 28 of Schedule 8 of the Regulations applies in respect of the managed investment scheme to which the security relates.

70 Certain superannuation schemes that elect to be treated as registered

If, immediately before the revocation of clause 30A of Schedule 1 of the Regulations, that clause applies to a scheme and to the interests in the scheme, that clause continues to apply to the scheme and the interests on and after that revocation.

Part 6
Transitional provisions relating to Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019

Schedule 4 Part 6: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

Subpart 1—Transitional licences

Schedule 4 Part 6 subpart 1: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

71 FMA may issue transitional licence

(1) The FMA may issue a transitional licence that covers the service of acting as a provider of a financial advice service.

(2) A transitional licence must be treated as being a licence issued under subpart 2 of Part 6 of this Act (subject to the provisions of this subpart).

(3) Section 395(1), (1A), and (3) (application for licence) applies to a transitional licence.

(4) However,—

(a) an application for a transitional licence must be made before the commencement of section 16 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (which amends section 388 to make acting as a provider of a financial advice service a market service for which a licence is required); and

(b) a transitional licence may not cover a type of market service other than a financial advice service.

(5) Subclause (4)(a) does not limit section 395(1A) (which allows the FMA to specify time frames within which applications must be made).

(6) This clause does not prevent a licensee from holding both a transitional licence and 1 or more other licences that cover the service referred to in subclause (1) (but see clause 72(2)).

Schedule 4 clause 71: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

72 Duration and coverage of transitional licence

(1) A transitional licence continues in force until the close of the date that is 2 years after the commencement of section 16 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 unless it is sooner cancelled.

(2) However, a transitional licence no longer covers a type of regulated financial advice if—

(a) another licence is issued to the licensee under subpart 2 of Part 6 of this Act; and

(b) that other licence covers that type of regulated financial advice.

(3) Subclause (2)—

(a) applies regardless of what conditions are imposed on the other licence (for example, new limits or restrictions on the regulated financial advice that may be provided):

Schedule 4 clause 72: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

73 When transitional licence must be issued

The FMA must, after receiving an application for a transitional licence, issue the licence if the FMA is satisfied that—

(a) the eligibility criteria (if any) that are prescribed by the regulations for transitional licences are satisfied; and

(b) the applicant's directors and senior managers are fit and proper persons to hold their respective positions and otherwise satisfy the requirements that are prescribed by the regulations for transitional licences (if any); and

(c) there is no reason to believe that the applicant is likely to contravene the market services licensee obligations; and

(d) the applicant is, or will be, registered under the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 on and from commencing to provide the service.

Schedule 4 clause 73: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

74 Licence may cover authorised bodies

(1) A transitional licence may, in its conditions, authorise 1 or more named entities to provide the market service covered by the licence if the FMA is satisfied that—

(a) there is no reason to believe that the entity is likely to contravene the market services licensee obligations; and

(b) the entity is, or will be, registered under the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 on and from commencing to provide that service; and

(c) the entity meets the eligibility criteria and other requirements prescribed by the regulations for the purposes of this clause (if any).

(2) The entity must be treated as being an authorised body that is authorised under section 400(1A).

(3) This clause does not apply if the licensee is an individual.

Schedule 4 clause 74: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

75 Certain transitional licence holders may not engage nominated representatives

(1) A transitional licence is subject to a condition that the licensee or an authorised body may nominate an individual as a nominated representative of the licensee or body under section 431T only if, immediately before the commencement of this clause, the licensee or body (as the case may be) was any of the following:

(a) a qualifying financial entity (QFE) or a member of a QFE group under the Financial Advisers Act 2008:

(b) an entity that—

(i) is registered under the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008 in respect of a financial adviser service; and

(ii) engages 1 or more individuals, who are not registered under that Act, to provide on its behalf a class service (within the meaning of section 5 of the Financial Advisers Act 2008 as in force before its repeal).

(2) If the licensee or authorised body (as the case may be) is an entity referred to in subclause (1)(b) (and is not a person referred to in subclause (1)(a)), the transitional licence is also subject to a condition that a nominated representative must not provide, on behalf of the licensee or body, a personalised service (within the meaning of section 5 of the Financial Advisers Act 2008 as in force before its repeal).

Schedule 4 clause 75: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

76 Transitional licence may authorise entity to be engaged

(1) This clause applies if—

(a) a person (P) is a licensee or an authorised body under a transitional licence (P's licence); and

(b) another person (E) holds a transitional licence or is an authorised body under P's licence; and

(c) immediately before the commencement of this clause, P and E are parties to an agreement under which either or both of the following occurs:

(i) P engages E to give financial advice to P's retail clients on P's behalf:

(ii) P engages E, who engages 1 or more individuals to give financial advice to P's retail clients on P's behalf.

(2) P's licence is subject to a condition that authorises P and E to continue the conduct that is the subject of the agreement referred to in subclause (1)(c) (see section 431F(1)(b)).

(3) This clause is subject to any other conditions on P's licence (which may, for example, impose limits or restrictions on the type of advice that may be given).

Schedule 4 clause 76: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

77 Application of Part 6 of Act, etc

(1) Part 6 of this Act applies in relation to transitional licences with all necessary modifications including the following:

(a) references in sections 397 and 398 to a decision under section 396 must be treated as references to a decision under clause 73:

(b) sections 396, 397(1)(b) and (c), 399, 403(3)(c), and 407 do not apply:

(c) references to the requirements of section 396 or 400 in section 403(3)(b) or subpart 3 of Part 6 of this Act must be treated as references to the requirements of clause 73 or 74.

Example

Subpart 3 of Part 6 provides for certain consequences if the licensing requirements in section 396 are not, or are no longer, satisfied. These include a duty for the licence holder to report matters to the FMA (see section 412) and the FMA could suspend or cancel the licence (see section 414(3)).

ABC Limited satisfies the licensing requirements in clause 73 and is granted a transitional licence. However, a change occurs that means that ABC Limited no longer satisfies a requirement.

Under paragraph (c), the ordinary monitoring and enforcement consequences apply to the transitional licence as if the references to licensing requirements in section 396 were references to the licensing requirements in clause 73.

ABC Limited must, therefore, report the matter to the FMA and the FMA may exercise a power under subpart 3 of Part 6.

(2) However, a transitional licence must be disregarded for the purposes of section 397(1)(b) when the FMA is considering an application for another licence.

(3) Matters may be prescribed under section 546(1)(a) for the purposes of clauses 73(a) and (b) and 74(1)(c).

(4) A decision of the FMA under this subpart may be appealed under subpart 9 of Part 8 of this Act as if it were a decision under Part 6 of this Act.

Schedule 4 clause 77: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

78 FMA may refuse to consider application made before specified time, event, or circumstance

(1) This clause applies to an application for—

(a) a transitional licence; or

(b) a licence under subpart 2 of Part 6 of this Act that covers the service of acting as a provider of a financial advice service.

(2) The FMA may, under section 395(1A), refuse to consider the application if it is made—

(a) before a date specified by the FMA; or

(b) before an event specified by the FMA has occurred; or

(c) before circumstances specified by the FMA have been satisfied.

(3) This clause does not limit section 395(1A).

(4) This clause ceases to apply on the close of the date that is 2 years after the commencement of section 16 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019.

Schedule 4 clause 78: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

Subpart 2—Renewal of financial adviser authorisation and QFE status not required in transitional period

Schedule 4 Part 6 subpart 2: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

79 Renewal of financial adviser authorisation and QFE status not required in transitional period

(1) This clause applies to a person (A) if,—

(a) immediately before the commencement of this clause, A is an authorised financial adviser or has QFE status (within the meaning of the Financial Advisers Act 2008); but

(b) A's period of authorisation or period of a grant of QFE status would, but for this clause, terminate under section 57(1)(a) or 75A(1)(a) of that Act after that commencement.

(2) Despite sections 57(1)(a) and 75A(1)(a) of the Financial Advisers Act 2008, A's authorisation or QFE status must be treated as continuing until the commencement of section 97(1) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (which repeals the Financial Advisers Act 2008).

(3) However, subclause (2) ceases to apply if—

(a) A's authorisation or QFE status terminates under section 57(1)(b) to (d) or 75A(1)(b) to (d) of the Financial Advisers Act 2008; or

(b) an application for the renewal of A's authorisation or QFE status is made before the commencement of this clause but is declined by the FMA after that commencement.

Schedule 4 clause 79: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

Subpart 3—Preparation of code

Schedule 4 Part 6 subpart 3: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

80 Code may be prepared before commencement

(1) Any action taken by or on behalf of the body of persons appointed by the Minister and known as the code working group in preparing the code of conduct must be treated as having been validly taken by the code committee under, and for the purposes of, clauses 32 to 39 of Schedule 5.

(2) For the purposes of subclause (1), a reference in clauses 32 to 39 of Schedule 5 to the code committee includes a reference to the code working group.

(3) The Minister may exercise or perform a power or duty under Schedule 5 before that schedule comes into force.

(4) Subclauses (1) and (3) apply regardless of whether the action is taken before or after the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 is enacted.

(5) The Minister must ensure that the code comes into force no later than the date on which subpart 5A of Part 6 comes into force.

(6) If Schedule 5 requires the code or any other information to be published on an Internet site maintained by or on behalf of the code committee, the code or information may instead, before the commencement of that schedule, be published on an Internet site maintained by or on behalf of the department of State that is responsible for the administration of this Act.

Schedule 4 clause 80: inserted, on 9 April 2019, by section 59(5) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

Subpart 4—Miscellaneous transitional provisions

Schedule 4 Part 6 subpart 4: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 59(6) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

81 New competency requirements do not prevent certain persons from continuing to give certain advice

(1) This clause applies to a person (A) if,—

(a) immediately before the commencement of this clause, A is—

(i) an authorised financial adviser (within the meaning of the Financial Advisers Act 2008); or

(ii) an individual who is registered under the FSP Act in respect of a financial adviser service; or

(iii) a qualifying financial entity (within the meaning of the Financial Advisers Act 2008) or an entity that is registered under the FSP Act in respect of a financial adviser service; and

(b) in the case of—

(i) paragraph (a)(i) or (ii),—

(A) A is engaged by a financial advice provider (P) to give regulated financial advice as a financial adviser on P's behalf; or

(B) A holds a transitional licence, or a licence issued under subpart 2 of Part 6 of this Act, that covers the service of acting as a provider of a financial advice service; or

(ii) paragraph (a)(iii), A is a financial advice provider that is registered under the FSP Act in respect of a financial advice service.

(2) Section 431I (duty to meet standards of competence) does not prevent A from giving regulated financial advice about a particular matter or in particular circumstances if, immediately before the commencement of this clause, A would have been permitted to provide that advice under the Financial Advisers Act 2008.

(3) Accordingly, P is not required to ensure compliance with section 431I (and is not otherwise liable in relation to that section) to the extent that A is permitted to act under subclause (2).

(4) In the case of subclause (1)(b)(i)(A), subclause (2) applies only if the advice is given on P's behalf.

(5) This clause is subject to the conditions on A's licence or P's licence (which may, for example, impose limits or restrictions on the services that are covered by the licence).

(6) In this clause,—

financial adviser service has the same meaning as in the Financial Advisers Act 2008 (as in force before its repeal)

FSP Act means the Financial Service Providers (Registration and Dispute Resolution) Act 2008.

(7) This clause ceases to apply on the close of the date that is 2 years after the commencement of this clause.

Schedule 4 clause 81: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 59(6) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

82 Former QFE advisers not prevented from providing certain services

(1) This clause applies to an individual (A)—

(a) who, immediately before the commencement of this clause, is a QFE adviser (within the meaning of the Financial Advisers Act 2008); and

(b) who, after the commencement of this clause, has become a financial adviser; and

(c) who is engaged by a financial advice provider (P) to give regulated financial advice on P's behalf.

(2) Section 431I (duty to meet standards of competence) does not prevent A from providing, on behalf of P,—

(a) a personalised service in relation to P's category 1 products (but only if, immediately before the commencement of this clause, P was a QFE or member of a QFE group that engaged A); or

(b) a personalised service in relation to category 2 products; or

(c) a class service in relation to category 1 products or category 2 products.

(3) Accordingly, P is not required to ensure compliance with section 431I (and is not otherwise liable in relation to that section) to the extent that A is permitted to act under subclause (2).

(4) This clause is subject to the conditions on P's licence (which may, for example, impose limits or restrictions on the services that are covered by the licence).

(5) In this clause and clause 83, category 1 product, category 2 product, class service, personalised service, QFE, and QFE group have the same meanings as in section 5 of the Financial Advisers Act 2008 as in force before its repeal.

(6) This clause ceases to apply on the close of the date that is 2 years after the commencement of this clause.

Schedule 4 clause 82: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 59(6) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

83 Nominated representatives not prevented from providing certain services

(1) This clause applies to an individual (A)—

(a) who becomes a nominated representative in accordance with clause 75; and

(b) who is engaged by a financial advice provider (P) to give regulated financial advice on P's behalf.

(2) Section 431I (duty to meet standards of competence) does not prevent A from providing, on behalf of P,—

(a) a personalised service in relation to P's category 1 products; or

(b) a personalised service in relation to category 2 products; or

(c) a class service in relation to category 1 products or category 2 products.

(3) Accordingly, P is not required to ensure compliance with section 431I (and is not otherwise liable in relation to that section) to the extent that A is permitted to act under subclause (2).

(4) However, this clause is subject to clause 75(2) (which imposes a condition restricting the advice that certain nominated representatives may provide).

(5) This clause ceases to apply on the close of the date that is 2 years after the commencement of this clause.

Schedule 4 clause 83: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 59(6) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

84 Financial advisers treated as holding DIMS licence

(1) This clause applies to a person (A) who, immediately before the commencement of this clause,—

(a) is permitted to provide a discretionary investment management service under section 18(1)(d) of the Financial Advisers Act 2008; and

(b) provides that service to 1 or more retail clients (as defined in that Act).

(2) A must, on and after the commencement of this clause, be treated as holding a market services licence that—

(a) covers the service of acting as a provider of a discretionary investment management service; and

(b) is subject to a condition that the service that A can provide under the licence is limited to the discretionary investment management service that A could provide immediately before the commencement of this clause; and

(c) is subject to the conditions, limitations, or restrictions that, immediately before the commencement of this clause, were imposed by or under the Financial Advisers Act 2008 on A's authorisation under that Act, except standard conditions as defined in section 5 of that Act (and those conditions, limitations, or restrictions that the licence is subject to must be treated as conditions of the licence for the purposes of this Act); and

(d) has an expiry date that is the earliest of the following:

(i) the date that A is issued with another licence that covers the service; and

(ii) the date that the licence is cancelled; and

(iii) the date that is 2 years after the commencement of this clause.

(3) However, subclause (2) does not apply if, before the commencement of this clause, A has given written notification to the FMA that A does not want subclause (2) to apply.

(4) Nothing in this clause—

(a) prevents the FMA from exercising any power in relation to the licence; or

(b) limits the conditions that the licence is subject to under section 402 (for example, conditions imposed by regulations).

Schedule 4 clause 84: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 59(6) of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

(b) A is providing a DIMS to an investor (C) under an investment authority that was granted before the commencement of this clause.

(2) The requirement in sections 423 and 424 to provide an SDS relating to the DIMS to C does not apply.

(3) However, subclause (2) ceases to apply on the specified date unless A, before the specified date, has sent a written notice that contains, or is accompanied by, the following information to C at C's last known address:

(a) a statement to the effect that the requirements of this Act apply to the DIMS on and after a date that is referred to in the statement (being the date on which clause 84 comes into force):

(b) the names and addresses of A and the custodian (if any):

(c) either—

(i) a copy of the SDS relating to the DIMS (being an SDS that complies with regulation 205 of the 2014 regulations but subject to subclause (4)(b) of this clause); or

(ii) a statement to the effect that C may obtain a copy of that SDS on request to A and also by electronic means, and a statement as to how C may obtain a copy of that SDS by electronic means (for example, from a specified Internet site address).

(4) If subclause (2) applies,—

(a) regulation 206 of the 2014 regulations (investment proposal must be provided to investors) does not apply in relation to the DIMS provided by A to C; and

(b) the SDS that is made available to C under subclause (3)(c)—

(i) is not required to refer to the investment proposal; but

(ii) must state that information about the investment strategy applying to the investor, and about the returns, fees, and expenses of that strategy, will be made available to the investor by way of regular reports; and

(c) regulation 226(1)(a) of the 2014 regulations does not apply to the client agreement in respect of the DIMS provided to C.

(5) However, subclause (4)(c) ceases to apply on the specified date unless the SDS that is made available to C under subclause (3)(c) provides adequately for the matters in regulation 226(1)(a)(i) to (iv) of the 2014 regulations.

(6) Section 437(2) to (4) does not apply to an investment authority referred to in subclause (1)(b).

(7) However,—

(a) subclause (6) ceases to apply on the specified date unless A, before the specified date, has sent a written notice that discloses the scope of the investment authority to C at C's last known address, including the matters referred to in section 437(2)(a) to (c); and

(b) if there are no limits on the investment authority on a matter referred to in section 437(2)(a) or (b) or if the matter is capable of change without the prior written consent of C, the written notice under paragraph (a) must clearly disclose that fact.

(8) This clause does not apply to an investment authority granted after the licence referred to in subclause (1) is issued.

(9) In this clause,—

2014 regulations means the Financial Markets Conduct Regulations 2014

SDS or service disclosure statement, in relation to the DIMS, means a disclosure statement under section 423 for the DIMS

5 (with the chairperson and other members having the same period of appointment as they respectively have as members of the code working group).

(2) This clause does not limit clauses 26(1)(b), (2), and (4) and 28(2) and (3) of Schedule 5.

(2) However, the disciplinary committee may exercise a power under clause 46 of Schedule 5 in relation to any of those proceedings if the committee is satisfied

Part 8
Provisions relating to Financial Markets (Conduct of Institutions) Amendment Act 2022

Schedule 4 Part 8: inserted, on 25 July 2023, by section 23 of the Financial Markets (Conduct of Institutions) Amendment Act 2022 (2022 No 36).

95 Dealing with applications to act as financial institution from existing banks, insurers, and NBDTs

(1) This clause applies to a person (A) if,—

(a) immediately before the commencement of this clause, A is a registered bank, a licensed insurer, or a licensed NBDT; and

(b) an application is made for a licence to cover A's service of acting as a financial institution (whether under an existing or a new licence and whether under section 395 or, by way of an application to vary the conditions of a licence, under section 404 of this Act).

(2) To the extent that the application relates to A, the FMA must not decline the application unless the Reserve Bank has given its consent.

(3) The Reserve Bank may withhold its consent only if the Reserve Bank is satisfied,—

(a) in a case where A is a registered bank or a licensed NBDT, that withholding the consent is necessary for maintaining a sound and efficient financial system:

(b) in a case where A is a licensed insurer, that withholding the consent is necessary for maintaining a sound and efficient insurance sector.

