2026-2027 Edition Highlights

In 2024, the format of this set changed from a binder format to a pamphlet format. This should greatly improve the reader's experience in terms of filing pages within a limited binder system—allowing the work to easily expand as needed. Though the format has changed, customers are not being charged more for this format change. Subscribers will pay the same overall price that they would have been charged during the course of the year

This important work continues to provide authoritative analysis of the laws and regulations relating to federal tort claims. New features and recent developments in this release include many new cases on significant FTCA issues, including cases addressing:

- Sovereign immunity and its exceptions
- Statute of limitations and equitable tolling
- The discretionary function exception and its boundaries
- The judgement bar and its effect on related harms, alternate or duplicative claims
- Standard of appellate review

About the Author

Daniel A. Morris has a background that combines practical litigation experience with academic and judicial perspectives. He was appointed as a United States Immigration Judge in 2009. He served two one-year terms as a temporary Appellate Immigration Judge on the U.S. Court of Immigration Appeals (called the Board of Immigration Appeals) in Washington, DC, from 2018 to 2021. From 2009 to 2015 he was an Immigration Judge in Omaha, Nebraska, with jurisdiction over U.S. Immigration Court cases for all of Nebraska and Iowa. He now serves as an Immigration Judge in Hartford, Connecticut with jurisdiction over U.S. Immigration Court cases for all of Connecticut and the western half of Massachusetts.

Judge Morris formerly was Assistant Chief Counsel for the United States Department of Homeland Security. Before that he served for 15 years as an Assistant United States Attorney for the District of Nebraska, where he handled civil litigation including defense of Federal Tort Claims Act cases and criminal prosecutions. At other times he was a partner with the national law firm now known as Husch Blackwell, LLP, where he engaged in the general practice of law, and earlier was a Senior Corporate Counsel for the Mutual of Omaha Insurance Companies.

Judge Morris served as president of the Omaha Bar Association and served two terms as president of the Omaha chapter of the American Inns of Court, an organization dedicated to promoting civility, ethics, and professionalism in the practice of law. He is a former Adjunct Professor of Law at Creighton University School of Law, where he taught trial practice. He received JD and MBA degrees from Creighton University and a bachelor's degree from the University of Nebraska Omaha.

Judge Morris is the author of Federal Tort Claims and has written the annual supplement of this treatise since its publication in 1993. He now annually issues an updated volume of this treatise. His other publications by West®, a Thomson Reuters company, are Nebraska Trials, which was first published in 1995 and which he annually updates and reissues, and Connecticut Civil Practice Form, 4th Edition, a publication for which he wrote the 2022 update and the 5th Edition, a two-volume set first published in 2023. He is the author of a new edition of that publication each year. He has often lectured on law-related topics. He is the author of numerous law-related articles and is the recipient of his State Bar Foundation's "Shining Light Award" for his legal publications.

Judge Morris lives in Hartford, Connecticut, where he served for almost a decade on the Board of Trustees of the Mark Twain House and Museum. He has served in leadership roles for other community organizations. He is a member of the Nebraska and Hartford County Bar Associations.

This publication was prepared in Daniel Morris's personal capacity and does not necessarily represent the views of the United States Department of Justice or any other federal department or agency.