(4) If the FMA has asked for the Reserve Bank's consent but the Reserve Bank refuses to give its consent, the FMA must accept the application (to the extent that it relates to A) even if it does not consider that 1 or more of the requirements referred to in section 396 or 400 are satisfied.

(5) The FMA may exercise a power under section 414(2) in respect of the requirements referred to in section 396 or 400 (without having to be satisfied under section 414(1)).

(6) Subclause (5) ceases to apply in relation to a person when the FMA first becomes satisfied that those requirements referred to in section 396 or 400 are satisfied in relation to the person.

Schedule 4 clause 95: inserted, on 25 July 2023, by section 23 of the Financial Markets (Conduct of Institutions) Amendment Act 2022 (2022 No 36).

96 Regulations may provide that licensing requirement does not apply until particular date

(1) The Governor-General may, by Order in Council, on the recommendation of the Minister, make regulations for the purpose set out in subclause (2) (and those regulations have effect despite the commencement of section 8 of the Financial Markets (Conduct of Institutions) Amendment Act 2022).

(2) The purpose is to provide that the requirement to hold, or be authorised under, a licence to provide the service of acting as a financial institution does not apply to a class of persons specified in the regulations until on or after a date specified in those regulations.

(3) A date specified in those regulations must be on or before the fifth anniversary of the date on which the Financial Markets (Conduct of Institutions) Amendment Act 2022 receives the Royal assent.

(4) The Minister must consult the FMA before making a recommendation under this clause.

(5) Regulations made under this clause are secondary legislation (see Part 3 of the Legislation Act 2019 for publication requirements).

Example

The requirement for financial institutions to hold a market services licence comes into force on a particular date (date A).

However, regulations under this clause provide that the requirement does not apply to NBDTs until a later date (date B).

While the requirement applies to registered banks and insurers on date A, it only starts to apply to NBDTs on date B.

Legislation Act 2019 requirements for secondary legislation made under this clause
Publication	PCO must publish it on the legislation website and notify it in the Gazette	LA19 s 69(1)(c)
Presentation	The Minister must present it to the House of Representatives	LA19 s 114
Disallowance	It may be disallowed by the House of Representatives	LA19 ss 115, 116

This note is not part of the Act.

Schedule 4 clause 96: inserted, on 25 July 2023, by section 23 of the Financial Markets (Conduct of Institutions) Amendment Act 2022 (2022 No 36).

97 Applications for financial institution licence may be made before commencement

(1) A person may apply for a market services licence to cover the service of acting as a financial institution—

(a) before the commencement of section 8 of the Financial Markets (Conduct of Institutions) Amendment Act 2022; and

(b) if regulations under clause 96 apply, before the date referred to in clause 96(2).

(2) For the purposes of dealing with the application, any provisions of the Financial Markets (Conduct of Institutions) Amendment Act 2022 that are relevant to the matter and that are not yet in force must be treated as if they were in force.

(3) The FMA may refuse to consider the application if it is made—

(a) before a date specified by the FMA; or

(b) before an event specified by the FMA has occurred; or

(c) before circumstances specified by the FMA exist.

(4) Subclause (3) ceases to apply to an application made after the later of—

(a) the commencement of section 8 of the Financial Markets (Conduct of Institutions) Amendment Act 2022; and

(b) the date referred to in clause 96(2) (if the regulations made under that clause apply in relation to the applicant).

(5) This clause does not limit section 395(1A).

Schedule 4 clause 97: inserted, on 25 July 2023, by section 23 of the Financial Markets (Conduct of Institutions) Amendment Act 2022 (2022 No 36).

98 Incentives regulations may apply to existing agreements

(1) Regulations made under section 546(1)(og) may provide that they apply to 1 or more classes of incentives offered, given, or otherwise payable on or after the commencement of those regulations.

(2) Subclause (1) may apply even if an incentive is offered, given, or otherwise payable under an agreement entered into before either or both of the following:

(a) the commencement of those regulations:

(b) the enactment of the Financial Markets (Conduct of Institutions) Amendment Act 2022.

(3) However, nothing in those regulations applies to—

(a) any incentive that is given or otherwise paid or payable before the commencement of those regulations; or

(b) any incentive that a person has become entitled to before that commencement (even if it is given or otherwise payable after that commencement).

(4) If the regulations apply to an agreement referred to in subclause (2), compliance with those regulations does not—

(a) place any party to the agreement or any other person in breach of the agreement, or make any of them liable for a civil wrong; or

(b) entitle any person to terminate or cancel an agreement, or to accelerate the performance of an obligation, or to impose a penalty or an increased charge, unless the regulations provide otherwise.

Example

A company (A) acts as an insurer. A offers motor vehicle insurance to consumers.

A car dealer (B) offers A's insurance to its customers when they buy cars. A is contractually obliged to pay B an incentive based on the volume of A's insurance products that are sold.

The contract providing for the incentive is entered into before commencement of the regulations.

The regulations cannot apply to incentives that are payable before the commencement of the regulations. However, this clause allows the regulations to apply to incentives payable after commencement even though the contract was entered into before commencement.

The regulations ban a certain incentive that would otherwise be payable under the contract.

A must no longer pay the incentive. A does not breach the contract by refusing to pay the incentive and B has no right to cancel the contract because of that refusal.

Schedule 4 clause 98: inserted, on 25 July 2023, by section 23 of the Financial Markets (Conduct of Institutions) Amendment Act 2022 (2022 No 36).

1 Overview

(1) This schedule provides for matters relating to—

(a) financial advice services (see subpart 5A of Part 6 of this Act); and

(b) client money or property services (see subpart 5B of Part 6 of this Act).

(2) In particular,—

(a) Part 1 identifies when a client is a retail client or a wholesale client. This determines whether a financial advice provider needs to be licensed and whether certain duties apply:

(b) Part 2 sets out situations when financial advice is not provided and when financial advice services are not regulated under this Act:

(c) Part 3 sets out situations when client money or property services are not regulated under this Act:

(d) Part 4 provides for a code of professional conduct for financial advice services and for the establishment and operation of a code committee:

(e) Part 5 provides for complaints and disciplinary proceedings against financial advisers.

(3) This clause is only a guide to the general scheme and effect of this schedule.

Schedule 5 clause 1: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 60 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

Part 1
Retail and wholesale financial advice or client money or property service clients

Schedule 5 Part 1: inserted, on 15 March 2021, by section 60 of the Financial Services Legislation Amendment Act 2019 (2019 No 8).

2 Who are clients

In this Act, a client,—

(a) in relation to a financial advice service, means a person who receives the service (whether or not on payment of a charge); and

(b) in relation to a client money or property service, means the person on whose behalf the client money or client property is received, held, paid, or transferred under the service (but excludes the product provider); but

(c) does not include a person who receives the financial advice or client money or property service from another person if the service is both provided and received in the course of, and for the purposes of,—

(i) the same business; or

(ii) the businesses of related bodies corporate; or

(iii) the businesses of a group of entities that consists of a licensee and its authorised bodies.

Example

If a company employee (A) gives financial advice to the board of directors on investments to be made by the company, the directors are not clients of A. However, if A, in the course of business, gives that same financial advice to another employee (B) in relation to B's own investments, B is a client of A for the purposes of this Act.

(f) the person is an eligible investor in relation to the service under clause 41 of Schedule 1.

(2) The relevant time, for the purposes of applying Schedule 1 under subclause (1), is the time immediately before the service is supplied to the person.

(3) If subclause (1) applies to a person (C), it applies equally to any entity controlled by C to the same extent as it applies to C (where controlled has a meaning that corresponds to the definition of control in clause 48 of Schedule 1).

2.3.2 An Issuer must comply with the following Director nomination process:

(a) the closing date for nominations must be no more than two months before the date of the relevant meeting at which the election is to take place,

(b) the closing date for nominations must be announced to the market at least 10 Business Days prior to such closing date,

2.4 Equity Holder appointment rights

2.4.1 The Governing Document may give an Equity Security holder the right to appoint one or more Directors (and to remove any Director so appointed), provided:

2.10.2 Notwithstanding Rule 2.10.1, a Director of an Issuer incorporated under the Companies Act 1993 may vote on a Board resolution for, and be counted in a quorum for the consideration of, a matter in which that Director has an interest, if the matter:

(b) may provide that the remuneration may, in whole or in part, be through an issue of Equity Securities, provided the issue is in compliance with Rule 4.7.

2.11.3 If remuneration is expressed in accordance with Rule 2.11.1(a) and there is an increase in the number of Directors from the number of Directors in office at the conclusion of a meeting of Financial Product holders at which the remuneration was approved by an Ordinary Resolution, the Board may, without an Ordinary Resolution, increase the remuneration payable to all Directors of the Issuer in aggregate. The amount of the increase per additional Director may not exceed the amount necessary to enable the additional Director or Directors to be paid the average amount then being paid to each non-Executive Director (other than the chairperson) of the Issuer.

2.11.4 A lump sum payment or pension may be made to a Director or former Director, or to his or her dependents, on retirement or cessation of office provided that the amount of the payment, or the method of calculation, has been authorised by an Ordinary Resolution.

2.11.5 The resolutions referred to in this Rule 2.11 are subject to the voting restrictions in Rule 6.3.

4.1.2 An Issuer may issue Equity Securities, without approval by Ordinary Resolution, by way of:

(a) a pro-rata Rights issue, bonus issue or a Share Purchase Plan in accordance with Rule 4.3 and, if applicable, Rule 4.4,

(b) an issue under an Issuer's 15% placement capacity in accordance with Rule 4.5.1,

(d) other issues for dividend reinvestment plans, director remuneration, takeovers, amalgamation, conversions and Minimum Holdings in accordance with Rules 4.7 to 4.9.

4.2 Shareholder approval for Issues by Ordinary Resolution

4.2.1 For the holders of Equity Securities to approve an issue of Equity Securities by the Issuer, the precise terms and conditions of the issue must have been approved by:

(a) separate Ordinary Resolutions of each Class of Quoted Equity Securities whose rights or entitlements could be affected, or

(b) if a Class of Quoted Equity Securities were issued on terms that the holders would vote together with the holders of another Class or Classes of Equity Securities on a resolution of the nature referred to in Rule 4.2.1(a), a single resolution of all such Classes of Equity Securities voting together.

4.2.2 An issue of Equity Securities authorised under Rule 4.2.1 must be completed within:

(a) 36 months after the passing of those resolutions, if the issue is restricted to Employees, and

(b) 12 months after the passing of those resolutions in all other circumstances, otherwise the issue cannot occur until further approval is obtained under Rule 4.2.1.

4.2.3 A resolution under Rule 4.2.1 is not required in relation to the holders of a Class of Equity Securities if the terms of issue of those Equity Securities reserved the right to make the new issue (where the reservation included details of the maximum number, Class of Equity Securities and timeframe within which the further issue would be made).

4.2.4 Except as provided in Rules 6.5.1, 6.5.2 and 6.5.3, no Issuer may re-price or amend the terms of any Equity Securities issued under Rule 4.2.1 held by Employees or Directors, in their capacity as such, without either the approval of NZX or a further Ordinary Resolution of the Quoted Equity Security holders approving the repricing or amendment.

4.2.5 The resolutions referred to in this Rule 4.2 are subject to the voting restrictions in Rule 6.3.

4.3 Pro-rata issues and Share Purchase Plans

4.3.1 An Issuer may issue Equity Securities if those Equity Securities are:

(a) offered to existing holders of the Issuer's Equity Securities on a basis which, if the offer were accepted in full by all such holders, would maintain the proportionate Voting and distribution rights of each holder (subject only to rounding), and:

(i) that offer is Renounceable and/or an Accelerated Offer,

(ii) where the offer of Equity Securities includes one or more bookbuild(s) for the Shortfall, oversubscriptions for any Shortfall must be permitted by holders who are not excluded under Rule 4.4.1(e) and have applied for their full entitlement in the offer or the component of the offer to which the bookbuild relates, and

(iii) any Offer Document for the offer or, if there is no Offer Document, the information provided under Rule 4.17.6(b) or 4.17.7(b) must set out the allocation policy to be applied to any Shortfall,

(b) issued to existing holders of the Issuer's Equity Securities as fully paid Equity Securities on a basis which maintains the existing proportionate Voting and distribution rights of each holder (subject only to rounding), or

(c) offered to existing holders of the Issuer's Equity Securities under a Share Purchase Plan.

4.4 Rules applicable to pro-rata issues and Share Purchase Plans

4.4.1 Notwithstanding Rule 4.3.1 and Rule 4.4.2, an Issuer is entitled to:

(a) subject to Rule 4.3.1(a)(iii), issue any Equity Securities which have been offered under Rule 4.3.1(a) and not taken up, or held back because of fractional entitlements, provided the price, terms and conditions are not materially more favourable to the person to whom they are issued than the original offer and the issue is completed within three months of the close of that offer,

(b) issue Equity Securities to existing holders of the Issuer's Financial Products where the right to participate in future issues is specifically attached to those existing Financial Products, regardless of the effect on existing proportionate rights to Voting and distribution rights,

(c) authorise a disproportionate offer to the extent necessary to round entitlements to a whole number, round up holdings to a Minimum Holding, or to avoid the creation of a holding which is less than a Minimum Holding,

(d) not offer Equity Securities to holders of existing Equity Securities where the terms of those existing Equity Securities expressly exclude the right to participate in the relevant issue, and

(e) not offer Equity Securities to holders outside New Zealand if, in the Issuer's reasonable opinion, it would be unduly onerous for the Issuer to make that offer in that jurisdiction, provided that in a Renounceable offer the Issuer must arrange the sale of any excluded holders' Rights, or the Equity Securities to which any excluded holders would be entitled if they were eligible to participate, and account to excluded holders for the net proceeds.

4.4.2 An Issuer making an Accelerated Offer under Rule 4.3.1(a) must comply with the following requirements (as applicable to the type of Accelerated Offer undertaken by the Issuer):

(a) any bookbuild(s) must be undertaken pursuant to the terms set out in the Offer Document,

(b) if the Accelerated Offer is Renounceable, instead of arranging the sale of Rights under Rule 4.4.1(e), the Rights of Ineligible Shareholders, or the Equity Securities to which Ineligible Shareholders would be entitled if they were eligible to participate, must be offered under one or morebookbuild(s) undertaken in relation to the Accelerated Offer and any net premium achieved in excess of the price must be returned to Ineligible Shareholders,

(c) if the Accelerated Offer is non-Renounceable:

(i) the ratio of Equity Securities offered must not be greater than one new Equity Security for every three existing Equity Securities held, and

(ii) any Offer Document relating to the Accelerated Offer or, if there is no Offer Document, the information provided under Rule 4.17.7(b) must include a statement as to:

(A) the reason(s) why the Issuer has chosen to make the Accelerated Offer non-Renounceable and why the non-Renounceable nature of the Accelerated Offer is considered to be in the best interests of the Issuer,

(B) the impact of the non-Renounceable nature of the Accelerated Offer on non-participating holders of Equity Securities, and

(C) whether the Issuer has obtained expert investment banking or corporate finance advice in relation to the merits of the non-Renounceable nature of the Accelerated Offer and, if so, the name of the adviser(s) who provided the advice,

(d) notwithstanding Rule 4.17.1, Eligible Institutional Shareholders may be notified of their entitlements under the Accelerated Offer by electronic means and prior to the Record Date,

(e) notwithstanding Rule 4.17.2, any Institutional Entitlement Offer component of an Accelerated Offer may be open for less than 12 Business Days (or 5 Business Days, as applicable) provided that any Offer Document relating to the Accelerated Offer clearly states or, if there is no Offer Document, applicants are advised before subscription that a shorter than usual offer period will apply to Eligible Institutional Shareholders under the Institutional Entitlement Offer (including the length of such shorter period),

(f) if Rule 4.17.6 would otherwise apply to the Accelerated Offer:

(i) rather than comply with Rule 4.17.6(b), an Issuer may elect to release through MAP the information required by Rule 4.17.6(b) promptly and without delay after the decision to make the Accelerated Offer has been made and no later than the Ex Date for the Accelerated Offer, or

(ii) rather than comply with Rule 4.17.6(e), an Issuer may elect for the quotation of Renounceable Rights to cease at the close of trading on the day 4 Business Days before the closing date of the Retail Entitlement Offer,

(g) if Rule 4.17.7 would otherwise apply to the Accelerated Offer, an Issuer may elect to release through MAP the information required by Rule 4.17.7 promptly and without delay after the decision to make the Accelerated Offer has been made and no later than the Ex Date for the Accelerated Offer,

(h) Rule 4.19.1 must be separately applied to an Institutional Entitlement Offer and a Retail Entitlement Offer.

4.4.3 For the purposes of Rule 4.4.2, the following terms bear the following meanings:

Eligible Institutional Shareholders	means the institutional Equity Security holders of the Issuer, being wholesale investors (as defined in Schedule 1 of the FMC Act) or the equivalent type of investor under securities legislation applying in a jurisdiction outside New Zealand, who are eligible to participate in the Institutional Entitlement Offer.

Retail Entitlement Offer	means a pro-rata offer of Equity Securities, made at the same ratio as the related Institutional Entitlement Offer, to the Issuer's existing retail shareholders in New Zealand and certain eligible overseas jurisdictions (if relevant), who did not receive an offer under such Institutional Entitlement Offer.

Votes must be counted according to the votes attached to the Financial Products of each Financial Product holder entitled to Vote and voting.

6.2 Votes attaching to Financial Products

6.2.1 Subject to NZX's approval, Financial Products of an Issuer may carry different numbers of Votes.

6.2.2 Subject to NZX's approval, the Governing Document of an Issuer may allow Votes attaching to a Class of Financial Products to vary from time to time in reference to movements in the economic value of a part or division of the Issuer's operations.

6.2.3 NZX may grant approval under Rule 6.2.1 or Rule 6.2.2 on such conditions as it thinks fit (which may require a resolution approved by holders of any Class or group of Financial Products of the Issuer).

6.2.4 Each Financial Product which is not fully paid will carry the fraction of the Vote which would be exercisable if the Financial Product was fully paid that is proportionate to the payment which has been made (excluding amounts credited and amounts paid in advance of a call).

6.3 Voting Restrictions

6.3.4 Each Issuer must use reasonable endeavours to ascertain, no later than 5 Business Days before a meeting to consider a resolution referred to in Rule 6.3.1, the identity of those Financial Product holders who are disqualified from voting on such resolution and, if requested by NZX, must supply a list of such holders to NZX.

6.3.5 No resolution of, or proceeding at, a meeting of Financial Product holders will be void on the basis of a breach of Rule 6.3.1.

6.4 Condition in Contract

6.4.1 Each Issuer must ensure that all agreements requiring approval by a resolution of Quoted Financial Product holders are conditional upon the passage of such a resolution and that the transaction must not be completed until that resolution is passed.

6.4.2 If that resolution fails, the Issuer must terminate its obligations under that agreement so that the transaction in question does not proceed.

Rights of Equity Securities

6.5 Option

6.5.1 An Option can confer the right to participate in a Rights issue only if it:

(a) is exercised before the Record Date for the Rights issue,

(b) was issued through a pro rata offer made under Rule 4.3.1 to the holders of Quoted Equity Securities, or

(c) was issued, with the approval of holders of Quoted Equity Securities, on terms which allow the Option holder to participate in offers to the holders of Quoted Equity Securities, provided that nothing in this Rule 6.5.1 applies to any Option issued before the Issuer was Listed.

6.5.2 An Option must not confer the right to a change in the exercise price or number of underlying Equity Securities if there is a Rights issue to the holders of the underlying Equity Securities, unless:

(a) it was issued with the approval of Quoted Equity Securities holders, in which case changes can be made in accordance with the formula or provision contained in the terms of the Option, or

(b) the effect of the change is to reduce the exercise price of the Option and the reduction is calculated according to the following formula:

$$O^1 = O - \frac{E[P-(S+D)]}{N+1}$$

where,

O^1 = the new exercise price of the Option.

O = the old exercise price of the Option.

E = the number of underlying Financial Products into which one Option is exercisable.

(Note: E is generally one unless the number has changed because of a bonus issue or capital change.)

P = the volume weighted average market price of underlying Financial Products during the 5 Business Days ending on the day before the Ex Date for the Rights.

S = the subscription price for a Financial Product under the Rights issue.

D = the dividend (in the case of a trust, distribution) due but not yet paid on the existing underlying Financial Products (except those to be issued under the Rights Issue).

N = the number of Financial Products with Rights or entitlements that must be held to receive a Right to one new Equity Security.

Nothing in this Rule applies to any Option which was issued before the Issuer was Listed.

6.5.3 If there is a bonus issue to the holders of the underlying Financial Products, the number of Financial Products over which an Option is exercisable may be increased to include those Financial Products which the Option holder would have received had the Option been exercised before the Record Date for the issue.

6.5.4 If there is a consolidation or subdivision or similar proportionate reconstruction of the underlying Financial Products, the number of Financial Products over which an Option is exercisable may be consolidated or subdivided in the same ratio and the exercise price amended in inverse proportion to that ratio, including any necessary rounding to the number of Financial Products or the exercise price.

6.6 Lien and Forfeiture

6.6.1 An Issuer's lien on Equity Securities and on dividends or other distributions from time to time declared in respect of such Equity Securities will be restricted to one in respect of:

(a) unpaid calls, instalments, premiums or other amounts, and any interest payable on such amounts, relating to the specific Equity Securities, and

(b) any amount which the Issuer may be called upon to pay under any legislation in respect of the specific Equity Securities, whether or not the due date for payment has passed.

6.6.2 If Equity Securities are forfeited and sold or are sold to enforce a lien, any balance remaining after payments owing and expenses must be paid to the previous owner, or to the executors, administrators or assigns of the previous owner.

6.6.3 Equity Securities may not be liable to forfeiture due to the failure of persons entitled to those Equity Securities (by transmission or otherwise) to submit evidence proving their title within a specified time.

6.6.4 To avoid doubt, for the purposes of this Rule 6.6, a lien does not include a right ofset-off.

6.7 Modifications of Rights of Equity Security Holders

6.7.1 Every Issuer of Equity Securities must comply with the provisions of sections 116 and 117 of the Companies Act 1993 as modified so that:

(a) "shares" will (subject to Rule 6.7.2) refer to all Equity Securities of that Issuer, and references to "shareholders" will be read accordingly, and

(b) "company" will refer to the Issuer, and references to pre-emptive rights under section 45 of that Act will be deemed to have been deleted, and

(c) in respect of Equity Securities which are not shares of a company registered under the Companies Act 1993:

(i) "special resolution" will refer to a resolution approved by a majority of 75% of votes of the holders of those Financial Products entitled to vote and voting, and

(ii) "constitution" will refer to the Governing Document for the rights of those Equity Securities.

6.7.2 Nothing in Rule 6.7.1 requires an Issuer to comply with sections 116 and 117 of the Companies Act 1993 in respect of actions that affect the rights attached to:

(a) Equity Securities which are not Quoted, or

(b) Equity Securities which are not shares of a company if those Equity Securities were issued on terms which expressly allow the action in question to be taken without the prior approval of holders of those Equity Securities, and those terms were clearly disclosed when the Equity Securities were offered.

6.7.3 Rule 6.7.1 does not have the effect of deeming section 118 of the Companies Act 1993 to apply to any Financial Products other than shares of a company registered under the Companies Act 1993.

6.8 Cancellation of Unpaid Amounts

6.8.1 No obligation on a holder to pay any unpaid amount on any Equity Security may be cancelled, reduced or deferred without the authority of an Ordinary Resolution (such resolution being subject to the voting restrictions in Rule 6.3).

(c) any other information that the Board considers may be useful to provide to a Financial Product holder.

7.8.4 As a minimum, the notice of meeting for a resolution to approve an issue, acquisition or redemption of Financial Products, or provision of financial assistance, must state or contain so much of the following information as is applicable and known to the Issuer:

(a) the number of any Financial Products to be issued, acquired, or redeemed or, if the number is not known, the formula to be applied to determine the number, and the maximum number which may be issued, acquired or redeemed,

(b) the purpose of the transaction,

(c) any issue, acquisition or redemption price or, if the price is not known, the formula to be applied to determine the price, and the time or times for payment with sufficient detail to enable Financial Product holders to ascertain the terms to or from any party,

(d) the party or parties to whom any Financial Products are to be issued, or from whom they are to be acquired or redeemed, where that is known, and identifying by name any such parties who are Directors or Associated Persons of the Issuer or any Director,

(e) in the case of an issue, the consideration for the issue and, where that is cash, the specific purpose for raising the cash,

(f) the period of time within which any issue, acquisition or redemption will be made,

(g) in the case of an issue, the ranking of the Financial Products to be issued for any future benefit, and

(h) in the case of a resolution under Rule 4.16.1, the amount and full terms of the financial assistance to be given and the party or parties who will receive it, identifying by name any such parties who are Directors or Associated Persons of the Issuer or any Director.

7.8.5 A notice of meeting to consider a resolution of the nature referred to in Rule 7.8.4 (other than a resolution to permit an issue under Rule 4.7.1) must be accompanied by an Appraisal Report if:

(a) the resolution is required by Rule 4.13,

(b) more than 50% of the Financial Products to be issued are intended or likely to be acquired by Directors or Associated Persons of Directors, or

(c) more than 50% of the Financial Products to be acquired or redeemed or the financial assistance to be given is intended or likely to go to Directors or Associated Persons of Directors.

7.8.6 Without limiting Rule 7.8.2, notices in respect of proposed changes to a Governing Document must explain the effect of such changes so that they can be understood without reference to the existing or proposed Governing Document.

7.8.7 Where the Issuer is incorporated under the Companies Act 1993 and the effect of the resolution, if passed, is that shareholders will have the right to require the Issuer to buy their shares under section 110 or 118 of that Act, the resolution must contain a prominent statement referring to that right.

7.8.8 A notice of meeting for the purposes of Rule 5.2.1 must:

(a) be reviewed by NZX in accordance with Rule 7.1,

(b) be accompanied by an Appraisal Report, and

(c) contain such other material as is necessary to enable the holders of Financial Products entitled to Vote to decide whether the transaction price and terms are fair.

7.9 Proxy approval

7.9.1 So far as is reasonably practicable, resolutions must be framed in a manner which facilitates binary voting instructions for proxy holders.

7.9.2 A proxy appointment form must be sent or made available with each notice of meeting of Quoted Financial Product holders and:

(a) as a minimum, so far as the subject matter and form of the resolutions reasonably permits, provide for a binary voting choice (for or against) to enable a Quoted Financial Product holder to instruct the proxy as to the casting of the vote,

(b) not be sent with any name or office (e.g. chairperson of directors) filled in as proxy holder, and

(c) contain a statement outlining who is subject to voting restrictions in relation to each resolution.

7.9.3 Notwithstanding Rule 7.9.2, an Issuer may provide in the proxy form that:

(a) if, in appointing a proxy, a Quoted Financial Product holder does not name a person as their proxy but otherwise completes the proxy form in full, or

(b) a Quoted Financial Product holder's named proxy does not attend the meeting, a named person or office will act as that Quoted Financial Product holder's proxy and vote in accordance with their express direction. If such statement is included in the proxyform, the proxy form and notice of meeting must:

(c) clearly and prominently disclose the intention to appoint a named person or office in the circumstances set out in Rule 7.9.3(a) and (b), and

(d) provide that the named person or office acting as proxy must:

(i) only vote in accordance with the express directions of the relevant Quoted Financial Product holder, and

(ii) not vote on a resolution if expressly granted a discretion on how to vote on a resolution and such resolution is subject to a voting restriction that applies to the proxy under Rule 6.3.1.

7.10 Appraisal reports

7.10.1 An Appraisal Report for the purposes of the Rules must be made by an independent appropriately qualified person previously approved by NZX. If the report relies on information provided, or an opinion expressed, by a party external to the Issuer, that other party must also be approved by NZX. NZX may refuse to approve, or revoke any prior approval, if not satisfied that the person is independent and appropriately qualified.

7.10.2 An Appraisal Report must:

(a) be addressed to those Directors of the Issuer who are not, and are not associated with, a relevant Associated Person and, where there are no such Directors, to NZX, which at the expense of the Issuer will oversee the distribution of the report. "Relevant" in this context means persons whose association or connection with the Issuer or its Directors, or with parties to the transaction, or whose likelihood of acquiring Financial Products as a result of the transaction, is such that an Appraisal Report must be obtained,

(b) be expressed to be for the benefit of those Equity Security holders who are not associated with any relevant Associated Persons (as defined in (a)),

(c) state the appraiser's opinion, with supporting reasons, as to whether or not the terms and conditions of the proposed transaction are fair to the holders of

Equity Securities, other than those associated with the relevant Associated Persons (as defined in (a)),

(d) state the appraiser's opinion, with supporting reasons, as to whether the information to be provided by the Issuer is sufficient to enable Equity Security holders to make an informed decision, in respect of the question referred to in (c),

(e) state whether the appraiser has obtained all the information needed to prepare the report,

(f) state any material assumptions on which the appraiser's opinion is based,

(g) state any term of reference which may have materially restricted the scope of the report, and

(h) not contain a disclaimer of liability that purports to absolve the appraiser from liability for an opinion expressed recklessly or in bad faith.

If the appraiser considers that the transaction has been structured wholly or partly to confer a benefit on the relevant Associated Persons (as defined in (a)), the appraiser may mention alternative courses of action available to the Issuer. Any indications by the Directors that these alternative courses are not acceptable to them or that they would not propose to pursue them must be disregarded by the Appraiser if there is any reason to suspect that these are motivated, in whole or in part, by concern for the interests of the relevant Associated Persons in distinction to the interests of the other Equity Security holders.

7.10.3 An Issuer may circulate to Financial Product holders a summary of an Appraisal Report rather than the report in full. The summary must be accompanied by a certificate from the appraiser attesting that the summary is accurate and not misleading.

Transfers and Statements

Restrictions on transfer

Financial Product Registers

Transfers

8.1 Transfer of Quoted Financial Products (common rules)

8.1.1 Subject to the provisions of any legislation, and to Rule 8.1.4, Rule 8.1.6(a), Rule 8.1.6(b) and Rule 8.2, no Issuer may impose, in its Governing Document or otherwise, any restriction on the right of a holder of a Quoted Financial Product to transfer that Financial Product, or any restriction upon registration of a properly completed transfer of Quoted Financial Products.

8.1.2 A transfer of Quoted Financial Products in writing that has not been properly completed must be promptly returned to the person submitting it, for completion.

8.1.3 Subject to the provisions of Rule 8.1.2 and Rule 8.1.6(a) and (b), and of any applicable legislation, no Issuer may:

(a) require any documentation relating to transfers other than to establish an entitlement to transfer,

(b) require any information relating to the transferee (except for such information necessary to record the transfer), or

(c) impose any restriction on the acceptability of any common form of transfer.

8.1.4 An Issuer may decline to accept or register a transfer of a Quoted Financial Product if:

(a) the Issuer has a lien on such Quoted Financial Product,

(b) the registration, together with the completion of any further transfers then held by the Issuer and awaiting registration, would result in the proposed transferee or a transferor having a holding below a Minimum Holding,

(c) the transfer would be contrary to any permitted restriction on transfer referred to in Rule 8.1.6, or

(d) the Issuer is a co-operative company registered under the Co-operative

Companies Act 1996 and the registration would result in Quoted Financial Products being transferred to persons that are not "transacting shareholders" (as defined in that Act).

8.1.5 Except as expressly permitted by the Rules, no benefit or right attaching to a Quoted Financial Product may be cancelled or varied by reason only of a transfer of that Quoted Financial Product.

8.1.6 The Governing Document of an Issuer may:

(a) restrict the transfer of Debt Securities by requiring that holders must hold those Debt Securities:

(i) in a specified minimum nominal amount (of no more than $10,000, or such higher amount as NZX may specify from time to time), and/or

(ii) in integral multiples of a specified nominal amount (of no more than $1,000, or such higher amount as NZX may specify from time to time),

(b) with the prior approval of NZX, incorporate any other provision restricting the transfer of Relevant Interests in Financial Products, or

(c) prescribe procedures entitling the Issuer to sell Quoted Financial Products held in less than Minimum Holdings and to account to the holders for the proceeds of sale after deduction of reasonable sale expenses. At least three months' prior notice must be given to the affected holders before such an action.

8.2 Escrow Agreements

8.2.1 If an Offer Document or Profile describes transfer restrictions under Rules 7.4.5 and 7.5 or otherwise for a period of time specified in that document:

(a) the Issuer must enter into a "Escrow Agreement" with the persons to whom those Financial Products are issued, or to be issued, together with any beneficial owners of those Financial Products and such other persons as NZX considers necessary to ensure that the restrictions can be effectively enforced,

(b) that agreement must prohibit the parties from taking steps which would cause the effective ownership or control of those Financial Products to be disposed of otherwise than in accordance with the restrictions specified in the Offer Document or Profile, and

(c) where the agreement provides a discretion to lift the restrictions before the expiry of an agreed restriction period, the agreement must stipulate that this discretion can be exercised only with the consent of non-interested Directors of the Issuer. For this purpose, the term "interested" has the meaning in section 139 of the Companies Act 1993 and the word "company" will be read as a reference to the Issuer.

8.2.2 No variation or amendment can be made to an Escrow Agreement without the prior approval of NZX. The Issuer must advise NZX promptly and without delay upon becoming aware of any breach or likely breach of an Escrow Agreement and must take such steps as NZX may require to prevent or remedy any breaches.

Statements

8.3 Statements

8.3.1 Every Issuer must issue to each holder of Quoted Financial Products on request a Statement that sets out:

(a) the Class and number of Financial Products held by that holder and the total number of Financial Products of that Class issued by the Issuer,

(b) the register on which the holder's Financial Products are held, if other than the principal register,

(c) unless the Quoted Financial Products are ordinary shares, the rights, privileges, conditions and limitations, including restrictions on transfer (if any) attaching to the Quoted Financial Products held by the holder,

(d) the relationship of the Quoted Financial Products held by the holder compared with the other Classes of Quoted Financial Products, and

(e) the holder's number or CSN and address.

8.3.2 An Issuer is not obliged to provide a holder with the Statement required by Rule 8.3.1 if:

(a) such a Statement has been provided within the previous six months, and

(b) the holder has not acquired or disposed of Financial Products of the relevant Class since a previous Statement required by Rule 8.3.1 or Rule 8.3.3 was provided.

8.3.3 Every Issuer must issue a Statement to each holder who obtains or disposes of Quoted Financial Products upon an issue or a transfer within 5 Business Days after the date of allotment or the date of registration of that transfer.

8.3.4 Where the Statement required by Rule 8.3.3 is issued following a transfer, the Statement must include:

(a) all the information specified in Rule 8.3.1, except that the total number of Financial Products of that Class issued by the Issuer need not be shown, and

(b) the number of Financial Products transferred (to or from the holder) in each transfer since the last Statement.

Financial Product Registers

8.4 Registration

8.4.1 An Issuer must ensure that any registrar it appoints to keep a register of its Quoted Financial Products complies with the requirements of this Section 8 and the FMC Act. References in this Section 8 to an Issuer will for this purpose include its registrar.

8.4.2 Every Issuer must ensure that its registry functions are performed promptly and properly. This will include indemnifying Participants and persons having dealings with its registrar against any losses or costs incurred through a failure in the performance of these functions which is not fairly attributable to the fault of the person claiming indemnity (or his or her agent).

8.4.3 Subject to the right of any Issuer under Rule 8.1, all properly executed and documented written Quoted Financial Product transfers must be registered within 2 Business Days of their receipt by the Issuer.

8.5 Legal title transfer

8.5.1 For the purposes of this Rule 8.5:

"Client Inward Transfer" has the meaning given in the Depository Rules, and "Client Outward Transfer" has the meaning given in the Depository Rules.

8.5.2 Every Issuer with Financial Products Quoted, or that Issuer's registry, must:

(a) connect its register and maintain its registry connection to the Depository System, as specified by NZX, and operate it on all Business Days between the hours of 8.00 am and 6.00 pm,

(b) comply with any time limits for the processing of electronic messages or documentation which NZX may specify in relation to the operation of the Depository System,

(c) not delay the registration of any transfers, except in accordance with the Appendix to the Depository Rules, and

(d) issue holders of Quoted Financial Products who are not Participants directly connected to the Depository System with an Authorisation Code.

8.5.3 Where a Client Inward Transfer is entered without proper authority from the holder of the Financial Product being transferred, the Issuer must immediately reinstate or otherwise compensate the dispossessed Financial Product holder. This obligation on the part of the Issuer does not affect or prejudice any right the Issuer may have against any other person.

8.5.4 A Client Outward Transfer to a bona fide purchaser for value must not in any circumstance be cancelled or reversed by an Issuer.

8.5.5 Each Participant who completes a Client Inward Transfer will be deemed to have warranted to the Issuer that the transfer is valid and has been authorised by the registered holder of the Financial Products, and to indemnify the Issuer for any loss suffered due to a breach by the Participant of that warranty, without prejudice to any right of the Participant under Rule 8.4.2.

8.5.6 The warranty contained in Rule 8.5.5 will give rise to a cause of action by an Issuer against the Participant in question, provided that this obligation does not affect or prejudice any other right the Participant may have.

8.5.7 The requirement in this Rule 8.5 for an Issuer to connect and operate a registry which is connected to the Depository System will apply only as long as the Rules include the provisions of Rule 8.5.3, Rule 8.5.4, Rule 8.5.5, Rule 8.5.6, and this Rule 8.5.7.

8.5.8 NZX may not exercise its right of waiver under Rule 9.7 in respect of compliance with Rule 8.5.2(a), Rule 8.5.2(d), Rule 8.5.3, Rule 8.5.4, Rule 8.5.5, Rule 8.5.6, or this Rule 8.5.8.

Section 9
NZX Powers

Status of the Rules and changes to Rules

Waivers and Rulings

Trading Halts, Suspension and cancellation of listing

Compliance and enforcement functions

Status of the Rules and changes to the Rules

9.1 Status of Rules

9.1.1 These Rules were created by NZX to ensure that the Main Board and Debt Market are fair, orderly and transparent markets.

9.1.2 Any agreement made between NZX and an Issuer on the Main Board or the Debt Market under these Rules becomes a binding contract and is enforceable by NZX. These Rules do not have the status of regulations.

9.1.3 Each Issuer covenants with NZX to observe the Rules and to perform the obligations which the Rules purport to impose on Issuers, in the manner provided in the Rules.

9.2 Amendment of Rules

9.2.1 Any amendments to these Rules will become binding on Issuers on the later of:

(a) 20 Business Days after notice has been given to Issuers,

(b) the time (if any) specified in the notice to Issuers, or

(c) approval of the amendments by the FMA.

9.2.2 These timelines will apply even if an Issuer does not receive notice, through accidental omission by NZX or for any other reason.

9.3 Procedures

9.3.1 NZX may from time to time approve written procedures relating to the operation of the Rules. Should an inconsistency emerge between any Rule and any procedure, the Rules will prevail.

9.3.2 Any procedures do not form part of the Rules, however, if a Rule requires compliance with any procedure, failure to comply with that procedure is a contravention of the Rule.

9.4 Effect of Amendment

9.4.1 Unless stated otherwise, the amending, deletion or lapsing of a Rule or procedure does not have any retrospective effect. In particular, it does not affect:

(a) the previous operation of that Rule or procedure or anything done under that Rule or procedure,

(b) any right, privilege, obligation or liability acquired, accrued or incurred under that Rule or procedure, or

(c) any penalty, forfeiture, suspension, expulsion or disciplinary action incurred in respect of any contravention of that Rule or procedure. These may proceed as if the change had not taken effect.

9.4.2 When a change to the Rules requires a change to an Issuer's Governing Document, the Issuer will ensure that change is made at the first reasonable opportunity. Where the Rules are incorporated by reference into the Governing Document, the amendment will be deemed to be incorporated on the date specified in the notice given under Rule 9.2.1.

9.4.3 Any transaction:

(a) to which these Rules apply, and

(b) commenced, or undertaken pursuant to an agreement entered into, before an amendment of these Rules came into force, will be allowed to proceed pursuant to the previously applicable Rules.

9.5 Disputed Interpretation

9.5.1 Disputes between an Issuer and a Quoted Financial Product holder of that Issuer in relation to the Rules may be referred to NZX for a Ruling under Rule 9.6, should NZX elect to exercise this power.

9.5.2 Written notice must be provided to NZX with any application under Rule 9.5.1. This must contain a summary of the relevant facts known to the applicant and sufficient explanation to enable NZX to understand the issues in dispute and to identify whether any other parties should be notified or invited to make submissions.

9.5.3 Before commencing legal action which involves determination of a dispute as to the meaning or application of the Rules, a party to the Rules or a Quoted Financial Product holder having the benefit of them, must first apply to have a determination made by NZX under Rule 9.5.1 and await the outcome of NZX's determination.

9.6 Rulings

9.6.1 NZX may make Rulings in relation to the Rules for such period and on such terms and conditions as it sees fit. It may do this upon application by an Issuer or at its own instigation, and whether or not a dispute exists. A Ruling may apply to a specific Issuer, or be a class Ruling applying to the Rules generally.

9.6.2 Rulings in respect of an application by an Issuer will be made public, together with the Issuer's identity, the facts of any application and the grounds for NZX's decision, unless:

(a) the affected Issuer establishes satisfactory grounds for maintaining confidentiality, or

(b) NZX elects at its sole discretion not to publish its decision.

9.6.3 Any Ruling given under Rule 9.6.1:

(a) will have effect as if it formed part of the Rules, either in relation to:

(i) the Issuer concerned, or

(ii) the Rules generally if a class Ruling is made,

(b) may be recorded or publicised in such manner as NZX thinks fit, and

(c) may be revoked by NZX at any time by giving notice to either:

(i) the relevant Issuer, or

(ii) to the market generally, if revoking a class Ruling.

9.7 Waiver

9.7.1 NZX may waive the application of any one or more of the provisions of the Rules for such period (including retrospectively) and on such terms and conditions as NZX sees fit. It may do this upon application by an Issuer or at its own instigation. A waiver may apply to a specific Issuer, or be a class waiver applying to the Rules generally.

9.7.2 Waivers in respect of an application by an Issuer will be made public, together with the Issuer's identity, the facts of the application and the grounds for NZX's decision, unless:

(a) the affected Issuer establishes satisfactory grounds for maintaining confidentiality, or

(b) NZX elects at its sole discretion not to publish its decision.

9.7.3 Any waiver granted under Rule 9.7.1 may be revoked at any time by NZX by written notice to the Issuer, or to the market generally if revoking a class waiver. Such a revocation has effect from the date stated in the notice (and may apply retrospectively if NZX considers that the waiver granted on the basis of incorrect information).

9.7.4 Subject to Rule 9.7.2, NZX may publish such information relating to a waiver granted or refused under Rule 9.7.1, or revocation of a waiver under Rule 9.7.3, as NZX sees fit.

9.8 Interpretation Policy

9.8.1 In the exercise of its powers to make Rulings, NZX will be guided by the policy statements published by it and any relevant Ruling decisions.

9.8.2 In addition to the policy statements referred to in Rule 9.8.1, NZX may from time to time issue further policy statements and practice notes which will have a similar status in the application of the Rules.

9.9 Trading Halts, Suspension, Cancellations and other Powers

9.9.1 An Issuer may request, by notice in writing to NZX in the prescribed form:

(a) that trading in its Quoted Financial Products be halted for a period not to exceed 2 Business Days,

(b) that trading in its Quoted Financial Products be suspended for a period specified in the notice, or

(c) with at least one month's notice, that it will cease to be Listed or that some or all of its Quoted Financial Products will cease to be Quoted.

9.9.2 Upon receipt of a written notice under Rule 9.9.1, NZX may at its discretion accept or reject such applications or impose such conditions as it thinks fit.

9.9.3 NZX may at its absolute discretion at any time, without giving any reasons and without prior notice to the Issuer:

(a) cancel the Listing of any Issuer,

(b) cancel, halt or suspend for such period as NZX thinks fit, the Quotation of any or all of an Issuer's Quoted Financial Products, or

(c) refer the conduct of any Issuer, or Director or Associated Person of anyIssuer, to the Tribunal or any statutory or governmental authority.

9.9.4 Where NZX exercises its power under Rule 9.9.3 without giving prior notice or reasons to the Issuer, it will provide that notice, and the reasons for NZX exercising its powers in that manner, as soon as practicable.

9.9.5 Suspension of Quotation or trading does not release the Issuer from any obligation under the Rules. Cancellation of Listing or Quotation does not release the Issuer from any prior obligations in respect of any period or matter occurring before the cancellation.

Compliance and enforcement

9.10 Contract and Commercial Law Act to Apply

9.10.1 The Rules are enforceable against each Issuer (including any person who has been Listed) for the benefit of every person who is or was a Quoted Financial Product holder over the period that the Issuer is or was Listed, and subpart 1 of Part 2 of the Contract and Commercial Law Act 2017 will apply accordingly.

9.10.2 Nothing in the status of Quoted Financial Product holders as beneficiaries of the Rules under the Contract and Commercial Law Act 2017 will:

(a) entitle them to challenge the right of NZX or the Tribunal to exercise their powers as they think fit, or to challenge any consequences arising from the exercise, or non-exercise, of such powers,

(b) limit the rights of NZX or the Tribunal in respect of the Rules, including their absolute discretion to make Rulings and to change or revoke all or any of the Rules,

(c) entitle any person other than NZX to exercise the rights and powers provided in Rule 9.12,

(d) entitle any person to be given notice of a Ruling, or

(e) entitle any person to take legal action to enforce any provision of the Rules which is subject to a current Ruling except on the basis of and in accordance with that Ruling.

9.11 Compliance by Subsidiaries and in concert parties

9.11.1 Every Issuer must take all steps reasonably practicable to ensure that no Subsidiary or person acting in concert with the Issuer or any of its Subsidiaries does anything that would cause the Issuer to be in breach of the Rules.

9.12 NZX

9.12.1 NZX, the Tribunal and anyone authorised by NZX may:

(a) require the Issuer, or require the Issuer to procure any Director, officer, employee or agent of the Issuer, to:

(i) produce for inspection by NZX any books, papers, registers, records, or accounts (whether hard copy or electronic) held by, or available to, that person, and

(ii) provide written commentary, explanation or responses to questions in relation to any document provided to NZX under (i) above,

(b) inspect, copy or take notes from such documentation,

(c) take physical possession of the information for such time as is reasonable to make copies or records,

(d) require a representative of the Issuer to appear for interview, or

(e) require the Issuer to procure any current, or use reasonable endeavours to procure any former, Director, officer, employee or agent of the Issuer to appear for interview.

9.12.2 Where NZX is exercising its powers under Rule 9.12.1, NZX must deliver on request by the Tribunal, or such other person authorised under Rule 9.12.1, all information obtained under Rule 9.12.1 to the Tribunal or that person.

9.12.3 The Tribunal or authorised person acting under Rule 9.12.1 may provide information obtained from an Issuer to NZX if they consider that it:

(a) should have been made available by the Issuer or otherwise under the Rules, or

(b) discloses some other breach of the Rules.

9.12.4 All information provided to NZX by the Tribunal under Rule 9.12.3 or to NZX under Rule 9.12.1 may be treated in all respects as if it had been supplied by the Issuer in compliance with the Rules, and accordingly fell within Rule 3.30.

9.12.5 Where NZX considers that a breach may have occurred, it may disclose to the Tribunal that information obtained under Rule 9.12.1 which is necessary to establish the fact and nature of the alleged breach and any other relevant facts and circumstances of which it is aware which would support a charge against the Issuer. Such charge will be heard by the Tribunal in accordance with the Tribunal Rules.

9.12.6 Except in accordance with Rule 9.12.2, Rule 9.12.3 or Rule 9.12.5, information obtained by NZX, the Tribunal or any person authorised under Rule 9.12.1 may be disclosed only:

(a) as necessary for the discharge of their functions or the exercise their powers under the Rules,

(b) if disclosure is required by law,

(c) if disclosure is to a solicitor, accountant, or other professional adviser of NZX, the Tribunal or any other person authorised under Rule 9.12.1,

(d) to the NZX Chief Executive and the NZX Board,

(e) to any other person as required or permitted by the FMC Act,

(f) to any other person with whom NZX has a Reciprocal Arrangement in accordance with that Reciprocal Arrangement,

(g) in relation to a NZX Foreign Exempt Issuer, to the Issuer's Home Exchange and the primary financial markets regulator in the jurisdiction of its Home Exchange, or

(h) to any other stock exchange where the Issuer:

(i) is listed (whether or not such stock exchange is the Issuer's Home Exchange), or

(ii) has made an application for listing on such other stock exchange but has not yet been accepted for listing.

9.12.7 A document signed by the RegCo CEO, the Chairperson of the Tribunal or the chairperson of any Division of the Tribunal warranting the appointment of a person to exercise the powers of NZX or the Tribunal is conclusive evidence of the authority thereby warranted. Such a document may be general or specific to the circumstances ofa particular case.

9.12.8 Any exercise by NZX of the powers set out in Rule 9.12.1 will, in the absence of the agreement of the Issuer concerned, require at least one Business Day prior written notice to the Issuer of the intention to exercise the power (which notice may be in a general form) unless NZX has determined that the notice period should not apply in any particular case. The reasons for such determination will be given to the Issuer on request.

9.13 The Tribunal

9.13.1 NZX will appoint the Tribunal which will have the powers, rights and discretions set out in the Tribunal Rules, incorporated by reference into these Rules.

9.14 Liability and Indemnity

9.14.1 To the maximum extent permitted by law, none of NZX, any director or employee of NZX, or any delegate of NZX will be liable in tort, contract or otherwise for any action taken or not taken in the good faith exercise or purported exercise of the powers or discretions conferred by the Rules.

9.14.2 Each Issuer indemnifies NZX, its directors and employees, and all delegates of NZX under the Rules, against liabilities and claims arising from any actions or inactions by any such person in relation to the Issuer, which NZX determines to have been in good faith and in response to circumstances for which the Issuer should bear the responsibility in whole or in part. The indemnity will be for all or such part of the liabilities and claims as NZX determines.

9.15 Delegation to RegCo

9.15.1 NZX may act by and through RegCo in performing any function or discharging any power set out in these Rules. RegCo shall have the authority to exercise any rights, powers, authorities and discretions under any delegated authority granted to it by NZX.

9.16 Costs

9.16.1 An Issuer must pay all costs and expenses sought by NZX, the Tribunal and any person authorised by NZX in the exercise of the functions, rights and powers conferred by the Rules in respect of that Issuer. These payments may include an appropriate proportion of NZX's overhead costs in relation to such matters.

I. LEGAL SYSTEM

§ PH:1 Generally

The Philippines has a democratic and republican system of government,[1] which is divided into three co-equal branches: the executive, the legislature, and the judiciary.

Executive power is vested in the President of the Philippines, who is directly elected by the people for a term of six years.[2] The President is assisted by a Vice-President and by a Cabinet appointed by the President.[3]

Legislative power is vested in the Congress of the Philippines, a bicameral body.[4] The Senate, the upper house, is composed of 24 senators,[5] while the lower House of Representatives is composed of not more than 250 members.[6]

Judicial power is exercised by the Supreme Court and the lower courts established by law.[7] The Philippines has no jury system.

Judicial decisions applying or interpreting the laws or the Constitution form part of the law of the land.[8] This case law based on stare decisis is essentially the common law component of the legal system. The other component is civil law based on codes and statutes. The Philippine legal system is, therefore, a mixture of civil law and common law. This is not surprising, because the Philippines was a colony of Spain for more than four centuries, and then of the United States for half a century.

II. SECURITIES REGULATORY SCHEME

§ PH:2 General

Act No. 2581, also known as the Blue Sky Law and passed in 1916, was the first securities legislation in the country.[1] In 1936, it was repealed by Commonwealth Act No. 83, the original Securities Act in the Philippines.[2] This was substantially a composite of two federal laws in the United States (namely, the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934) as well as the Uniform Sale of Securities Act drafted by the Conference of Commissioners of Uniform State Laws of the United States.[3] Commonwealth Act No. 83 also created the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) as the body to safeguard the interests of the investing public.

It was not until 1982 that Commonwealth Act No. 83 was repealed by Batas Pambansa Blg. 178, also known as the Revised Securities Act. Eighteen years later, the Revised Securities Act was in turn repealed by the Securities Regulation Code (SRC), which became effective on August 8, 2000.

[Section PH:2]

[1]Act No. 2581 was patterned after similar laws in various states of the United States and directed against speculative schemes that had no more basis than a few feet of the blue sky (People vs. Fernandez, 65 Phil. 675, 679 [1938]).

[2]The mining boom of the 1930s provided occasions for glib-tongued operators to dupe and dump naive investors. To prevent the repetition of these events, the Congress of the Philippines passed Commonwealth Act No. 83 (see Jose C. Campos, Jr. and Maria Clara Lopez-Campos, Notes and Selected Cases on Corporation Law (Community Publishers, Inc., 1969) at 1066).

§ PH:3 The Securities Regulation Code

There is continuity in the regulatory thrust of the securities laws in the country, notably from Commonwealth Act No. 83 down to the SRC. Basically, there are four salient features aimed at protecting the investing public: (1) the registration of securities, (2) the registration of securities brokers, dealers, and other securities market professionals, (3) the registration of exchanges and other trading markets, and (4) trading regulation.[1]

Essentially, the SRC strengthened further the foregoing regulatory structure, in line with the state policies declared in SRC Section 2, namely, to "establish a socially conscious, free market that regulates itself, encourage the widest participation of ownership in enterprises, enhance the democratization of wealth, promote the development of the capital market, protect investors, ensure full and fair disclosure about securities, minimize if not totally eliminate insider trading and other fraudulent or manipulative devices and practices which create distortions in the free market." This declaration of state policies is the guiding principle in understanding the provisions of the SRC and its implementing rules. Any doubt in the interpretation of the SRC Rules will be resolved by the SEC in a manner that will uphold those state policies.[2]

§ PH:4 Administrative agencies in securities regulation

The SEC is the administrator and watchdog of the SRC. Established in 1936 pursuant to Commonwealth Act No. 83, the SEC is the oldest securities regulatory body in Asia. It has four principal departments each of which is headed by a director. Its core function of regulating the capital market has been assigned to the Markets and Securities Regulation Department, and the Corporation Governance and Finance Department. In turn, the SEC's company registration and enforcement functions are performed respectively by the Company Registration and Monitoring Department and the Enforcement and Investor Protection Department. In addition, the SEC has four support departments (namely, the Human Resource and Administrative Department, the Economic Research and Training Department, the Information and Communications Technology Department, and the Financial Management Department) and three special offices (the Office of the Commission Secretary, the Office of the General Counsel, and the Office of the General Accountant). Four more departments appear in the latest organizational structure of the SEC: the Financing and Lending Companies Department, the Financial Analysis and Audit Department, the External Affairs Department, and the Management Services Department.

To a certain extent, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP), the country's central monetary authority, is also involved in securities regulation particularly in relation to banks and quasi-banks. Moreover, the BSP is authorized to prescribe rules on margin trading.[1]

§ PH:5 Self-regulatory organizations

In lieu of direct regulation by the SEC of exchanges and other securities-related organizations, the SRC authorizes the formation of self-regulatory organizations (SROs). Under this set-up, the SEC allows self-regulation of those organizations and steps in only if the SROs are unable to perform their functions.

III. PUBLIC SECURITIES MARKET

§ PH:6 Generally

The Philippine Stock Exchange (PSE), which is an SRO, is the principal market for the purchase and sale of equity securities.

One other exchange and SRO is the Philippine Dealing & Exchange Corp. (PDEx) on which fixed-income debt securities are traded. PDEx aims to play a key role in the development of the local capital market by providing an online inter-dealer platform for the secondary trading of Philippine government securities.

In the Philippines, there is a tax disincentive to trading listed securities off the PSE. Under the amended National Internal Revenue Code of 1997, the tax on the sale or disposition of shares of stock listed and traded through the PSE (other than the sale by a dealer in securities) is 0.10% of the gross selling price or gross value in money of the shares sold or disposed. However, the net capital gain from the sale or disposition of shares of stock not traded through the PSE is subject to a 15% tax. Moreover, there is no documentary stamp tax on the sale, barter or exchange of shares of stock listed and traded through the PSE.[1]

IV. REGULATIONS REGARDING SUBSTANTIVE SECURITIES MATTERS

§ PH:7 Establishment, regulation, and organization of securities regulatory organization—Securities and Exchange Commission

The SEC is a collegial body, composed of a Chairperson and four Commissioners, all appointed by the President of the Philippines for a term of seven years.[1] The Chairperson is the chief executive officer of the SEC.[2] The SEC administers and implements the provisions of the SRC.[3]

§ PH:8 Definition of securities

SRC Subsection 3.1 defines the term "securities" as "shares, participation or interests in a corporation or in a commercial enterprise or profit-making venture and evidenced by a certificate, contract, instrument, whether written or electronic in character." The term "securities" also includes:

(a) Shares of stock, bonds, debentures, notes, evidences of indebtedness, asset-backed securities;

(b) Investment contracts, certificates of interest or participation in a profit sharing agreement, certificates of deposit for a future subscription;

(c) Fractional undivided interests in oil, gas or other mineral rights;

(d) Derivatives like options and warrants;

(e) Certificates of assignments, certificates of participation, trust certificates, voting trust certificates or similar instruments;

(f) Proprietary or nonproprietary membership certificates in corporations; and

(g) Other instruments as may in the future be determined by the SEC.

§ PH:9 Public offerings and exempt offerings—General

The SRC is a "truth-in-securities law," because its aim, according to the state policy declared in SRC Section 2, is to "ensure full and fair disclosure [of information] about securities," with a view to enabling the public to make an informed investment decision in respect of the securities offered for sale. The principal device to ferret out the truth is the registration of such securities (absent any exemption) with the SEC. This is sought to be accomplished by the issuer's filing of a registration statement (including a prospectus) with the SEC.

Section 8 is the centerpiece of the disclosure philosophy under the

[Section PH:7]

[3]It is well to note that there are special laws administered by the SEC and which govern the registration of certain securities. For instance, the Investment Company Act (Republic Act No. 2629) also governs the registration of shares of closed-end companies, as well as open-end ones or mutual funds. On the other hand, asset-backed securities are to be registered pursuant to the Securitization Act of 2004 (Republic Act No. 9267).

SRC. It prohibits the sale or offer for sale of securities to the public within the Philippines, unless a registration statement is duly filed with and approved by the SEC. This rule is especially true during the pre-filing period, which is the period when the issuer is contemplating a public offering of its securities within the Philippines, but prior to the filing of the registration statement with the SEC. During this period, it is unlawful to sell or offer to sell securities.

After the filing of the registration statement but before the same has been declared effective by the SEC, it is still unlawful to sell or offer to sell the securities. However, during this waiting or pre-offering period, certain information on the securities (in such form and substance prescribed by the SEC) may already be made available to prospective purchasers, who may, in turn, indicate their interest in the proposed offering.

It is only after the registration statement has been declared effective by the SEC that the securities may be sold or offered for sale to the public within the Philippines. This is the offering period.

Registration is not necessary in the case of exempt securities,[1] or where the securities are sold in exempt transactions.[2] These exempt securities may be sold and resold, without being subject to registration under the SRC. Essentially, they are exempt because they are either issued by (i) the Philippine government,[3] (ii) a foreign government with which the Philippines maintains diplomatic relations,[4] or (iii) a local agency or entity already being supervised by a government agency other than the SEC, such as the BSP or the Insurance Commission.[5]

Apart from exempt securities, securities sold in "exempt transactions" are not covered by the registration requirement under the SRC. However, unlike exempt securities, which can be sold and resold and never be subject to registration, exempt transactions do not make the securities in question continuously registration-free. In other words, if only the transaction is exempt, then the initial sale of the securities may be exempt but a subsequent resale of the same securities may no longer be exempt from registration. Under SRC Rule 10.1.1, the SEC requires that a written disclosure be provided to any offeree, informing him of the provision of SRC Subsection 10.1 under which exemption from registration is claimed, and containing the following legend in bold face, prominent type:

THE SECURITIES BEING OFFERED OR SOLD HEREIN HAVE NOT BEEN REGISTERED WITH THE SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION UNDER THE SECURITIES REGULATION CODE. ANY FUTURE OFFER OR SALE OF THE SECURITIES IS SUBJECT TO REGISTRATION REQUIREMENTS UNDER THE CODE UNLESS SUCH OFFER OR SALE QUALIFIES AS AN EXEMPT TRANSACTION

The second sentence of this legend confirms that only the present transaction is exempt from the registration requirement and a future offer or sale of the securities in question must itself qualify as an exempt transaction so that it will not be subject to registration.

There is reason to resort to an exempt transaction if available. Considering that the registration process is expensive and time-consuming, and may itself give rise to liability to purchasers of the registered securities if the registration statement contains any material misstatement or omission, it may be advisable or desirable to proceed under an available exemption from the registration requirement.

A more detailed list of exempt securities and exempt transactions under the SRC is set forth below.

A. Exempt Securities

(a) Any security issued or guaranteed by the government of the Philippines, or by any political subdivision or agency thereof, or by any person controlled or supervised by, and acting as an instrumentality of the said government.

(b) Any security issued or guaranteed by the government of any country with which the Philippines maintains diplomatic relations, or by any state, province or political subdivision thereof on the basis of reciprocity; provided, that the SEC may require compliance with the form and content of disclosures that the SEC may prescribe.

(c) Certificates issued by a receiver or by a trustee in bankruptcy duly approved by the proper adjudicatory body.

(d) Any security or its derivatives the sale or transfer of which, by law, is under the supervision and regulation of the Insurance Commission, Housing and Land Use Regulatory Board, or the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

(e) Any security issued by a bank (or a quasi-bank) except its own shares of stock.

B. Exempt Transactions

(a) Any judicial sale, or sale by an executor, administrator, guardian or receiver or trustee in insolvency or bankruptcy.

(b) By or for the account of a pledge holder, or mortgagee or any other similar lien holder selling or offering for sale or delivery in the ordinary course of business and not for the purpose of avoiding the provisions of the SRC, to liquidate a bona fide debt, a security pledged in good faith as security for such debt.

(c) An isolated transaction in which any security is sold, offered for sale, subscription or delivery by the owner thereof, or by his representative for the owner's account, such sale or offer for sale, subscription or delivery not being made in the course of repeated and successive transactions of a like character by such owner, or on his account by such representative and such owner or representative not being the underwriter of such security.

(d) The distribution by a corporation, actively engaged in the business authorized by its articles of incorporation, of securities to its stockholders or other security holders as a stock dividend or other distribution out of surplus.

(e) The sale of capital stock of a corporation to its own stockholders exclusively, where no commission or other remuneration is paid or given directly or indirectly in connection with the sale of such capital stock.

(f) The issuance of bonds or notes secured by mortgage upon real estate or tangible personal property, where the entire mortgage together with all the bonds or notes secured thereby are sold to a single purchaser at a single sale.

(g) The issue and delivery of any security in exchange for any other security of the same issuer pursuant to a right of conversion entitling the holder of the security surrendered in exchange to make such conversion; provided, that the security so surrendered has been registered under the SRC or was, when sold, exempt from the provisions of the SRC, and that the security issued and delivered in exchange, if sold at the conversion price, would at the time of such conversion fall within the class of securities entitled to registration under the SRC. Upon such conversion the par value of the security surrendered in such exchange will be deemed the price at which the securities issued and delivered in such exchange are sold.

(h) Broker's transactions, executed upon customer's orders, on any registered exchange or other trading market.

(i) Subscriptions for shares of the capital stock of a corporation prior to the incorporation thereof or in pursuance of an increase in its authorized capital stock under the Revised Corporation Code, when no expense is incurred, or no commission, compensation or remuneration is paid or given in connection with the sale or disposition of such securities, and only when the purpose for soliciting, giving or taking of such subscriptions is to comply with the requirements of such law as to the percentage of the capital stock of a corporation which must be subscribed before it can be registered and duly incorporated, or its authorized capital increased.

(j) The exchange of securities by the issuer with its existing security holders exclusively, where no commission or other remuneration is paid or given directly or indirectly for soliciting such exchange.

(k) Private placement, i.e., the sale of securities by an issuer to fewer than 20 persons, who are not qualified buyers, during any 12-month period.

(l) The sale of securities to any number of the following qualified buyers: (i) bank; (ii) registered investment house; (iii) insurance company; (iv) pension fund or retirement plan maintained by the government of the Philippines or any political subdivision thereof or managed by a bank or a trust entity; (v) investment company; or (vi) such other persons as the SEC may by rule determine as qualified buyers, on the basis of such factors as financial sophistication, net worth, knowledge, and experience in financial and business matters, or amount of assets under management.[6]

A notice of exemption under SEC Form 10-1 is required in respect of private placements and sales to qualified buyers. It must be filed with the SEC, within ten days after the sale of the securities.

The SEC may designate additional exempt securities if it finds that the enforcement of the SRC with respect to such securities is not necessary in the public interest and for the protection of investors.[7] Similarly, the SEC may exempt other transactions, if it finds that the requirement of registration under the SRC is not necessary in the public interest or for the protection of the investors such as by reason of the small amount involved or the limited character of the public offering.[8]

Exempt securities and those sold in exempt transactions are excluded only from the registration requirements. Their purchase and sale are not exempt from the antifraud, civil liability, and other provisions of the SRC, including those on SEC reportorial requirements.

It must be noted that the thrust of the registration requirement under the SRC is directed at the sale or offering of securities to the public within the Philippines, consistent with the principle that local laws and rules do not have extraterritorial application. Accordingly, if [6]Under SRC Rule 10.1.11, category (l) may be a "qualified individual buyer" or a "qualified institutional buyer." A qualified individual buyer is a natural person who, at the time of his or her registration with a registrar of qualified buyers, (a) has a minimum annual gross income of P10,000,000 for at least two years prior to such registration; or a total portfolio investment in securities registered with the SEC of at least P10,000,000; or a personal net worth of not less than P30,000,000, and (b) has been engaged in securities trading, in his or her personal capacity or through a fund manager, for a period of one year; or held for at least two years, in any professional or business entity, a position of responsibility that requires knowledge or expertise in securities trading (such as legal consultant, financial adviser, sales person or associated person of a broker-dealer, or finance, treasury or trust officer of a bank or other similar executive officers). On the other hand, a qualified institutional buyer is a juridical person that, at the time of its registration with a registrar of qualified buyers, (a) has a minimum annual gross assets of at least P100,000,000 for at least two years prior to registration; or (b) a total portfolio investment in securities registered with the SEC of at least P60,000,000. Under SEC Memorandum Circular No. 3 (Series of 2008), the authorized registrars of qualified buyers are banks (with respect to their registration as broker-dealer, Government Securities Eligible Dealer and/or underwriter of securities), brokers, dealers, investment houses, investment company advisers, and issuer companies (with respect to offerings of their own securities).

the sale or offering of securities were made outside of the Philippines, then the SRC would not apply.

§ PH:10 Public offerings and exempt offerings—Registration statement

Set forth below are certain procedural aspects of the registration of securities under the SRC:

1. Filing of Registration Statement (SEC Form 12-1)—The issuer of the securities (no one else) must file with the SEC's main office a sworn registration statement using SEC Form 12-1, including (i) a preliminary prospectus; (ii) a duly verified resolution of the issuer's board of directors authorizing the issuance and registration of the securities; (iii) the written consent of any expert named as having certified any part of the registration statement or any document used in connection therewith; and (iv) in case the offering includes shares of existing shareholders, a written certification of such shareholders as to the accuracy of any part of the registration statement contributed by such shareholders. The registration statement must be signed by the issuer's executive officer, principal operating officer, principal financial officer, comptroller, principal accounting officer, and corporate secretary (or persons performing similar functions).[1] If the securities subject of the registration statement are intended to be listed on an exchange, a copy of the registration statement and all other pertinent documents (including amendments thereto) must be filed with that exchange. Two copies of the listing application must also be filed with the SEC.[2]

2. Payment of Filing Fee—The issuer pays to the SEC a filing fee of not more than 1/10 of 1% of the maximum aggregate price at which the securities are to be offered to the public.[3]

3. Publication of Notice—A notice of the filing of the registration statement must be immediately published by the issuer, at its own expense, once a week for two consecutive weeks, in two newspapers of general circulation. The notice must state that the filed registration statement (together with its attachments) is open to inspection at the SEC during business hours, and copies thereof may be given to interested parties at reasonable charge.[4]

4. Declaration of Effectivity—If the SEC finds an unamended registration statement and its attachments to be complete and compliant with SEC requirements, the SEC will enter an order declaring the registration statement to be effective, subject to such terms and conditions as the SEC may impose for the protection of the investors. The SEC is to decide within 45 days from the date of filing of the registration statement, or such later date to which the issuer has consented.[5]

5. Issuer's Oath—Upon the effectivity of the registration statement, the issuer must state under oath in every prospectus that all registration requirements have been satisfied and all information in the registration statement and the prospectus are true and correct.[6]

6. Sale of Securities—The sale of the securities must be commenced within ten business days from the date of the effectivity of the registration statement and continued until the end of the offering period or until the sale is terminated by action of the issuer. If the sale is not commenced within that period, the registration statement will be cancelled and all fees paid thereon forfeited.[7]

7. Notice of Offering Completion or Termination—Within three business days from the completion or termination of the offering, a written notice thereof (with an indication of the number of securities sold) must be filed by the registrant with the SEC.[8]

8. Shelf Registration—Securities may be registered for an offering to be made on a continuous or delayed basis in the future, for a period not exceeding five years from the effective date of the registration statement, subject to certain requirements.[9]

The SEC promulgated its Memorandum Circular No. 14 (Series of 2019), which governs the operation and use of equity-based and lending-based crowdfunding by registered persons such as brokers, investment houses and funding portals, as well as issuers and investors participating in crowdfunding through an online platform. Crowdfunding is defined by the SEC as "the offer or sale of securities of a limited scale usually for start-ups, micro, small and medium enterprises (MSMEs) done through an online electronic platform." Crowdfunding through means or a medium other than an online electronic platform is not covered by the Memorandum Circular but will be subject to the usual requirements under the SRC.

The SEC's Enforcement and Investor Protection Department issued an Advisory on initial coin offerings (ICOs) in respect of virtual currencies or cryptocurrencies that can be classified as investment contracts under the SRC.

The regulatory approach to digital assets in the Philippines continues to develop alongside innovations in financial technology and evolving market practices. The SEC has maintained its position that certain digital tokens, including those issued through ICOs, may be classified as securities where they meet the characteristics of an investment contract under the SRC, applying principles analogous to the Howey Test in the United States. In such instances, issuers are required to register the offering with the SEC unless an exemption is available, and intermediaries may be subject to licensing and compliance requirements.

The SEC has also issued draft rules on Digital Asset Exchanges and ICOs, proposing a regulatory framework that would require the registration of platforms facilitating the trading of digital assets that qualify as securities. While these rules remain in draft form, they reflect the SEC's intent to establish a comprehensive regime governing the issuance, trading, and custody of digital assets.

Concurrently, the BSP regulates virtual asset service providers or VASPs, particularly with respect to anti-money laundering, counter-terrorism financing, and operational risk management. The BSP strengthened the regulatory framework by imposing licensing requirements and enhanced compliance obligations on entities engaged in virtual asset activities.

Recent regulatory actions indicate increased scrutiny over crypto-related activities, including advisories against unregistered investment schemes and coordination with law enforcement agencies to address fraudulent practices. The Philippine approach remains functional and risk-based, relying on existing regulatory frameworks to address the multifaceted nature of digital assets.

In line with global trends in sustainable finance, the SEC has enhanced its framework on Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) disclosures. In 2024, the SEC introduced updated sustainability reporting guidelines applicable to publicly listed companies, requiring more comprehensive and standardized disclosures of ESG risks, governance structures, and performance metrics.

These requirements align Philippine disclosure practices with internationally recognized standards, including those developed by the International Sustainability Standards Board (ISSB) and the Global Reporting Initiative (GRI). Companies are expected to identify and disclose material ESG factors, including climate-related risks and opportunities, thereby improving transparency and enabling more informed investment decisions. This initiative reflects the SEC's recognition of the growing importance of ESG considerations in capital markets and aims to enhance comparability, accountability, and investor confidence. It also supports the broader objective of integrating the Philippine capital markets into the global sustainable finance ecosystem.

Complementing these disclosure initiatives, the Philippines has actively participated in regional sustainable finance efforts through the adoption of the ASEAN Green Bond Standards (ASEAN GBS), developed by the ASEAN Capital Markets Forum. The ASEAN GBS provide a harmonized framework for the issuance of green bonds across ASEAN member states and are largely based on the Green Bond Principles of the International Capital Market Association, with additional safeguards tailored to regional priorities. Under this framework, green bonds are defined as debt securities whose proceeds are exclusively used to finance or refinance eligible environmentally beneficial projects, such as renewable energy, energy efficiency, pollution control, sustainable water management, clean transportation, and climate change adaptation. The standards are structured around core principles relating to the use of proceeds, project evaluation and selection, management of proceeds, and ongoing reporting, and are designed to ensure transparency and prevent greenwashing, including through the exclusion of fossil fuel-related activities. The SEC adopted the ASEAN GBS through its Guidelines on the Issuance of Green Bonds, thereby integrating the regional framework into the domestic regulatory regime and enabling Philippine issuers to access global pools of sustainable capital.

The adoption of the ASEAN Cross-Border Offering Framework by the SEC represents a key milestone in regional capital market integration. The framework facilitates the cross-border offering of qualified collective investment schemes among participating ASEAN jurisdictions, subject to a streamlined authorization process. Under this regime, fund managers in a home jurisdiction may offer their funds in host jurisdictions, including the Philippines, provided that they comply with harmonized standards relating to disclosure, governance, and investor protection. The SEC, acting as host regulator, relies in part on the supervision exercised by the home regulator while ensuring compliance with local requirements. This framework enhances efficiency in fund distribution, broadens investor access to diversified investment products, and promotes the development of the regional asset management industry. It also strengthens regulatory cooperation and contributes to the long-term goal of ASEAN capital market harmonization.

The SEC's issuance of Memorandum Circular No. 12, Series of 2026 establishes a regulatory framework for the issuance and disclosure of Sukuk, or Shariah-compliant bonds, marking a significant development in the diversification of the Philippine capital markets. Sukuk are defined as certificates representing proportional ownership or beneficial interests in underlying assets, usufructs, or investment activities structured in accordance with Islamic law. Unlike conventional debt securities, Sukuk are structured to comply with Shariah principles, typically involving asset-based or asset-backed arrangements rather than interest-bearing obligations.

The Memorandum Circular implements policy objectives under the Islamic Banking Act of 2019 and aligns the Philippine regulatory regime with international Islamic finance standards. It prescribes registration requirements, disclosure obligations, and continuing compliance standards applicable to Sukuk issuers, including corporations and special purpose entities. Key elements of the framework include requirements for Shariah compliance and governance, enhanced transparency in disclosure of transaction structures and risks, and regulatory treatment broadly consistent with conventional securities offerings under the SRC. The framework is also designed to facilitate both domestic and cross-border issuances, thereby expanding funding sources and attracting participation from global Islamic finance markets. The introduction of Sukuk regulations underscores the SEC's broader strategy of fostering innovation, inclusivity, and internationalization in the Philippine capital markets.

§ PH:11 Public offerings and exempt offerings—Restrictions on advertising and other publicity

Under SRC Rule 24.1(d), all communications by broker dealers or associated persons or salesmen of broker dealers (hereinafter "registered persons"), with the public must be based on principles of fair dealing and good faith and should provide a sound basis for evaluating the facts in regard to any particular security or securities or type of security, industry discussed, or service offered. No material fact or qualification must be omitted if the omission, in the light of the context of the material presented, would cause the advertising or sales literature to be misleading.[1]

Exaggerated, unwarranted or misleading statements or claims are prohibited in all public communications of registered persons. In preparing such literature, it must be borne in mind by registered persons that inherent in investment are the risks of fluctuating prices and the uncertainty of dividends, rates of return and yield, and no registered person is to, directly or indirectly, publish, circulate or distribute any public communication that he knows, or had reason to know, contains any untrue statement of a material fact or is otherwise false or misleading.[2]

Communications with the public must not contain promises of specific results, exaggerated or unwarranted claims, or unwarranted superlatives, unfounded opinions for which there is no basis, or forecasts of future events which are unwarranted, or which are not clearly labeled as forecasts.[3]

No broker dealer, or associated person or salesman of a broker dealer, can publish or circulate, or cause to be published or circulated, any notice, circular, advertisement, newspaper article, investment service, or communication of any kind that purports to report any transaction as a purchase or sale of any security, unless he believes that such transaction was a bona fide purchase or sale of such security; or that it purports to quote the bid price or asked price for any security, unless he believes that such quotation represents a bona fide bid for, or offer of, such security.[4]

No broker dealer is to, directly or indirectly, give, permit to be given, or offer to give, anything of value to any person for the purpose of influencing or rewarding the action of such person in connection with the publication or circulation in any newspaper, investment service, or similar publication, of any matter which has, or is intended to have, an effect upon the market price of any security, provided that this rule will not be construed to apply to a matter which is clearly identifiable as paid advertising.[5]

§ PH:12 Ongoing disclosure requirements of public companies

Chapter V of the SRC subjects to periodic reporting obligations a company whose securities are publicly traded. A company becomes subject to these requirements either (i) by having a class of securities listed on an exchange, or (ii) by having both (x) a class of equity securities held by not less than 200 persons each holding at least 100 shares and (y) assets in excess of P50,000,000.00, or (iii) by selling securities to the public pursuant to a registration statement. Company (i), (ii) or (iii) is known as a "reporting company."[1] Company (i) or (ii) is also known as a "public company."[2]

The continuing reporting requirements are pursuant to the state policies declared in SRC Section 2 of protecting investors and ensuring full and fair disclosure of information about securities and, for that matter, their issuer.

In a nutshell, there are two types of continuing disclosure requirements: structured and unstructured. Structured continuing disclosure requirements mainly consist of the annual report to stockholders on SEC Form 17-A and the quarterly reports on SEC Form 17-Q. Unstructured continuing disclosures are the communications to the investing public on SEC Form 17-C of material corporate developments as they occur. For example, the following events are to be promptly disclosed to the SEC and the PSE in case of listed shares: changes in the company's corporate purpose, resignation or removal of officers or senior management and their replacements, loss of a significant part of the company's net worth, dissolution, creation of mortgages or pledges on assets comprising a significant part of the company's net worth, merger or consolidation, holding of stockholders' meeting, tender officer, significant borrowing, etc.

§ PH:13 Ongoing disclosure requirements of public companies—Disclosure of interest in shares

Persons acquiring beneficial ownership of 5% of any class of equity securities of a reporting company must file a report on Form 18-A to the SEC, the issuer and the exchange concerned, within five business days after acquisition.[1] In certain cases, a short-form report on SEC Form 18-AS may be filed in lieu of SEC Form 18-A.

Similarly, a person acquiring 10% or more of any class of equity securities of a reporting company will, as a "principal stockholder," be required to file a report with the SEC and the exchange concerned, using SEC Form 23-A, within ten calendar days after becoming a principal stockholder.[2]

§ PH:14 Ongoing disclosure requirements of public companies—Proxy solicitation

In the area of proxy solicitation, the thrust is to foster and facilitate democracy in public companies by requiring an extensive disclosure of information to the stockholders, in the form of an "information statement" (using SEC Form 20-IS) and a management report. The aim is to enable the stockholders to make an informed decision on whom to give their proxies.

A broker or dealer, acting as proxy for at least 10% of the outstanding shares of a reporting company, must submit a report identifying the beneficial owners of such shares, within ten days from the receipt of the proxy or proxies for its own account or the account of its customers.[1]

§ PH:15 Ongoing disclosure requirements of public companies—Penalties for non-compliance with disclosure requirements

Under SRC Subsection 57.2, any person, who has made or caused to be made any false or misleading statements with regard to a material fact in any report or document filed pursuant to the SRC or the SRC Rules, is liable for damages to one who, relying upon such statements and not knowing them to be false or misleading, has purchased or sold securities at a price affected by such statements. The person sued, however, can avoid liability by proving that he acted in good faith and did not know that such statements were false or misleading.

The above cause of action is available to any investor who, after having read the material misstatements or omissions of fact in the document filed pursuant to the SRC and not knowing them to be false or misleading, actually relies upon them and is thereby injured.

SRC Subsection 57.2 not only imposes liability upon the issuer filing the document but also upon "any person who shall make or cause to be made" any misstatement or omission in "any report or document filed pursuant to [the SRC] or any rule or regulation thereunder." This means that liability will extend to the responsible officers and directors of the issuer, especially those signing the filed documents.

An action for damages may be brought by the plaintiff, within two years from the discovery of the untruth or omission.[1]

The penalties for violation of any provision of the SRC or the SRC Rules (including the making of any untrue statement of a material fact in a registration statement filed under the SRC, or omitting to state any material fact required to be stated in such registration statement) are a fine and/or imprisonment. The fine is at least P50,000.00 but not more than P5,000,000.00, while the prison term is at least 7 years but not more than 21 years. It is up to the court whether to impose both penalties or only one of them. If the offender is a corporation, partnership, or other juridical entity, the penalty may be imposed upon the officer or officers responsible for the violation. If such an officer is an alien, he will be deported after serving his sentence.[2]

Apart from criminal liabilities, the SRC provides for civil liabilities, such as for false registration statement, prospectus, communication or report, as well as for fraud in connection with securities transactions and manipulation of security prices, including insider trading.

The court is authorized to award actual damages up to triple the amount of the transaction plus actual damages. Exemplary damages may also be awarded in cases of bad faith, fraud, malevolence or wantonness in the violation of the SRC and its rules. Further, the court may grant attorney's fees up to 30% of the award.[3]

§ PH:16 Fraud, manipulation and insider trading—Insider trading

"Insider" means: "(a) the issuer; (b) a director or officer (or person performing similar functions) of, or a person controlling the issuer; (c) a person whose relationship or former relationship to the issuer gives or gave him access to material information about the issuer or the security that is not generally available to the public; (d) a government employee, or director, or officer of an exchange, clearing agency and/or self-regulatory organization who has access to material information about an issuer or a security that is not generally available to the public; or (e) a person who learns such information by a communication from any of the foregoing insiders."[1]

The SRC obligates insiders to disclose to the public material information about the securities of the issuer or the issuer itself, with a view to preventing the unfair use of such information by such insiders, who could exploit the same to make a profit or avoid a loss by dealing in the securities whose price would have been materially altered had the information been disclosed in the first place. To forestall such unfairness and maintain investors' confidence in the market, access to material information about the issuer and its securities must be symmetrical, that is to say, such information must be available to the public not just to insiders. Thus, as succinctly put by the heading of SRC Section 27, an insider has a "duty to disclose when trading;" otherwise, he may be guilty of "insider trading." More to the point, SRC Subsection 27.1 declares that it is unlawful for an insider to sell or buy securities of the issuer, while in possession of material information not known to or by the public, or what is simply called "material nonpublic information" (as defined in SRC Subsection 27.2), unless (a) such insider proves that such information was not gained from his relationship with the issuer (e.g., the information is generally available to the public), or (b) if the other party selling to or buying from the insider (or his agent) is identified, the insider proves that (i) he disclosed the information to the other party, or (ii) he had reason to believe that the other party otherwise was also in possession of the information.

It is not sufficient that the material information has been disclosed to the public. That information is still deemed "nonpublic" after disclosure, until the lapse of a reasonable time for the market to absorb such information.

Any purchase or sale of securities made by an insider (including such insider's spouse or relatives by affinity or consanguinity within the second degree, legitimate or common-law), during the period from the time the material information came into existence up to its disclosure and the lapse of a reasonable time for the market to absorb it, will be presumed to be an "insider trading" prohibited under SRC Subsection 27.1. This presumption shifts the burden of proof to the insider. It is up to the insider (as purchaser or seller) to rebut the presumption by showing that such insider "was not aware of the material nonpublic information at the time of the purchase or sale."[2]

Assuming that there is proper disclosure of the material information to the public, an insider can buy or sell the securities in question, subject to the possible application of (a) the reporting requirements under SRC Subsection 23.1; (b) the "short-swing profit" provisions of SRC Subsection 23.2 (as qualified by SRC Subsection 23.4); and (c)

[Section PH:16]

the provisions of SRC Subsection 23.3 (as qualified by SRC Subsection 23.4) on "short sales" and "sales against the box."

Under SRC Subsection 27.2, the fact or information is required only to be "material nonpublic." As defined therein, it is sufficient if the information, "after being disseminated to the public and the lapse of a reasonable time for the public to absorb the information," would "likely affect the market price of the security."

The recipient (or the "tippee") of material nonpublic information about an issuer or a security becomes an insider himself under SRC Subsection 3.8(e). The insider communicating such information (or the "tipper") in turn violates SRC Subsection 27.3, if he knows or has reason to believe that the tippee will likely buy or sell such security while in possession of such information. If, in fact, the tippee buys or sells such security, the tippee violates SRC Subsection 27.1 and may be sued by any investor who contemporaneously purchased or sold the same class of securities, unless the tippee proves that such investor knew the information or would have purchased or sold at the same price regardless of disclosure of the information to such investor.[3] The tipper will be jointly and liable with, and to the same extent as, the tippee.[4]

SRC Subsection 23.2 covers the so-called "short-swing profit." Any profit made by a director, an officer, or a 10% beneficial owner (hence, principal stockholder) of a reporting company, in the purchase and sale, or sale and purchase, of an equity security of such company, within any period of less than six months, belongs to such company, as the issuer. In the language of SRC Subsection 23.2, this is "for the purpose of preventing the unfair use of information which may have been obtained by such beneficial owner, director, or officer by reason of his relationship to the issuer." It is not required that there be "insider trading" as contemplated by SRC Section 27. It is sufficient that there be a purchase and sale, or sale and purchase, of an equity security within a period of less than six months. It is immaterial that there be an intention to hold the security purchased for more than six months, or not to repurchase the security sold for a period exceeding six months.

§ PH:17 Fraud, manipulation and insider trading—Insider trading—Penalties for insider trading

The criminal penalties for insider trading are a fine and/or imprisonment. The fine is at least P50,000.00 but not more than P5,000,000.00, while the prison term is at least 7 years but not more than 21 years. It is up to the court whether to impose both penalties or only one of them. If the offender is a corporation, partnership, or other juridical entity, the penalty may be imposed upon the officer or officers responsible for the violation. If such an officer is an alien, he will be deported after serving his sentence.[1]

SRC Subsection 61.1 authorizes a civil action by any investor against an insider who violates SRC Subsection 27.1 by purchasing or selling securities while in possession of a material nonpublic information. A civil action may also be brought by any investor against any person (other than the tender offeror) who violates SRC Subsection 27.4(a)(i), by purchasing or selling securities sought by a tender offer that has commenced or is about to commence, while in possession of a material nonpublic information relating to such tender offer. In either case, the suing investor must be able to show that he contemporaneously purchased or sold the same class of securities. However, the civil suit would not prosper if it could be proven that such investor knew the information or would have, in any case, purchased or sold the securities at the same price whether or not the information was disclosed to him.

The court is authorized to award damages up to thrice the transaction amount plus actual damages, as well as exemplary damages in case of bad faith, fraud, malevolence or wantonness in the violation of the rules on insider trading. Further, attorney's fees of up to 30% may be awarded.[2]

If the material nonpublic information was communicated in violation of SRC Subsection 27.3 or 27.4(a), the communicator would be jointly and severally liable with the information recipient who purchased or sold the securities in question in violation of SRC Subsection 61.1. According to the SEC: "Because there could be hundreds of thousands of investors trading contemporaneously in an active market, Subsection 61.2 limits the liability of an insider to the amount of profit derived or loss avoided on his transaction . . . Similar liability is imposed upon persons trading on, or communicating non-public information in connection with, a tender offer."[3]

§ PH:18 Fraud, manipulation and insider trading—Manipulation of security prices

The manipulation of security prices such as through the following means is prohibited:[1]

- Creation of a false or misleading appearance of active trading in a listed security.

- Trading activities that raise the price of a security to induce its purchase or depress the price of a security to induce its sale.

- Manipulative devices such as marking the close, painting the tape, squeezing the float, hype and dump, and boiler room operations.

- Making a false or misleading statement with respect to a material fact in order to induce the purchase of sale of a listed security if the person knew or had reason to believe the statement was false or misleading.

- Effecting a series of transactions for the purpose of pegging, fixing or stabilizing the price of a security trading on an exchange, except as allowed by the SRC or the SRC Rules.

A member of an exchange may not guarantee the performance of a put, call, straddle, option or privilege in relation to a listed security.[2]

A short sale may only be effected or a stop-loss order executed in connection with the purchase or sale of a security in accordance with the SRC Rules.[3]

§ PH:19 Fraud, manipulation and insider trading—Short-selling

The term "short sale" is defined in SRC Rule 24.2-2.1 as "any sale of a security which the seller does not own or any sale which is consummated by the delivery of a security borrowed by, or for the account of the seller with the commitment of the seller or securities borrower to return or deliver said securities or their equivalent to the lender on a determined or determinable future date. A person shall be deemed to own a security if: (1) he or his agent has title to it; (2) he has purchased, or has entered into an unconditional contract, binding on both parties thereto, to purchase it and has not yet received it; (3) he owns a security convertible into or exchangeable for it and has tendered such security for conversion or exchange; (4) he has an option to purchase or acquire it and has exercised such option; or (5) he has rights or warrants to subscribe to it and has exercised such rights or warrants provided, however, that a person shall be deemed to own securities only to the extent he has a net long position in such securities."

No broker or dealer will accept a long sale order from a customer, unless he has made a determination that the customer owns the security and will deliver in good deliverable form within three business days of the execution of the order. The determination must include a notation on the order ticket at the time the order is taken which reflects the conversation with the customer as to the present location of the securities, whether they are in good deliverable form, and the customer's ability to make delivery.[1]

No broker or dealer is to use any facility of a securities exchange to effect a short sale of any security unless (1) at a price higher than the last sale or (2) at the price of the sale if and only if that price is above the next preceding different sale price on such day.[2]

Likewise, no person will, directly or indirectly, by the use of any facility of a securities exchange, effect a short sale in a security registered or listed on any securities exchange, where the seller does not intend to make delivery of the securities within the period specified in the contract. Failure on the part of the seller to make delivery on such date will be taken by the SEC as prima facie evidence of the lack of intention on his part to make such delivery.[3]

A contract involving a short sale which has not resulted in a delivery by the broker dealer within the settlement period must be closed by the broker dealer by purchasing for cash or guaranteed delivery securities of like kind and quantity on the next business day after settlement date, unless such purchase cannot be effected within said period for justifiable reasons in which case, notification in writing shall be made with the exchange and the SEC.[4]

A director, officer or principal stockholder of a corporation is prohibited from making a short sale in securities of the corporation in which he is a director, officer or principal stockholder.[5]

A broker dealer must maintain and keep up-to-date ledgers and record complete details of all short selling transactions.[6]

The SEC can prohibit short selling in the exchange indefinitely or for such period of time as it may deem necessary or advisable for the protection of investors.[7]

§ PH:20 Tender offers, mergers and acquisitions—Tender offers

Under SRC Rule 19.2.1, any person or group of persons acting in concert, who intends to acquire 15% of equity securities in a public company in one or more transactions within a period of 12 months, must file a declaration to that effect with the SEC.

Any person or group of persons acting in concert, who intends to acquire 35% of the outstanding voting shares in a public company, or such number of outstanding shares sufficient to gain control of the board in a public company, in one or more transactions within a period of 12 months, must disclose such intention and contemporaneously make a tender offer for the percentage sought to all holders of such shares within such period.[1]

In the event that the tender offer is oversubscribed, the aggregate amount of securities to be acquired at the close of such tender offer must be proportionately distributed across the selling shareholders with whom the acquirer may have been in private negotiations and the other shareholders.[2] The last sale meeting the threshold will not be consummated until the closing and completion of the tender offer.[3]

If any acquisition will result in ownership of over 50% of the total outstanding equity securities of a public company, the acquirer will be required to make a tender offer for all the outstanding equity securities to all remaining stockholders of the said company at a price supported by a fairness opinion provided by an independent financial advisor or equivalent third party. The acquirer in such a tender offer must accept any and all securities thus tendered.[4]

Any person or group of persons acting in concert, who intends to acquire directly from one or more stockholders of a public company 35% of the outstanding voting shares in such company, or such number of outstanding voting shares sufficient to gain control of the board in such company, must make a tender offer for all the outstanding voting shares in such company. The sale of the shares pursuant to the private transaction or block sale must not be completed prior to the closing and completion of the tender offer.[5]

Under SRC Rule 19.2.3, any person or group of persons acting in concert, intending to acquire through the exchange trading system 35% of the outstanding shares in a public company, or such number of outstanding voting shares sufficient to gain control of the board in such company, will not be required to make a tender offer even if such person or group acquire the remainder through a block sale if, after acquisition through the exchange trading system, such person or group fails to acquire 35% or such number of voting shares sufficient to gain control of the board in such company.

The mandatory tender offer requirement will not apply to the following:

i. purchase of shares from the unissued capital stock, provided that the acquisition will not result in a 50% or more ownership of shares by the purchaser or such percentage sufficient to gain control of the board;

ii. any purchase of shares from an increase in authorized capital stock;

iii. purchase in connection with foreclosure proceedings involving a duly constituted pledge or security arrangement where the acquisition is made by the debtor or creditor;

iv. purchases in connection with privatization undertaken by the Philippine government;

v. purchases in connection with corporate rehabilitation under court supervision;

vi. purchases in the open market at the prevailing market price;

vii. merger or consolidation.[6]

§ PH:21 Tender offers, mergers and acquisitions—Mergers and consolidations

A merger or consolidation must be approved by the constituent corporations. The basic procedural steps are as follows:

1. The constituent corporations must prepare a plan of merger or consolidation.

2. The plan of merger or consolidation is submitted to the board of directors of each constituent corporation for approval.

3. The plan is also submitted to the shareholders of the constituent corporations for approval in a meeting called for that purpose. The affirmative vote of the shareholders holding at least two-thirds of the outstanding shares is necessary to approve the merger or consolidation.

4. The articles of merger or consolidation is then executed by each of the constituent corporations.[1]

Dissenting stockholders may exercise their appraisal right, unless the plan is abandoned.[2] In practice, they may exercise this right only after the plan is approved.

The SEC has to approve the articles of merger or consolidation. In the case of a consolidation, the articles of incorporation and by-laws of the new corporation, and all documents or papers required for incorporation of the new corporation, must be submitted to the SEC for the registration of the new corporation. Once approved, the SEC issues to the new corporation a certificate of merger or consolidation, as the case may be.[3]

Upon approval by the SEC of the articles of merger or consolidation, the merger or consolidation will have the following effects:

(a) The constituent corporations will become a single corporation which, in case of merger, will be the surviving corporation designated in the plan of merger, while in case of consolidation, will be the consolidated corporation designated in the plan of consolidation;

(b) The separate existence of the constituent corporations will cease, except that of the surviving or the consolidated corporation;

(c) The surviving or the consolidated corporation will possess all the rights, privileges, immunities and powers and will be subject to all the duties and liabilities of a corporation organized under the Revised Corporation Code;

(d) The surviving or the consolidated corporation will possess all the rights, privileges, immunities and franchises of each of the constituent corporations; and all property, real or personal, and all receivables due on whatever account, including subscriptions to shares and other choses in action, and all and every other interest of, or belonging to, or due to each constituent corporation, will be deemed transferred to and vested in such surviving or consolidated corporation without further act or deed; and

(e) The surviving or consolidated corporation will be responsible and liable for all the liabilities and obligations of each of the constituent corporations in the same manner as if such surviving or consolidated corporation had itself incurred such liabilities or obligations; and any pending claim, action or proceeding brought by or against any of such constituent corporations may be prosecuted by or against the surviving or consolidated corporation. The rights of creditors or liens upon the property of any such constituent corporations will not be impaired by such merger or consolidation.[4]

Under the Philippine Competition Act, parties to a merger or acquisition agreement whose transaction value exceeds P1,000,000,000.00 are prohibited from consummating their agreement until 30 days after providing notification to the Philippine Competition Commission in the prescribed form. An agreement consummated in breach of this requirement will be considered void and subject the parties to a fine of 1% to 5% of the value of the transaction.

§ PH:22 Examination of accounts

The accounts and other records of specified types of entities, including every exchange, broker and dealer is subject to reasonable periodic, special or other examinations by the SEC. This power may be exercised by the SEC when it deems such an examination necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

§ PH:23 International securities transactions—In general

A foreign company may not carry on business in the Philippines unless it is licensed to do so under the Revised Corporation Code and has obtained a certificate of authority from the appropriate government agency.[1]

There are no restrictions on the licensing of foreign brokers or dealers to carry on business in the Philippines.

§ PH:24 International securities transactions—Stock exchange listing of foreign securities

Foreign securities may be listed on the PSE.

§ PH:25 International securities transactions—Naturalization of companies

Executive Order No. 226, otherwise known as the Omnibus Investments Code of 1987, granted certain fiscal and non-fiscal incentives to registered foreign-owned companies. These foreign-owned companies must undertake to increase, within 30 years from the date of registration or for such longer period as the Board of Investments may prescribe, their Philippine participation to a minimum of 60% of the outstanding and voting capital stock.

Certain companies, such as those engaged in telecommunications or banking, are required to go partially public after a certain period of time.

§ PH:26 International securities transactions—Foreign investment regulation

Foreign investment regulation in the Philippines is governed by Republic Act No. 7042 (as amended), otherwise known as the Foreign Investments Act of 1991 ("FIA").

Under the FIA, non-Philippine nationals may own up to 100% of the equity of a domestic enterprise, unless foreign participation in the proposed business activity is prohibited or limited by the Negative List.

§ PH:27 Investment companies

An "investment company" is "any issuer which is or holds itself out as being engaged primarily, or proposes to engage primarily, in the business of investing, reinvesting and trading in securities."[1]

Two types of investment companies are recognized under the Investment Company Act: the open-ended company, which offers for sale or has outstanding redeemable shares of which it is the issuer; and the close-ended company.

Shares of an investment company must be registered with the SEC under the Investment Company Act.

§ PH:28 Broker, dealers and others authorized to trade in securities

One way of protecting the investing public is to require securities market professionals to register with the SEC, so that the SEC can pass upon their qualifications and supervise their activities.

§ PH:29 Broker, dealers and others authorized to trade in securities—Licensing

A person may not engage in the business of buying or selling securities in the Philippines as a broker or dealer, or act as a salesman, or an associated person of any broker or dealer, unless registered as such with the SEC.[1]

Brokers and dealers are required to file an application using SEC Form 28-BD. On the other hand, an application for registration as a salesman or an associated person must be filed on SEC Form 28-S or Form 28-AP, as the case may be.

Those found to be qualified to act as a broker, dealer, salesman or an associated person are recorded in the Register of Securities Market Professionals. The Register is kept in the offices of the SEC, and is open to public inspection.[2]

§ PH:30 Broker, dealers and others authorized to trade in securities—Restrictions on Brokers and Dealers

No broker or dealer is to deal in or otherwise buy or sell, for its own account or for the account of customers, securities listed on an exchange issued by any corporation where any stockholder, director, associated person or salesman, or authorized clerk of said broker or dealer and all the relatives of the foregoing within the fourth civil degree of consanguinity or affinity, is at the time holding office in said issuer corporation as a director, president, vice-president, manager, treasurer, comptroller, secretary or any office of trust and responsibility, or is a controlling person of the issuer.[1]

A broker or dealer also cannot effect any transaction in securities or induce or attempt to induce the purchase or sale of any security except in compliance with such rules and regulations as the SEC may prescribe to ensure fair and honest dealings in securities and provide financial safeguards and other standards for the operation of brokers and dealers, including the establishment of minimum net capital requirements, the acceptance of custody and use of securities of customers, and the carrying and use of deposits and credit balances of customers.[2]

The guiding principle in the conduct of business of a broker or dealer is to "observe high standards of commercial honor and just and equitable principles of trade." In this connection, SRC Rule 30.2.1.2 sets forth certain principles and requirements that incorporate standards of the International Organization of Securities Commissions. In summary fashion, they refer to:

- Honesty and fairness—A registered person should act honestly, fairly and in the best interest of his client and for the integrity of the market.

- Diligence—He should act with due skill, care and diligence, in the best interest of his client and for the integrity of the market.

- Capabilities—He should have and employ effectively the resources and procedures that are needed for the proper performance of his business activities.

- Information about clients—He should seek from his clients information about their financial situation, investment experience and objectives relative to the services to be provided, pursuant to the Customer Account Information Rule (SRC Rule 52.1.6) and other applicable laws.

- Information for clients—He should make adequate disclosure of material information in his dealings with his client. A written agreement complying with SRC Rule 30.2.12.5, must be signed with his client before the provision of any service.

- Conflicts of interest—He should avoid conflicts of interest and, when they cannot be avoided, should ensure that his clients are fairly treated and properly informed of such conflicts.

- Compliance—He should comply with all regulatory requirements applicable to the conduct of his business activities so as to promote the best interest of clients and the integrity of the market.

A member-broker is generally prohibited from engaging in "proprietary trading" on an exchange, i.e., dealing for his own account, the account of his associated person, or an account wherein he or his associated person has investment discretion.[3]

Under SRC Rule 48.1, a broker or dealer must not extend to a customer credit in excess of 50% of the current value of the security at the time of the transaction, and no new or additional credit can be extended if the equity in an account is less than P50,000. The margin must not be less than (i) 25% of the current value of all securities "long" in the account and (ii) 30% of the current value of all securities "short" in the account.

The SEC issued Memorandum Circular No. 7 (Series of 2024) removing the minimum amount of commission charged by stockbrokers to their customers for each transaction.

§ PH:31 Broker, dealers and others authorized to trade in securities—Disciplinary proceedings

The SEC may revoke the registration of a broker or dealer, or his salesmen and associated persons, if, after reasonable notice and hearing, the SEC determines that, among other things:

- There was a violation of any provision of the SRC or the SRC Rules.
- A materially false or misleading statement was made in the application for registration or report filed with the SEC or a self-regulatory organization.
- The registrant has been convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude, fraud, embezzlement, forgery, bribery, perjury or a violation of securities, commodities, banking, real estate or insurance laws.
- The registrant has been judicially declared insolvent.[1]

The SEC may order the suspension of the registration pending the hearing. The suspension is to be kept confidential, unless the order of suspension has been violated after notice.[2]

§ PH:32 Civil and criminal liability—Civil liability

The following persons may be held civilly liable for making material misstatements or omissions in a registration statement:

- The issuer and every person who signed the registration statement.

- A director of the issuer at the time of the filing of the registration statement.

- A person named in the registration statement as about to become a director and whose written consent thereto is filed with the registration statement.

- Each auditor or auditing firm named as having certified the financial statements used in connection with the registration statement or prospectus.

- Each of the underwriters.

- Any person who, with his written consent, has been named as having prepared or certified any part of the registration statement or any report or valuation used in connection with the registration statement.

- Every selling shareholder who contributed to and certified as to the accuracy of a portion of the registration statement, with respect to that portion.[1]

Any buyer who was unaware of the material misstatement or omission made in connection with the purchase or sale of such security may sue. Reliance on the registration statement is not required, unless the issuer has made available to its security holders an income statement covering at least a period of 12 months from the effectivity of the registration statement, and the suing party acquired the securities after such income statement became available. Privity of contract with the issuer is not necessary.[2]

The buyer may recover an amount of damages up to triple the amount of the transaction plus actual damages. In addition, exemplary damages may be awarded in cases of bad faith, fraud, malevolence or wantonness, and attorney's fees may be awarded in an amount not exceeding 30% of the award.[3]

A person who offers to sell or sells a security, whether or not exempted by the SRC, by means of a prospectus or oral communication that includes an untrue statement of a material fact or omits to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements actually made, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading, and who fails to prove he did not know, and in the exercise of reasonable care could not have known, of the untruth or omission, is liable to a purchaser of the security if the purchaser did not know of the untruth or omission. The amount recoverable is the consideration paid for the security, with interest, less the amount of any income received, upon the tender of the security, or for damages if the purchaser no longer owns the security.[4]

A person similarly may be liable for a false or misleading statement in a report or other document filed under the SRC to a purchaser or seller of a security who relied on the false or misleading statement to the extent of the damages caused by the reliance. The person sued can, however, avoid liability by proving that he acted in good faith and did not know that such statement was false or misleading.[5]

The SRC also provides for civil liability for fraud in connection with securities transactions, the manipulation of security prices, and insider trading.[6]

§ PH:33 Civil and criminal liability—Criminal liability

Any person who violates any of the provisions of the SRC or the SRC Rules or who, in a registration statement filed under the SRC, makes any untrue statement of a material fact or omits to state any material fact required to be stated or necessary to make the statements in the registration statement not misleading is liable for a fine of at least P50,000 and not more than P5,000,000 or imprisonment of between 7 and 21 years, or both. If the offender is a corporation, partnership, association or other entity, the penalty may be imposed on the entity and on its officers.[1]

V. RECENT TRENDS

§ PH:34 Generally

The SEC has been seriously implementing the provisions of the SRC, in line with the following state policies declared in SRC Section 2: (i) establishment of a socially conscious, free market that regulates itself, (ii) encouragement of the widest participation of ownership in enterprises, (iii) enhancement of the democratization of wealth, (iv) promotion of capital market development, (v) protection of investors, (vi) ensuring full and fair disclosure about securities, and (vii) minimization, if not total elimination, of insider trading and other fraudulent or manipulative devices and practices that create distortions in the free market.

In this connection, the SEC promulgated the Rules and Regulations on Alternative Trading System (March 4, 2004), pursuant to its mandate "to encourage competitiveness in the market, promote the development of capital market and to ensure the protection of investors." An ATS seeks to provide an electronic market place or facility for bringing together, among others, "secondary market sellers and buyers of securities of SEC-registered small, medium, growth, venture enterprises, and technology-based ventures."[1] The SEC also issued the Rules Governing the Over-the-Counter Market (October 27, 2006), the Rules on Securities Borrowing and Lending (June 9, 2009), and the 2015 Implementing Rules and Regulations of the Securities Regulation Code (August 4, 2015).

It is noteworthy that the SRC addresses the three objectives of securities regulation, as articulated by the International Organization of Securities Commissions, namely: the protection of investors; ensuring that markets are fair, efficient and transparent; and the reduction of systemic risks. In fact, a joint mission of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund conducted a Financial Sector Assessment Program in respect of the Philippines in 2001, "to assess the effectiveness of securities regulation, soundness of market intermediaries, and development prospects for the capital markets, including observance of the IOSCO Objectives and Principles of Securities Regulation." It appears from the report of the mission that: "Overall, the Philippines scores very well against the IOSCO Principles thanks to the conscious efforts having been made in the recent past. Some improvements are needed in the areas of collective investment schemes and the secondary market regulation. Remaining issues in other areas are either currently being addressed or relatively minor."[2]

Any person applying for an exemption under this Section, shall file with the Commission a notice identifying the exemption relied upon on such form and at such time as the Commission by rule may prescribe and with such notice shall pay to the Commission a fee equivalent to one-tenth (1/10) of one percent (1%) of the maximum aggregate price or issued value of the securities.

SEC. 11. Commodity Futures Contracts.

No person shall offer, sell or enter into commodity futures contracts except in accordance with rules, regulations and orders the Commission may prescribe in the public interest. The registration statement shall include any prospectus required or permitted to be delivered under Subsections 8.2, 8.3 and 8.4.

12.2. In promulgating rules governing the content of any registration statement (including any prospectus made a part thereof or annexed thereto), the Commission may require the registration statement to contain such information or documents as it may, by rule, prescribe. It may dispense with any such requirement, or may require additional information or documents, including written information from an expert, depending on the necessity thereof or their applicability to the class of securities sought to be registered.

12.3. The information required for the registration of any kind, and all securities, shall include, among others, the effect of the securities issue on ownership, on the mix of ownership, especially foreign and local ownership.

12.4. The registration statement shall be signed by the issuer's executive officer, its principal operating officer, its principal financial officer, its comptroller, principal accounting officer, its corporate secretary or persons performing similar functions accompanied by a duly verified resolution of the board of directors of the issuer corporation. The written consent of the expert named as having certified any part of the registration statement or any document used in connection therewith shall also be filed. Where the registration statement includes shares to be sold by selling shareholders, a written certification by such selling shareholders as to the accuracy of any part of the registration statement contributed to by such selling shareholders shall also be filed.

12.5. a) Upon filing of the registration statement, the issuer shall pay to the Commission a fee of not more than one-tenth (1/10) of one per centum (1%) of the maximum aggregate price at which such securities are proposed to be offered. The Commission shall prescribe by rule diminishing fees in inverse proportion to the value of the aggregate price of the offering.

b) Notice of the filing of the registration statement shall be immediately published by the issuer, at its own expense, in two (2) newspapers of general circulation in the Philippines, once a week for two (2) consecutive weeks, or in such other manner as the Commission by rule shall prescribe, reciting that a registration statement for the sale of such security has been filed, and that the aforesaid registration statement, as well as the papers attached thereto are open to inspection at the Commission during business hours, and copies thereof, photostatic or otherwise, shall be furnished to interested parties at such reasonable charge as the Commission may prescribe.

12.6. The Commission shall enter an order declaring the registration statement to be effective if it finds that the registration statement together with all the other papers and documents attached thereto, is on its face complete and that the requirements have been complied with. The Commission may impose such terms and conditions as may be necessary or appropriate for the protection of the investors.

12.7. Upon effectivity of the registration statement, the issuer shall state under oath in every prospectus that all registration requirements have been met and that all information are true and correct as represented by the issuer or the one making the statement. Any untrue statement of fact or omission to state a material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statement therein not misleading shall constitute fraud.

SEC. 13. Rejection and Revocation of Registration of Securities.

13.1. The Commission may reject a registration statement and refuse registration of the security thereunder, or revoke the effectivity of a registration statement and the registration of the security thereunder after due notice and hearing by issuing an order to such effect, setting forth its findings in respect thereto, if it finds that:

a) The issuer:

(i) Has been judicially declared insolvent;

(ii) Has violated any of the provisions of this Code, the rules promulgated pursuant thereto, or any order of the Commission of which the issuer has notice in connection with the offering for which a registration statement has been filed;

(iii) Has been or is engaged or is about to engage in fraudulent transactions;

(iv) Has made any false or misleading representation of material facts in any prospectus concerning the issuer or its securities;

(v) Has failed to comply with any requirement that the Commission may impose as a condition for registration of the security for which the registration statement has been filed; or

b) The registration statement is on its face incomplete or inaccurate in any material respect or includes any untrue statement of a material fact or omits to state a material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading; or

c) The issuer, any officer, director or controlling person of the issuer, or person performing similar functions, or any underwriter has been convicted, by a competent judicial or administrative body, upon plea of guilty, or otherwise, of an offense involving moral turpitude and/or fraud or is enjoined or restrained by the Commission or other competent judicial or administrative body for violations of securities, commodities, and other related laws.

For purposes of this subsection, the term "competent judicial or administrative body" shall include a foreign court of competent jurisdiction as provided for under the Rules of Court.

13.2. The Commission may compel the production of all the books and papers of such issuer, and may administer oaths to, and examine the officers of such issuer or any other person connected therewith as to its business and affairs.

13.3. If any issuer shall refuse to permit an examination to be made by the Commission, its refusal shall be ground for the refusal or revocation of the registration of its securities.

13.4. If the Commission deems it necessary, it may issue an order suspending the offer and sale of the securities pending any investigation. The order shall state the grounds for taking such action, but such order of suspension although binding upon the persons notified thereof, shall be deemed confidential, and shall not be published. Upon the issuance of the suspension order, no further offer or sale of such security shall be made until the same is lifted or set aside by the Commission. Otherwise, such sale shall be void.

13.5. Notice of issuance of such order shall be given to the issuer and every dealer and broker who shall have notified the Commission of an intention to sell such security.

13.6. A registration statement may be withdrawn by the issuer only with the consent of the Commission.

SEC. 14. Amendments to the Registration Statement.

14.1. If a registration statement is on its face incomplete or inaccurate in any material respect, the Commission shall issue an order directing the amendment of the registration statement. Upon compliance with such order, the amended registration statement shall become effective in accordance with the procedure mentioned in Subsection 12.6 hereof.

14.2. An amendment filed prior to the effective date of the registration statement shall recommence the forty-five (45) day period within which the Commission shall act on a registration statement. An amendment filed after the effective date of the registration statement shall become effective only upon such date as determined by the Commission.

14.3. If any change occurs in the facts set forth in a registration statement, the issuer shall file an amendment thereto setting forth the change.

14.4. If, at any time, the Commission finds that a registration statement contains any false statement or omits to state any fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading, the Commission may conduct an examination, and, after due notice and hearing, issue an Order suspending the effectivity of the registration statement. If the statement is duly amended, the suspension order may be lifted.

14.5. In making such examination the Commission or any officer or officers designated by it may administer oaths and affirmations and shall have access to, and may demand the production of, any books, records or documents relevant to the examination. Failure of the issuer, underwriter, or any other person to cooperate, or his obstruction or refusal to undergo an examination, shall be a ground for the issuance of a suspension order.

SEC. 15. Suspension of Registration.

15.1. If, at any time, the information contained in the registration statement filed is or has become misleading, incorrect, inadequate or incomplete in any material respect, or the sale or offering for sale of the security registered thereunder may work or tend to work a fraud, the Commission may require from the issuer such further information as may in its judgment be necessary to enable the Commission to ascertain whether the registration of such security should be revoked on any ground specified in this Code. The Commission may also suspend the right to sell and offer for sale such security pending further investigation, by entering an order specifying the grounds for such action, and by notifying the issuer, underwriter, dealer or broker known as participating in such offering.

15.2. The refusal to furnish information required by the Commission may be a ground for the issuance of an order of suspension pursuant to Subsection 15.1. Upon the issuance of any such order and notification to the issuer, underwriter, dealer or broker known as participating in such offering, no further offer or sale of any such security shall be made until the same is lifted or set aside by the Commission. Otherwise, such sale shall be void.

15.3. Upon issuance of an order of suspension, the Commission shall conduct a hearing. If the Commission determines that the sale of any security should be revoked, it shall issue an order prohibiting sale of such security. Until the issuance of a final order, the suspension of the right to sell, though binding upon the persons notified thereof, shall be deemed confidential, and shall not be published, unless it shall appear that the order of suspension has been violated after notice. If, however, the Commission finds that the sale of the security will neither be fraudulent nor result in fraud, it shall forthwith issue an order revoking the order of suspension, and such security shall be restored to its status as a registered security as of the date of such order of suspension.

CHAPTER IV REGULATION OF PRE-NEED PLANS

SEC. 16. Pre-Need Plans.

40.6. a) A self-regulatory organization is authorized to discipline a member of or participant in such self-regulatory organization, or any person associated with a member, including the suspension or expulsion of such member or participant, and the suspension or bar from being associated with a member, if such person has engaged in acts or practices inconsistent with just and equitable principles of fair trade or in willful violation of any provision of the Code, any other law administered by the Commission, the rules or regulations thereunder, or the rules of the self-regulatory organization. In any disciplinary proceeding by a self-regulatory organization (other than a summary proceeding pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection) the self-regulatory organization shall bring specific charges, provide notice to the person charged, afford the person charged with an opportunity to defend against the charges, and keep a record of the proceedings. A determination to impose a disciplinary sanction shall be supported by a written statement of the offense, a summary of the evidence presented and a statement of the sanction imposed.

b) A self-regulatory organization may summarily: (i) Suspend a member, participant or person associated with a member who has been or is expelled or suspended from any other self-regulatory organization; or (ii) Suspend a member who the self-regulatory organization finds to be in such financial or operating difficulty that the member or participant cannot be permitted to continue to do business as a member with safety to investors, creditors, other members, participants or the self-regulatory organization: Provided, That the self-regulatory organization immediately notifies the Commission of the action taken. Any person aggrieved by a summary action pursuant to this paragraph shall be promptly afforded an opportunity for a hearing by the association in accordance with the provisions of paragraph a) of this subsection. The Commission, by order, may stay a summary action on its own motion or upon application by any person aggrieved thereby, if the Commission determines summarily or after due notice and hearing (which hearing may consist solely of the submission of affidavits or presentation of oral arguments) that a stay is consistent with the public interest and the protection of investors.

40.7. A self-regulatory organization shall promptly notify the Commission of any disciplinary sanction on any member thereof or participant therein, any denial of membership or participation in such organization, or the imposition of any disciplinary sanction on a person associated with a member or a bar of such person from becoming so associated. Within thirty (30) days after such notice, any aggrieved person may appeal to the Commission from, or the Commission on its own motion within such period, may institute review of, the decision of the self-regulatory organization, at the conclusion of which, after due notice and hearing (which may consist solely of review of the record before the self-regulatory organization), the Commission shall affirm, modify or set aside the sanction. In such proceeding the Commission shall determine whether the aggrieved person has engaged or omitted to engage in the acts and practices as found by the self-regulatory organization, whether such acts and practices constitute willful violations of this Code, any other law administered by the Commission, the rules or regulations thereunder, or the rules of the self-regulatory organization as specified by such organization, whether such provisions were applied in a manner consistent with the purposes of this Code, and whether, with due regard for the public interest and the protection of investors the sanction is excessive or oppressive.

40.8. The powers of the Commission under this section shall apply to organized exchanges and registered clearing agencies.

CHAPTER XI ACQUISITION AND TRANSFER OF SECURITIES AND SETTLEMENT OF TRANSACTIONS IN SECURITIES

SEC. 41. Prohibition on Use of Unregistered Clearing Agency.

It shall be unlawful for any broker, dealer, salesman, associated person of a broker or dealer, or clearing agency, directly or indirectly, to make use of any facility of a clearing agency in the Philippines to make deliveries in connection with transactions in securities or to reduce the number of settlements of securities transactions or to allocate securities settlement responsibilities or to provide for the central handling of securities so that transfers, loans and pledges and similar transactions can be made by bookkeeping entry or otherwise to facilitate the settlement of securities transactions without physical delivery of securities certificates, unless such clearing agency is registered as such under Section 42 of this Code or is exempted from such registration upon application by the clearing agency because, in the opinion of the Commission, by reason of the limited volume of transactions which are settled using the clearing agency, it is not practicable and not necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors to require such registration.

SEC. 42. Registration of Clearing Agencies.

42.1. Any clearing agency may be registered as such with the Commission under the terms and conditions hereinafter provided in this Section, by filing an application for registration in such form and containing such information and supporting documents as the Commission by rule shall prescribe, including the following:

b) A fair procedure for the disciplining of participants, the denial of participation rights to any person seeking to be a participant, and the prohibition or limitation of any person from access to services offered by the clearing agency;

c) The equitable allocation of reasonable dues, fees, and other charges among participants;

d) Prevention of fraudulent and manipulative acts and practices, promotion of just and quitable principles of trade, and, in general, protection of investors and the public interest; and

e) The transparent, prompt and accurate clearance and settlement of transactions in securities handled by the clearing agency.

f) The establishment and oversight of a fund to guarantee the prompt and accurate clearance and settlement of transactions executed on an exchange, including a requirement that members each contribute an amount based on their volume and a relevant percentage of the daily exposure of the four (4) largest trading brokers which adequately reflects trading risks undertaken or pursuant to another formula set forth in Commission rules or regulations or order, upon application: Provided, however, That a clearing agency engaged in the business of a securities depository shall be exempt from this requirement.

42.3. In the case of an application filed pursuant to this Section, the Commission shall grant registration if it finds that the requirements of this Code and the rules and regulations thereunder with respect to the applicant have been satisfied, and shall deny registration if it does not make such finding.

42.4. Upon appropriate application in accordance with the rules and regulations of the Commission and upon such terms as the Commission may deem necessary for the protection of investors, a clearing agency may withdraw its registration or suspend its operation or resume the same.

42.5. Section 32 of this Code shall apply to every registered clearing agency.

SEC. 43. Uncertificated Securities.

Notwithstanding Section 63 of the Corporation Code of the Philippines:

43.1. A corporation whose securities are registered pursuant to this Code or listed on a securities Exchange may:

a) If so resolved by its Board of Directors and agreed by a shareholder, investor or securities intermediary, issue shares to, or record the transfer of some or all of its shares into the name of said shareholders, investors or, securities intermediary in the form of uncertificated securities. b) If so provided in its articles of incorporation and by-laws, issue all of the shares of a particular class in the form of uncertificated securities and subject to a condition that investors may not require the corporation to issue a certificate in respect of any shares recorded in their name.

43.2. The Commission by rule may allow other corporations to provide in their articles of incorporation and by-laws for the use of uncertificated securities.

43.3. Transfers of securities, including an uncertificated securities, may be validly made and consummated by appropriate book-entries in the securities accounts maintained by securities intermediaries, or in the stock and transfer book held by the corporation or the stock transfer agent and such bookkeeping entries shall be binding on the parties to the transfer. A transfer under this subsection has the effect of the delivery of a security in bearer form or duly indorsed in blank representing the quantity or amount of security or right transferred, including the unrestricted negotiability of that security by reason of such delivery. However, transfer of uncertificated shares shall only be valid, so far as the corporation is concerned, when a transfer is recorded in the books of the corporation so as to show the names of the parties to the transfer and the number of shares transferred.

However, nothing in this Code shall preclude compliance by banking and other institutions under the supervision of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas and their stockholders with the applicable ceilings on shareholdings prescribed under pertinent banking laws and regulations.

SEC. 44. Evidentiary Value of Clearing Agency Record.

The official records and book entries of a clearing agency shall constitute the best evidence of such transactions between clearing agency and its participants and members, without prejudice to the right of participants' or members' clients to prove their rights, title and entitlement with respect to the book-entry security holdings of the participants or members held on behalf of the clients. However, the corporation shall not be bound by the foregoing transactions unless the corporate secretary is duly notified in such manner as the Commission may provide.

SEC. 45. Pledging a Security or Interest Therein.

In addition to other methods recognized by law, a pledge of, or release of a pledge of, a security, including an uncertificated security, is properly constituted and the instrument proving the right pledged shall be considered delivered to the creditor under Articles 2093 and 2095 of the Civil Code if a securities intermediary indicates by book-entry that such security has been credited to a specially designated pledge account in favor of the pledgee. A pledge under this subsection has the effect of the delivery of a security in bearer form or duly indorsed in blank representing the quantity or amount of such security or right pledged. In the case of a registered clearing agency, the procedures by which, and the exact time at which, such book-entries are created shall be governed by the registered clearing agency's rules. However, the corporation shall not be bound by the foregoing transactions unless the corporate secretary is duly notified in such manner as the Commission may provide.

SEC. 46. Issuer's Responsibility for Wrongful Transfer to Registered Clearing Agency.

The registration of a transfer of a security into the name of and by a registered clearing agency or its nominee shall be final and conclusive unless the clearing agency had notice of an adverse claim before the registration was made. The above provision shall be without prejudice to any rights which the claimant may have against the issuer for wrongful registration in such circumstances.

SEC. 47. Power of the Commission With Respect to Securities Ownership.

The Commission is authorized, having due regard to the public interest and the protection of investors, to promulgate rules and regulations which:

47.1. Validate the transfer of securities by book-entries rather than the delivery of physical certificates;

47.2. Establish when a person acquires a security or an interest therein and when delivery of a security to a purchaser occurs;

CHAPTER XII MARGIN AND CREDIT

SEC. 48. Margin Requirements.

48.1. For the purpose of preventing the excessive use of credit for the purchase or carrying of securities, the Commission, in accordance with the credit and monetary policies that may be promulgated from time to time by the Monetary Board of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas, shall prescribe rules and regulations with respect to the amount of credit that may be extended on any security. For the extension of credit, such rules and regulations shall be based upon the following standard:

An amount not greater than whichever is the higher of—

a) Sixty-five per centum (65%) of the current market price of the security, or

b) One hundred per centum (100%) of the lowest market price of the security during the preceding thirty-six (36) calendar months, but not more than seventy-five per centum (75%) of the current market price.

However, the Monetary Board may increase or decrease the above percentages, in order to achieve the objectives of the Government with due regard for promotion of the economy and prevention of the use of excessive credit.

Such rules and regulations may make appropriate provision with respect to the carrying of undermargined accounts for limited periods and under specified conditions; the withdrawal of funds or securities; the transfer of accounts from one lender to another; special or different margin requirements for delayed deliveries, short sales, arbitrage transactions, and securities to which letter (b) of the second paragraph of this subsection does not apply; the bases and the methods to be used in calculating loans, and margins and market prices; and similar administrative adjustments and details.

48.2. No member of an Exchange or broker or dealer shall, directly or indirectly, extend or maintain credit or arrange for the extension or maintenance of credit to or for any customer:

a) On any security unless such credit is extended and maintained in accordance with the rules and regulations which the Commission shall prescribe under this Section including rules setting credit in relation to net capital of such member, broker or dealer;

b) Without collateral or on any collateral other than securities, except (i) to maintain a credit initially extended in conformity with the rules and regulations of the Commission and (ii) in cases where the extension or maintenance of credit is not for the purpose of purchasing or carrying securities or of evading or circumventing the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection.

48.3. Any person not subject to Subsection 48.2 hereof shall extend or maintain credit or arrange for the extension or maintenance of credit for the purpose of purchasing or carrying any security, only in accordance with such rules and regulations as the Commission shall prescribe to prevent the excessive use of credit for the purchasing or carrying of or trading in securities in circumvention of the other provisions of this Section. Such rules and regulations may impose upon all loans made for the purpose of purchasing or carrying securities limitations similar to those imposed upon members, brokers, or dealers by Subsection 48.2 and the rules and regulations thereunder. This subsection and the rules and regulations thereunder shall not apply: (a) To a credit extension made by a person not in the ordinary course of business; (b) To a loan to a dealer to aid in the financing of the distribution of securities to customers not through the medium of an Exchange; or (c) To such other credit extension as the Commission shall exempt from the operation of this subsection and the rules and regulations thereunder upon specified terms and conditions or for stated period.

SEC. 49. Restrictions on Borrowings by Members, Brokers, and Dealers.

It shall be unlawful for any registered broker or dealer, or member of an Exchange, directly or indirectly:

49.1. To permit in the ordinary course of business as a broker or dealer his aggregate indebtedness including customers' credit balances, to exceed such percentage of the net capital (exclusive of fixed assets and value of Exchange membership) employed in the business, but not exceeding in any case two thousand per centum (2,000%), as the Commission may by rules and regulations prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

49.2. To pledge, mortgage, or otherwise encumber or arrange for the pledge, mortgage or encumbrance of any security carried for the account of any customer under circumstances: (a) That will permit the commingling of his securities, without his written consent, with the securities of any customer; (b) That will permit such securities to be commingled with the securities of any person other than a bona fide customer; or (c) That will permit such securities to be pledged, mortgaged or encumbered, or subjected to any lien or claim of the pledgee, for a sum in excess of the aggregate indebtedness of such customers in respect of such securities. However, the Commission, having due regard to the protection of investors, may, by rules and regulations, allow certain transactions that may otherwise be prohibited under this subsection.

49.3. To lend or arrange for the lending of any security carried for the account of any customer without the written consent of such customer or in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission shall prescribe.

SEC. 50. Enforcement of Margin Requirements and Restrictions on Borrowing.

To prevent indirect violations of the margin requirements under Section 48, the broker or dealer shall require the customer in non-margin transactions to pay the price of the security purchased for his account within such period as the Commission may prescribe, which shall in no case exceed the prescribed settlement date. Otherwise, the broker shall sell the security purchased starting on the next trading day but not beyond ten (10) trading days following the last day for the customer to pay such purchase price, unless such sale cannot be effected within said period for justifiable reasons. The sale shall be without prejudice to the right of the broker or dealer to recover any deficiency from the customer. To prevent indirect violation of the restrictions on borrowings under Section 49, the broker shall, unless otherwise directed by the customer, pay the net sales price of the securities sold for a customer within the same period as above prescribed by the Commission: Provided, That the customer shall be required to deliver the instruments evidencing the securities as a condition for such payment upon demand by the broker.

SEC. 52. Accounts and Records, Reports, Examination of Exchanges, Members, and Others.

52.1. Every registered Exchange, broker or dealer, transfer agent, clearing agency, securities association, and other self-regulatory organization, and every other person required to register under this Code, shall make, keep and preserve for such periods, records, furnish such copies thereof, and make such reports, as the Commission by its rules and regulations may prescribe. SEC. 53. Investigations, Injunctions and Prosecution of Offenses.

53.1. The Commission may, in its discretion, make such investigations as it deems necessary to determine whether any person has violated or is about to violate any provision of this Code, any rule, regulation or order thereunder, or any rule of an Exchange, registered securities association, clearing agency, other self-regulatory organization, and may require or permit any person to file with it a statement in writing, under oath or otherwise, as the Commission shall determine, as to all facts and circumstances concerning the matter to be investigated. The Commission may publish information concerning any such violations, and to investigate any fact, condition, practice or matter which it may deem necessary or proper to aid in the enforcement of the provisions of this Code, in the prescribing of rules and regulations thereunder, or in securing information to serve as a basis for recommending further legislation concerning the matters to which this Code relates: Provided, however, That any person requested or subpoenaed to produce documents or testify in any investigation shall simultaneously be notified in writing of the purpose of such investigation: Provided, further, That all criminal complaints for violations of this Code, and the implementing rules and regulations enforced or administered by the Commission shall be referred to the Department of Justice for preliminary investigation and prosecution before the proper court: Provided, furthermore, That in instances where the law allows independent civil or criminal proceedings of violations arising from the same act, the Commission shall take appropriate action to implement the same: Provided, finally, That the investigation, prosecution, and trial of such cases shall be given priority.

53.3. Whenever it shall appear to the Commission that any person has engaged or is about to engage in any act or practice constituting a violation of any provision of this Code, any rule, regulation or order thereunder, or any rule of an Exchange, registered securities association, clearing agency or other self-regulatory organization, it may issue an order to such person to desist from committing such act or practice: Provided, however, That the Commission shall not charge any person with violation of the rules of an Exchange or other self regulatory organization unless it appears to the Commission that such Exchange or other self-regulatory organization is unable or unwilling to take action against such person. After finding that such person has engaged in any such act or practice and that there is a reasonable likelihood of continuing, further or future violations by such person, the Commission may issue ex-parte a cease and desist order for a maximum period of ten (10) days, enjoining the violation and compelling compliance with such provision. The Commission may transmit such evidence as may be available concerning any violation of any provision of this Code, or any rule, regulation or order thereunder, to the Department of Justice, which may institute the appropriate criminal proceedings under this Code.

Such person shall be fined in such reasonable amount as the Commission may determine, or when such failure or refusal is a clear and open defiance of the Commission's order, decision or subpoena, shall be detained under an arrest order issued by the Commission, until such order, decision or subpoena is complied with.

SEC. 54. Administrative Sanctions.

54.1. 56.2. If the person who acquired the security did so after the issuer has made generally available to its security holders an income statement covering a period of at least twelve months beginning from the effective date of the registration statement, then the right of recovery under this subsection shall be conditioned on proof that such person acquired the security relying upon such untrue statement in the registration statement or relying upon the registration statement and not knowing of such income statement, but such reliance may be established without proof of the reading of the registration statement by such person.
